STAKED HIS HEAD.

The Wager Sir William St. Clair Laid With King Robert Bruce.

Edwin Noble in "The Dog Lover's Book" recalls the historic story of the two famous deerhounds Help and Hold, a monument to which can be seen to this day at Rosslin chapel.

The legend is that King Robert Bruce while hunting upon the Pentland hills had several times started a white deer, but had hitherto been unable to capture it. It had always so quickly outdistanced his own hounds that he began to imagine that it was gifted with supernatural powers and could not be overtaken by mortal dogs. Naturally his nobles agreed with him, as there was no one bold enough to affirm that he owned hounds which were better than those possessed by his sovereign.

There was, however, one exception, William St. Clair, who wagered his head that his two favorite hounds, Zelp and Hold, would kill the deer before she crossed the Pentland brook. Bruce accepted the challenge and wagered the forest of Pentland moor against Sir William's head.

The white deer was roused by a couple of bloodhounds and given a fair start before St. Clair released his two favorites. After a long chase, followed by Sir William and Bruce on horseback, the deer reached the brook, and Sir William, feeling sure that he had lost his wager, prepared to give himself into the hands of Bruce, but before the deer could get farther than halfway across Hold had seized her, and, Help coming up at the same moment, they forced her to turn back. In the end she was killed within the stipulated boundary.

A German Title.

In the matter of titles the Germans show more courage than we do. On a card which reached London the other day the sender describes herself as Frau —— Rasiermesserbohischleifeldirektorswitwe. Would any English woman venture to describe herself as widow of the manager of the razor blade grinding works? When this was shown to a German friend he produced a card on which the sender was entitled "...staatsschuldentilgungsbureauausgeberswitwe," a description which she held to be her due as the widow of an official in the national debt office.—London Chronicle.

Had Bronchitis FOR YEARS

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold and it, if neglected, will surely turn into pneumonia. The first symptom is a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing and a feeling of oppression or tightness about the chest.

The phlegm raised from the bronchial tubes is at first of a light color, but as the disease progresses it becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often hard to raise.

Dr. Wood's Norway is just the remedy that you require as it loosens the phlegm and heals the lungs and bronchial tubes.

Mrs. Chas. Brean, Amherst, N. S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I found gave me instant relief. I think it is the best remedy for bronchitis that I know of. I now take care that I always have a bottle on hand."

"Dr. Wood's" is the genuine, put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

CROFTER TO MILLIONAIRE.

J. W. Stewart Now Possesses an Estate in His Old Home.

There lately arrived in London a man whose career provides yet another amazing illustration of the energy, perseverance, and shrewdness of the modern Scot. His name is Mr. John William Stewart, known in Canada as "Jack" Stewart, the millionaire railway contractor, says London Tit-Bits.

Four years ago he bought from the Duke of Sutherland 50,000 acres of the Sutherland estates, with an annual rent-roll of £2,500, which among other things included Mr. Stewart's birthplace, a tiny cottage at Drumbeg, in the parish of Assynt. A few months later Mr. Stewart bought from the Duke for £66,000 a further large tract of land in the parish of Assynt, which included house property, a deer forest, a sheep farm, and small holdings, with a rental of £2,700.

Yet it is not so many years ago since Mr. Stewart landed in Quebec with just 10s. in his pocket. This was after he had tried farming and engineering in Scotland, and decided that the Colonies offered him more scope for the realization of his ambitions. Obtaining work as a farm hand on a French-Canadian farm, he ultimately settled down in British Columbia with the money he had saved, where he found work on the railway. Afterwards he drifted to Montana, in the States, and made such good use of his opportunities that he was able to enter into partnership with two well-known Irish-American contractors, Foley and Walsh, which has since become one of the foremost firms of its kind in the West.

A patriot to the backbone, Mr. Stewart has utilised some of his wealth to equip a Highland regiment in British Columbia, where he is opening up a great new railroad, and has furthermore contributed £20,000 to the war funds.

"Rather than my country should be beaten in this great war," he says, "I will go back again to day labor and small wages where I began."

And there are thousands of wealthy Scotsmen in all parts of the world who would do the same.

Romance in the War.

The romance of war is far from dead, says London Globe. Witness the reports of the French parachutist St Monastir, who jumped from his balloon at a height of 3,500 feet, who took out his pocket-book with one hand and, holding it in his teeth, inserted therein all his important papers, threw it into the French lines as he sailed over them, and himself reached the Serbian front. Then again, we have the account of the fight in the Adriatic between an Italian torpedo boat and an Austrian submarine. Both were sunk, but the survivors of the torpedo boat captured the submarine crew.

War Makes Men Gray.

Army physicians and men of science are discussing the effect on future generations of the premature aging of millions of men now at the battle fronts. It is said that soldiers ten months in the trenches, exposed to the nerve-shattering shock of shell fire, often come out with the appearance of ten years having been added to their life. A shorter period than this often suffices to turn iron-gray the hair of a boy of twenty-five, his premature aging is peculiar to no nationality. It is noticeable alike along the English and French lines and among the prisoners from Germany, Austria, and Russia. 'We attribute the gray hairs now so noticeable everywhere at the front to a 'subconscious worry,'" said a Canadian army surgeon. He continued: "I have never known actually of hair turning gray over night, as the novelists are so fond of putting it, but it often happens within the space of a week or ten days." The effect of the spirit upon the body, of the agony of the soul on the physical health, is a scientific fact. The effect of sorrow for his afflicted nation upon his appearance is shown in the cup-bearer who offered the wine to Artaxerxes the king, who, noticing his changed appearance, said: "Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? This is nothing else but sorrow of heart."

Stomach Was Very Bad Much Dizziness and Pain

The Liver Got Out of Order and the Whole System Was Poisoned

When the course of the food through the alimentary canal is impeded by sluggish action of the liver or bowels the food remains undigested and as a result it ferments.

This gives rise to poisonous gases which crowd about the heart, and cause dizziness and choking sensations as well as irregular action of the heart.

The liver struggles to remove the poisons from the blood, becomes enlarged, and finally fails, allowing the poisons to pass on to every part of the human system. Complications arise, and there is Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and apoplexy.

The earlier derangements of the digestive system are such as are described by this letter from Mr. Rochon. He also points the way to cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Louis Rochon, R. R. No. 11, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For about seven months my stomach was very bad. I was troubled with dizziness, and had gas on the stomach and awful pains in the right side. The liver seemed to be out of order so I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This treatment seemed to be just exactly what I needed and before the first box was all used I was cured, and feeling as well as ever. I also used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when feeling weak and suffering from nervous headache, and was soon restored to good health. I am proud of Dr. Chase's medicines, and recommend them above any doctor's medicines."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, twenty-five cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Napoleon and Tobacco.

Napoleon, who tried to smoke once and then with dire results, instituted the French tobacco monopoly, which the German government now proposes to adopt so far as cigarettes are concerned. At a court function held early in 1810 the emperor remarked a lady wearing jewels of such magnificence that he inquired how her husband made his money. "He is a tobacco merchant," was the reply, which led him to seek further information as to such a profitable business. Before the year expired Napoleon issued a decree restricting the sale and manufacture of tobacco exclusively to the state. It has remained a monopoly ever since and for many years past has brought in an annual revenue of over $80,000,000.

The Fish in Crater Lake.

Originally there were no fish in Crater lake, one of nature's wonders on the summit of the Cascade range in southern Oregon. Rainbow trout were planted, and now they swarm the waters, ranging up to ten pounds in weight. The lake itself has an area of twenty and one-fourth square miles (water surface), which is situated to the caldera of an extinct volcano. It is surrounded by unbroken cliffs, which range from 500 to nearly 2,000 feet in height.—Argonaut.

Unpleasant to Have Around.

"Are you still engaged to Mr. Briggs?"

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Licorice as It Grows.

The licorice shrub is like the hazel, growing to the height of four or five feet, and the root is the only part that has value. It is found in damp, sandy places, chiefly along the banks of rivers around the Caspian sea, and is dug by peasant women, who earn from 10 to 15 cents a day working for the licorice collectors. The root sells for a few cents a pound in the raw state. The larger part is shipped in that condition, but about 20 per cent of the product is boiled and crushed, and the juice is made into the hard black paste such as can be bought in the drug stores. In 1848 an Italian began to cultivate licorice, and since that time many people have adopted the industry, because the cultivated root contains much more sap than that of the wild plant and costs very little more. The only attention necessary is to keep the soil loosened and well watered. The cultivated licorice brings much higher prices in the market and produces a much greater quantity of paste in proportion.

Instructed the Queen.

Queen Victoria of England was once pulled up short by an old Scotchwoman. Her majesty had started out one afternoon to sit on a hillside and watch some of her relatives fishing in the river below her when she found that she had no thimble in her pocket, so could not work, as she had intended, at the sewing she was carrying. Turning out of her way to Mrs. Symond's shop, she bought the smallest thimble there, which was, however, too big for her. There was an old Scotch dame at the counter impatiently waiting to make her own purchases. Not recognizing the queen, she broke into the conversation with a "Hoots, but it's a rare fuss an' faddle you're makin'. Blaw intae it weel an' it'll stick." That phrase, the latter part of the sentence, amused her majesty immensely and became quite a proverb in the royal family.

Short Lived Republic.

It may not be generally known that a republic composed of the states of Nicaragua, Salvador and Honduras and known as the United States of Central America was established in 1898 by a party of enterprising individuals. On Nov. 1 of that year deputations of the three mentioned states met at Nicaragua, which had been decided on as the new capital, and constituted the United States of Central America, taking the oath to support the new republic and making laws to be observed by all the people of the states concerned. The new constitution was modeled on the lines of the United States of America, but it did not live to take a place in the government of the western hemisphere. Less than a month after it had been established the republic mysteriously collapsed.

What the Public Wants.

"It's hard to tell just what the public wants these days," said the theater manager, with a sigh.

"It hasn't struck me that way," replied the treasurer. "It seems painfully easy to me. In nine cases out of ten it wants its money back."—New York World.

California's Gold.

The first discovery of gold in California was made in 1848 by James Marshall, who happened to pick up a glittering nugget in the bed of a stream. Since that time the state has yielded more than $1,500,000,000 in gold. Marshall died a poor man.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

One of fashion's surprises in aprons is offered by this design. It will serve for slipping on over the dress in which one will prepare dinner for invited guests and can be slipped off in two seconds to greet them; or one may do the morning's work in absolute comfort with such a garment.

It is made with a wide bib front that continues its way below the waistline, forming side pockets where it becomes part of the skirt section. The upper ends of the bib cross the shoulders and are smoothly rounded to the neck for fastening at back with a button. The skirt section has plenty of fulness, gathered to the back and joined to a band fastening with a button at normal waistline.

Banding or braid outlines the square neck and neatly finishes the sides of the bib and pockets; preferably this will be in color smartly contrasting. Percale, linen chambray and linen are suitable materials for an apron like this. You perhaps know that a pattern is a money saving device and that an apron saves labor, time and often temper.

The apron pattern No. 8,104 cuts in sizes medium and large. To make in the medium size requires four and three-eighths yards thirty-six inch material, three yards braid. To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

In ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price, 10c, or 2 for 25 cents.

RECLAIMING DELTA LANDS.

Great Work Has Been a Great Success Along the Fraser River.

The conquest of low-lying alluvial lands along the Fraser River, which commenced years ago with the construction of dykes in Richmond and Delta municipalities, still goes on as more dykes are built and more drainage canals put in. In Langley municipality at present drainage schemes which will make over 2,000 acres ready to produce grand crops are being carried out under the Ditch and Water Courses' Act. The Biggar Prairie scheme takes in 1,500 acres, the Devine scheme at Campbell Creek, 500 acres, the Poppy scheme at Otter 500 acres, and the Norman scheme on Brown road 650 acres. The process of reclamation, governed by the provisions of a provincial act, is largely a co-operative one and the property owners benefiting jointly bear the cost. Under the Act, however, an improvement scheme which has the approval of the engineer of the municipality is carried out, even though the majority of settlers oppose it. To the four projects mentioned above, however, there has been no opposition.

When first brought under cultivation lowlands along the Fraser are generally acid or "sour," but the acidity does not prove the obstacle to successful agriculture that one might think, and constantly decreases as time goes on. Pitt Meadows, the location of a large drainage scheme completed a year or so ago, has for several years now grown constantly more attractive from an agricultural standpoint, and this year the crops were conceded the "best ever" by every old inhabitant. The dry year had something to do with it, but so also had better underdrainage on farms, the dredging of the sloughs, and a fine pumping plant installed by the Government. Pretty nearly the average yield of oats at Pitt Meadows this year was 90 bushels to the acre. Potatoes grown were excellent both as regards size and quality. All root crops, in fact, were good.

Pitt Meadow lands are relatively more sour than other dyked farms nearer the mouth of the Fraser for the reason that the Pitt Meadows' dyking scheme, comprehending some 22,000 acres, was only built a few years ago.

For the dairymen and stock raisers there has always been something of a problem in the production of a suitable grass. The experience with timothy, alsike, clover, and other standard grasses was that after two or three good crops the quality and then the yield would fall off rapidly and at four or five years the land would have to be ploughed up and sown again. To farmers in the Eastern Provinces that may not seem a very unusual experience, but it is in the valley farming districts of British Columbia where virgin fertility is far from exhaustion. Acidity was early recognized as the difficulty at Pitt Meadows. To add to the problem blue point, the best of the wild grasses, rapidly disappeared as the lands were cultivated.

An experiment in this connection which it is thought may turn out to be of great importance has been in progress the past two years on the ranch of William Rannie. A well-to-do resident of Australia who is interested in Pitt Meadows' property—Mr. Frank Coffee—forwarded some seed of Australian Sudan grass. Thus far, in Mr. Rannie's, it has been an unalloyed success, growing to a height of six feet or more and being eaten with eagerness by both horses and cattle. Its stalk is much like that of blue point, and the head blossom is somewhat similar to oats. It yields heavily of seed, and last year seeded back in excellent shape. Mr. Rannie is very enthusiastic about it. He sees a future for it also as ensilage. He is hopeful and confident that the variety will prove the permanent meadow grass so long sought.—J. T. B. in Montreal Family Herald.

Postage Is Reduced.

The Canadian Postoffice Department has foregone its share of the postage on parcels to soldiers in France, thus effecting a material saving in the cost of forwarding such matter to the front.

The following official announcement has been issued:

"The Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, Postmaster-General of Canada, has been successful, as a result of negotiations entered into with the Imperial postal authorities, in effecting an arrangement with the British Government whereby parcels from Canada for Canadian soldiers in France and Flanders will be carried at the same rate of postage as applies to parcels from the United Kingdom for the expeditionary forces on the continent. That is:

"For parcels weighing up to three pounds, 24 cents; for parcels weighing over three pounds and not more than seven pounds, 32 cents; for parcels weighing over seven pounds and not more than eleven pounds, 38 cents.

"This means a material reduction on the cost of parcels, and it is hoped it will be a source of satisfaction to the Canadian public. This reduction has been brought about by Canada foregoing all postal charges for the conveyance of these parcels in Canada and on the Atlantic."

Nurses and the War.

The supply of nurses from Canada has so far exceeded the demand created by the war. In order to be accepted for service at the front a nurse must be a graduate of a general hospital training school, with three years' training. Application for appointment to a military hospital is made to the divisional Militia Headquarters or to Militia Headquarters, Ottawa. The pay is $2 per day. During the later stages of the war the demand may increase and the restrictions may relax. In that case it is considered probable that selections will be made from the lists of those who have already applied and were not accepted.

If plants freeze, immerse them in cold water and keep them in a perfectly dark place until thoroughly thawed out.

CANADIAN IN SERBIA.

Captain Roy Leitch is With General Staff of Serbian Army.

The career of Capt. Roy Leitch, of Charlottetown, P. E. I., and more recently of Serbia, who has just left Montreal to resume his place in the General Staff of the Serbian army, goes to illustrate that the sense of chivalry, the impulse that drove Byron to fight for Greece, is not entirely absent from modern warfare. Born and educated in Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, he carried off a Rhodes scholarship and went to Oxford. Some years spent in Switzerland together with his reading of history, gave him a strong dislike of Austria-Hungary and when war broke out he offered his services in the hope that he might be sent to Serbia to fight on the side of the under dog." The British War Office granted his request, and since then Captain Leitch has been in the thick of things in the Balkans.

Somewhat seriously injured while making a rapid advance with the Serbian staff several months ago, Captain Leitch was compelled to accept leave in order to recuperate. He returned to Canada to receive medical attention and to enlist, if possible, Canadian sympathy in the Serbian cause. He underwent a serious operation and will be unable to resume very active service for at least another month.

"I do not think it is possible for you in this country to realise the condition of things in Serbia to-day," Captain Leitch told a newspaper correspondent. "You must remember that it is a small country with a small population, and that it has been at war for practically the whole of the last three years. Today it is a nation at war in the fullest sense of the term. Everybody is fighting, and I mean this literally. Serbia's sufferings are frightful. Happily the worst of the typhus has been stamped out, thanks to the American and English doctors, but at its worst it was appalling. Picture to yourself a Serbian village under the scourges of plague and war. Before the door of every second house would be standing the women, mourners for the dead within, chanting the death dirge. Perhaps in the next house there would be a group of Serbian soldiers dancing one of the national dances. And this wailing for the dead, this pitiful attempt to put the best face on things, went on from one end of the country to the other.

"Food in Serbia is scarce, unbelievably scarce. Just before I left I dined with a man who was a short time ago one of the richest men in Serbia. All he could offer me was bread and a dish of greens of some sort and this was his fare twice a day. If this is what the rich live on, bread and some green leaves in small quantities, can you imagine how the poor are faring? I have seen suffering incredible, borne with perfect heroism and illuminated with chivalry of the highest order. I could tell you stories of the treatment of Serbian peasants by Austrian invaders that would make your blood boil, and as against this I know where Serbian soldiers, fighting after a three days 'fast, have at the end of the fight, given their scanty rations to Austrian prisoners and wounded. You may think of Serbians as 'uncivilised'—they are in the sense that they have not the latest machinery—their ploughs are branches of trees with the children of the family seated on them—but in the essentials of civilization, the spirit of chivalry, they have nothing to learn from us.

"I could tell you stores of Serbian heroism in the field that would keep you here all night, things I myself have seen. I saw three Serbians, an officer and two privates, dynamite a bridge under the fire of ten thousand Austrians. The fuse was far too short and the officer would not let the privates take the risk of firing it. And yet that fuse was fired after the dynamite had been so cleverly placed that not a flying fragment of the bridge fell among the Serbians close at hand. I know a boy of fourteen who insisted in being allowed to join the army and who led the troops for a three days' advance, the last twenty-four hours of which were made almost without a stop.

Strathcona's Beneficence.

Dr. Wilfrid Grenfell, the Labrador missionary, relates that on one occasion Lord Strathcona asked after a certain woman who had been his servant in Labrador ever fifty years before. "I told him that she had long ago passed away, but that her daughter, who was married and had a very large family, had often spoken of her mother's connection with him. He asked how she was faring with so many children, but appeared to take very little notice when I told him that the family were having hard times. However, the next time I visited that part of Labrador I heard that he had sent a special Labrador order of pork, flour, molasses, and butter, and many outfits of clothing for herself and the children. To this day the woman is wondering where the gift came from.

May Use Old College.

Old Knox College on Spadina avenue, Toronto, was inspected by Lieut.-Colonel Marlow and his staff recently with a view to using the building as a convalescent home for returned soldiers. The project has yet to be more fully considered. Estimates of the cost of fitting it up for the purpose are being drawn up and the matter will be submitted to the Government for consideration. The old building is in many respects well suited for such a home, and its size will give ample room for expansion as the number of invalided soldiers increases.

A lonely light-keeper on the Atlantic coast receiving only a small salary, celebrated Christmas by sending $16.25 to be used for purposes of the war in whatever way the department thought best.

Light and Space.

No astronomer can answer the question, "Is there any place in space where there is no light?" Astronomers, telespectroscopists, celestial photographers, cosmic dust and meteor researchers are striving hourly around the world to find whether there is extinction or absorption of light in space.

It is known that light actually traverses distances of at least one quadrillion miles from remote suns to the earth, from all directions in the sidereal universe. These rays are allowed to fall on diffraction gratings for analysis to find if wave lengths are modified during flight hither.

Science at present is unable to state whether there are suns five, ten or twenty quadrillion miles away nor, if there are, whether they are able to send light out here to our infinitesimally minute, almost exactly, but not quite, nothing of a world, the earth.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

An Eyewitness.

He was a nervous man. Most men are when they find themselves in a dentist's chair, but he was exceptionally so. The tooth that had to come out was quite a small affair—from the dentist's point of view. From the patient's it felt about as big as a house.

He decided to have gas. The dentist, who was in a hurry to go to a tennis match, tried to persuade him to do without it, but he was determined.

Then the dentist, in a fervor of impatience, waited for his victim to lose consciousness, but the nervous man insisted on keeping one eye open, though he had enough gas to float an airship.

Unable to contain himself any longer, the irate tooth puller exclaimed:

"Let yourself go, man! Shut your eye, you idiot!"

Somewhere from the back blocks of freedom and the patient murmured sleepily:

"Can't; it's glass!"—Exchange.

Cranky Vessels.

Even the best designers never know how their ships will turn out when completed. They may break all records for speed, or they may be so slow as to be entirely useless—a mere waste of money. Years ago two mud barges were built at San Francisco, exactly alike, constructed from one design. One of them was quite commonplace, but the other raced every barge in the bay and beat them all, raced every yacht on the Pacific coast and beat them. She was so fast that yachts were built on her lines, but turned out mere barges for sloth. Nobody could see how this craft differed from her crawling sisters or from the yachts. In 1851 the America went to Cowes, England, and raced for a prize cup. She won that trophy, and then an Englishman bought her and improved her hull, stiffening it with knees throughout. After that she lost every race.

Carlyle's Caustic Tongue.

A delightful Carlyle story is told in connection with the painting of the portrait of Carlyle by Sir John Millais. The portrait was painted in 1877 at the home of Millais. Carlyle and his niece, who accompanied him, were both impressed with the magnificence of the furnishings and the objects of art with which it was filled.

"And does all this—er—come from a paint pot?" queried the niece. The artist replied in the affirmative. Then this characteristic comment came from Carlyle:

"Ah, well, it shows what a number of fools there are in the world!"

Only three sittings were given, and the picture is classed as "unfinished." Maybe that remark is the reason why it was never completed.

"A Nine Days' Wonder."

The memorable reign of Lady Jane Grey is said to have given rise to the phrase "a nine days' wonder." Lady Jane was proclaimed queen of England July 10, 1553, four days after the death of Edward VI. After the lapse of a period of nine days, on July 19, she relinquished her title to the crown, thus terminating her reign in the short space of a week and a half. A noted English historian says, "Thus we come to the end of the diary of that short and troubled reign that from its length is said to have given rise to the now (1620) popular phrase, 'a nine days' wonder.'"

American Restaurants.

What disconcerts the European in the great American restaurant is the excessive, the occasional maddening slowness of the service and the lack of interest in the service. Touching the latter defect, the waiter is not impolite; he is not neglectful. But he is too often passively hostile, or at best neutral. He, or his chief, has apparently not grasped the fact that buying a meal is not like buying a ton of coal. If the purchaser is to get value for his money he must enjoy his meal, and if he is to enjoy his meal it must not merely be efficiently served, but it must be efficiently served in a sympathetic atmosphere. The supreme business of a good waiter is to create this atmosphere. True, that even in the country which has carried cookery and restaurants to loftier heights than any other—I mean, of course, Belgium, the little country of little restaurants—the subtle ether which the truly civilized diner demands is rare enough. But in the great restaurants of the great cities of America it is, I fancy, rarer than anywhere else. —Arnold Bennett in Harper's Magazine.

His Unlucky Day.

Even the least superstitious are often struck by the misfortunes which attend some persons on certain dates. A large firm in the city has in its employ a living instance of the fact. On June 12 an employee lost his left arm by coming in contact with machinery. The accident disabled him for his then employment, and he was given that of a messenger. On another June 12 he was run over in the Strand while on an errand. Result, a broken leg. The next accident was a fall on the stairs in the firm's buildings—again June 12—the right arm broken this time. The fourth mishap on another anniversary broke three ribs. The firm took the case into consideration and issued an order that in future the employee was to take a holiday on that date, an order with which he has now complied for several years.—London Tit-Bits.

Helping the Poet.

Longfellow, the great poet, was noted for his fondness for children, and this extended to all little folks, whether of his family or not. There was one little boy of whom he was very fond and who came often to see him. One day the child looked earnestly at the long row of books in the library and at length asked, "Have you 'Jack the Giant Killer?'" Longfellow was obliged to confess that his great library did not contain that venerated volume. The little fellow looked very sorry and presently slipped down from the poet's knee and went away. But the next morning Longfellow saw him coming up the walk with something tightly clasped in his little fists. The child had brought 2 cents with which Longfellow was to buy a "Jack the Giant Killer" of his own.

Philosophical.

"Dear Charles," said Mrs. Flimgilt "used to send me alimony every month without a murmur."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "he says it's a great comfort to turn over a bunch of money to you without an argument because it isn't more."—Washington Star.

Russia's Baltic Ports.

Four out of the five great ports of Russia—Petrograd (formerly St. Petersburg), Reval, Libau and Riga—are situated on the Baltic sea. Of these only Libau is an open port all the year round, the others being ice bound for from four to five months each year.

Clever Cows.

"Much butter is imported from Denmark," wrote a schoolgirl, "because Danish cows have greater enterprise and superior technical education to ours."—London Standard.

Accuse not nature; she hath done her part; do thou but thine.—John Milton.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hemsbury, Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

The Germans Still Retreating In The West

Pres. Wilson Stands Behind The Senate Bill

Germans Have Retreated To East And North of Bapaume

Are Being Closely Pressed by the Advancing British Forces Who Are Attacking Them With Light Field Guns---Unprecedented Number of Subs. Have Been Sunk in the Past Month Although Censor Will Not Permit Number to Be Made Known.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, March 1.—Information here to-day is that the Germans have this morning fallen back to the east and north of Bapaume, closely pressed by the advancing British, who, however, did not immediately occupy the Town of Bapaume, but attacked the retreating Germans vigorously with light field guns. The German artillery fire seems unusually light, and observers report the big batteries taking up new positions on the German front.

PARIS, March 1.—Patrol encounters in the Argonne and east of Metzeral during the night resulted in the loss to the French of some prisoners. There was intermittent artillery fire between the Oise and the Aisne, and in the Champagne district near Auberive.

Retirement For Special Reasons, Says Berlin

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, via Sayville, March 1.—The evacuation "for special reasons" of part of the German advanced positions on both sides of the Ancre was reported in to-day's official statement from German headquarters. The troops which were removed have been placed in other positions already prepared, it is stated.

LONDON, March 1.—Cavalry and gunboats are continuing the pursuit of the beaten Turkish troops retreating from Kut-El-Amara, an official statement from the Mesopotamian front to-day said.

LONDON, March 1.—Broadstairs, in Kent County, was bombarded by a German aeroplane early this morning, and one woman was hurt. This town was attacked by a destroyer last week.

BORDEAUX, March 1.—The American freighter Rochester has arrived at the mouth of the Gironde.

NEW YORK, March 1.—Mailed advices from England to-day indicate that the British have sunk and captured an unprecedented number of submarines during the month of February, though Admiralty censors still decline to permit the figures to be given out. The British people have unbounded confidence in the power of the navy to overcome the menace, and the familiar phrase is "Leave it to Jellicoe" when depredations of submarines are chronicled.

TOKIO, March 1.—Revelations of plots of the Germans to get Japan to secede from the Allies and join Mexico and Germany in a plot against the United States recall a visit here early in January of a contingent of prominent Mexicans who apparently had lots of money and authority. They made some indirect approaches to the Government, but it is understood all advances were indignantly repulsed, and the Mexicans were ordered out of the country by the next boat. Since that date the Japanese Government has taken care to reinstate its loyalty to the cause of Britain and the Allies.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Amidst applause from various parts of the Chamber the House of Representatives this afternoon adopted a rule for consideration of the armed neutrality bill by unanimous viva voce vote. A war strain ran beneath the proceedings in both the House and Senate. In the Senate notice was given that an extra session of Congress was likely. Senator Thomas, of Colorado, said: "This may be the greatest crisis in the history of our country. It is the duty of Congress to be here in our seats to face it."

WASHINGTON, March 1.—President Wilson has informed Congress that he stands flatly behind the Senate Bill granting him full powers and a vote of credit to handle the international situation.

This was made known at the White House to-day following the reports that the President approves the House Bill which greatly modifies his request.

The President will sign the measure only when it conforms with his full desires, and for that reason he is putting all of the Administration strength behind the bill drawn by the Senate Committee.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—President Wilson stands sponsor for the declaration that Germany attempted to plot Japan and Mexico into a conspiracy against the United States. In a formal statement, Senator Swanson so told the Senate to-day.

It was officially asserted by the State Department officials that German Foreign Secretary Zimmerman's letter through which Germany hoped to embroil Mexico and Japan in an alliance with Germany against the United States never reached either Mexico or Japan.

Japanese Ambassador Sato here to-day said: "Germany is very much mistaken if she thinks that this country would combine with Mexico and herself to make war against the United States. In this I speak authoritively for my government. Germany would not stop at anything, however, in the present state of affairs, which makes the report of such a plot very probable."

LONDON, March 1.—It was announced in the Commons to-day that the Turkish retreat in Mesopotamia had developed into a rout, and remnants of the Turkish forces would reach Bagdad as disorganized mobs. Vast quantities of guns, munitions, stores and thousands more prisoners have been taken.

LONDON, March 1.—Speaking in the Reichstag to-day, Foreign Secretary Zimmerman said: "Germany is in all ways convinced that the submarine warfare ought not to be restricted."

"Germany is resolved at all costs to maintain her blockade, but naturally desires to reach an understanding with America without clashing with this object," Zimmerman added.

LONDON, March 1.—The following ships are listed to-day as sunk: Clan Farquhart, British, 5,863 tons; Galogorin Castle, British, 1,596 tons; Marie, French, 192 tons; S. Jortad, Norwegian, 1,555 tons.

WANT BOYS OF HIGH SCHOOL TO WORK ON FARMS

Ontario Government to Inaugurate Campaign on Those Lines in Order That the Production in the Province Will Be Increased

WILL BE SUPERVISED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, March 1.—The Ontario Government, through the Trades and Labour branch, will inaugurate a campaign to interest High school boys in cities and towns to work this summer on the farms with a view of securing greater production. The boys will be under the supervision of the county district representative to whom they may appeal if the positions provided for them are not satisfactory.

HIGH-CLASS PLAYS COMING TO THE ROYAL

Mr. Pappas Has Signed Up For the Big Feature Films Shown in Largest Theatres

The enterprising manager of the Royal Theatre has just signed large contracts, dating from to-day for the high-class service offered by the two leading film corporations in the world, viz: the Triangle Film Service of New York and the William Fox Film Corporation of New York. The wonderful productions of these two moving picture originators are only shown in the largest theatres in the United States and Canada because of the very high prices demanded for their features. Mr. Pappas wants Peterborough theatre goers to enjoy the benefit of the best plays and pictures the bigger cities can put on the canvas, and trusts the public will appreciate his enterprise by a continuance of their liberal patronage in future.

A series of photoplays of unusual interest and humourous comedies will be presented every week, in which the most popular star actors will do their parts.

Monday and Tuesday next the Royal will show the first of the Triangle high-class series of dramas and comedies. Wednesday and Thursday the William Fox Film Corporation features; and Friday and Saturday, the Triangle Service, "The Girl from Frisco" will also be continued.

THE SHOCK WAS FATAL

Special to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., March 1.—Five year old Hazel Aldous fell through the ice on Chippewa creek, while playing with other children yesterday afternoon, and was carried out toward the Niagara cataract. She was rescued by two Chippewa men just as she reached the cataract, but died afterwards from exposure and shock.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, March 1.—Live stock receipts, fair; trade brisk. Prices, heavy steers, $10.50 to $11.50; spring lambs, $13 to $15; hogs, fed and watered, $15.10 to $15.25; off cars, $15.35 to $15.40; f.o.b., $14.40 to $14.50.

Has The Church Fallen Down?

So often it has been said that if the Christian people of Peterborough were given an opportunity to make their gifts for the Work of Christ in Labrador in a voluntary way, there would be no need of a "function" to raise money for Dr. Grenfell's Deep Sea Mission.

This year every Minister in the city has appealed to his people by the words of his brethren in these columns for the small amount for which this city is responsible. The money has not come in—Not half of it. It is a matter of procrastination. We intend to pay it—but how shall we appear if within the next two days the people who object to "Functions" fail to call at the newspaper offices with their gifts? If there is such a failure we need never again raise our voices to say "The only way to raise money for Missions is by Voluntary System—

What shall we do about it?

Has the Church fallen down?

Many Units On The Hunt For Recruits In Peterboro' Now

2nd Battalion Reinforcing Draft Looking For Peterboro' Men to Reinforce the Famous Iron Seconds at the Front —Artillery, Cyclists and Infantry All Asking For Recruits—To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Young men in Peterborough who have been considering the question of enlistment have a big variety of units to choose from at the present time. In addition to the 247th Battalion, there are representatives here of the 74th Battery, Cyclists Corps, 253rd Battalion, Queen's Highlanders and the 2nd Battalion reinforcing draft, all seeking men.

Lieut. T. J. Flurey is here in connection with the 2nd Battalion, reinforcing draft which would like to secure a number of Peterborough men. The draft will leave for overseas about the middle of this month. There will be no training on this side of the water. The men will be sent to the base in England and after receiving training there will go direct to the famous 2nd Eastern Ontario Battalion, the Iron Seconds at the front. Lieut. Flurey will be here until Saturday and is hopeful of getting a number of Peterborough men for the draft, particularly as Peterborough officers and men played a gallant part in securing for the 2nd Battalion the reputation it enjoys at the front.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—Much surprise has been caused here by a report that a French-Canadian newspaper has refused to accept an advertisement calling for recruits from the Province of Quebec for a railway construction battalion. The unit is intended to build railroads in France in order to assist military operations here. The reason assigned for the refusal of the advertisement is that the shortage of agricultural labour is cruelly felt in the district in which the newspaper circulates.

To-day's orders of the 247th Battalion contain the announcement that Pte. Thos. R. Blunt has been promoted to Corporal.

Military Hospital Lantern Slides

An Ontario minister the other day borrowed from the Military Hospitals Commission a set of lantern slides. These slides show what goes on at the hospitals and sanatoria. That is, they show something of how our injured soldiers are being restored to health and to power for self-support however serious their injuries may be. The minister exhibited the slides at three country churches under his charge. In returning the set he writes:

"My Recording Steward, who is also the post-master and chairman of the local recruiting league, says they should be shown in every community. They meet the unrest in many families who have feared that the maimed who return will be forced to sell lead pencils or such like.

"What I should have done was to ask for them for a longer period, and put them on in every available church in this district. A man with a well-prepared lecture and a few local slides could render a valuable service to the country, both in allaying the unrest above referred to and in removing the prejudice in some families from which recruits might be secured."

The slides, with explanatory notes, may be borrowed by ministers and other responsible persons, free of charge. Application should be made to the Military Hospitals Commission, 22 Victoria street, Ottawa.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Daily orders by Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman commanding 247th Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.:

Orders for Thursday, March 1st, 1917:

1. Duties—

Orderly Officer for Thursday, March 1st, 1917: Lieut. T. W. Quinn.

Next for duty, Friday, March 2, 1917: Lieut. J. F. Strickland.

A. E. Brittain, Lieut.
Adjutant 247th Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—It is officially announced through the Chief Press Censor's office that the following troops have arrived safely in England:

The 228th Railway Construction Battalion, Toronto; the 257th Railway Construction Battalion, Toronto, Ottawa and the Maritime Provinces; 143rd Railway Construction Battalion of Victoria; the 218 Railway Construction Battalion of Edmonton.

Toronto, March 1.—The Soldiers' Aid Commission of Ontario records for February show 122 returned soldiers were placed in positions in the month just closed.

City Changed its Bank To-day

The city's banking account was transferred to-day from the Bank of Montreal to the Bank of Toronto without any outward manifestations of the inward satisfaction that probably stirred under the aldermanic weskits that are familiar in the George street office, if there are any. Thus far the change has been confined to the Council. Other civic accounts remain at the Bank of Montreal. Yesterday the pay cheques for city employees were drawn on the Bank of Montreal, but to-day they had to be altered to the Bank of Toronto because of the absence of the Mayor and chairman of the Finance Committee.

Grand Opera Orchestra Playing in Orillia To-night

The orchestra of the Grand Opera House left this morning for Orillia, where they will play for the "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" Company, at the opening of the new Orillia Opera House. It speaks volumes for the playing of the Grand Orchestra that they should be called upon to assist at the opening.

The police court receipts this week included several large items, $250 on Monday in liquor fines, and $410 this morning, $10 in a liquor case and the other $400 this morning representing the activities of the police in connection with a certain exuberance of enthusiasts who think highly of the ability of the local hockey team.

National Service Cards Indicate Eligible Men

PRIVATE MARTIN NEARY—Son of Martin Neary, Aylmer street, foreman on the city's sewer construction work. Private Neary went overseas with the 93rd, and to France with the first draft. His pal, Pte. Rowe, of Lakefield, was killed beside him in an early engagement.

First Batch of 93 Names of Men in This City Have Been Forwarded By the Government to Col. Ackerman for Enlistment Purposes — Major Campbell Says City Must Support the 247th.

IT MAY BE WITHDRAWN

Unless the 247th Battalion is more energetically supported by the citizens of Peterborough it will lose its identity, be merged with some other unit and withdrawn from the city. This was the plain and official statement made by Major G. I. Campbell, chief recruiting officer for the 3rd Military District, at a public meeting held in the recreation room at the Armouries, last night. He also conveyed the information that the classification of the National Service cards had already revealed a group of apparently eligible men in Peterborough who would be called out first under any form of conscription the Government decided to employ in securing the promised 500,000 recruits from this country.

The men who had signed the National Service cards were being divided into three classes, the first of whom included the men between the ages of 18 and 30 years, who were unmarried and without dependents.

Three hundred names in this class had already been counted from the third division. Ninety-three of them were from Peterborough, and as the indexing of the cards proceeded there would undoubtedly be more. These names were being forwarded at once to Col. Ackerman, who would be justified and had the sanction of the Government in approaching these men with a view to their enlistment. In the event of the Militia Act being enforced or conscription passed these would be the first men called up, and while the voluntary system remained they would do well, Major Campbell significantly observed, to save themselves the exposure of conscription.

Referring to the use of the National Service cards in discovering eligible men, Major Campbell stated that he had just received the information in a telephone message and that additional figures would be forthcoming in the near future.

Last night's meeting, in point of attendance, was discouragingly small. Col. Ackerman remarked that it was scarcely better than a recent meeting of citizens who were expected to become interested in the 500 club, at which only seven or eight persons were present.

DECLINE IN RECRUITING.

Major Campbell's address opened with a review of recruiting figures in this district, which, during the past six months had provided 6,000 men. These were recruited in the 3rd Military district with headquarters at Kingston. The total number of recruits from this district up to the 15th of February was 44,359, and from the entire Dominion 400,000. Recruiting for the artillery had been most brisk a year ago and up to last fall. During the winter, however, this, too, had fallen off, and the figures for the first half of February for the artillery units in this district were quoted by Major Campbell as follows: 72nd Battery 23, 73rd 16, 74th, 11; 75th, 15; the Divisional

THE GERMANS ARE JOCKEYING FOR NEW POSITIONS IN WEST

Apparently Aim to Forestall an Ultimate Defeat and Save a Very Costly Defence of the Old Line They Have Held So Long

NO SIGNS OF A RECOIL

(By William Phillip Simms.)

With the British Armies Afield, March 1.— Slowly and steadily the German retirement continues south of Arras. Indications are lacking of any recoil movement. The retirement may yet resemble, at least in some respects, that following the Battle of the Marne. Then the Germans were beaten, and their armies were retreating after being severely trounced in battle. Now they apparently aim to forestall an ultimate retreat, after what might prove a very costly defence of the old lines, by taking up new positions previously arranged, like those north of the Aisne, thereby saving scores of thousands of German lives for use elsewhere in a last desperate attempt to force a decision this summer.

The German high army command undoubtedly recognized the precariousness of the old positions, and is now jockeying for new ones. Before this process is ended, the retreat may continue several miles to the east, stretching from Arras to Noyon. The German high command evidently hopes for a betterment of its position in this way, which will mean the breaking up of the present stalemate and the beginning of a war movement.

WEATHER FOR PAST MONTH

Thirteen Zero Days During February—A Capitulation

During February we had 13 zero days. The temperature was down to 20 degrees below zero on three different days, viz., 2nd, 3rd and 12th. The warmest day was the 23rd, 37 degrees. There was snow on ten days, and rain on two, giving a total for the month of 1.45.

March of last year entered with 15 below zero, and had a number of severe storms, that of the 10th being the worst. Spring made its initial appearance on the 25th, and by the end of the month the snow was practically gone, excepting in sheltered places. Robins were around in numbers by the 29th.—W. P.

THURSDAY, MARCH 1, 1917

ST. DAVID'S DAY.

This is St. David's Day—St. David the patron saint of Wales. Wales is the smallest of the component parts of the United Kingdom, but it has had one of the largest places in its stirring history. It is the nursery of our kings, and has for over seven hundred years given the title "Prince of Wales" to the heir apparent of the British throne. Wales has had a prominent place in British history and never more prominent than now, when the uncrowned King of Britain is a Welshman, David Lloyd George, wears the leek, but not only that he is to-day the biggest factor in the world, in making the Teuton "eat the leek." David Lloyd George is traditionally fitted to be a thorn in the Teuton's side. He is of a race that, hated with Celtic intensity, overlordship of the Teuton—Saxon—and made the conquest of Wales so hard a task for the English seven centuries ago. It is a proud thing for Wales that, in this tremendous crisis of human history a Welshman is the Atlas that bears upon his shoulders the burden of a world in the oscillation of universal struggle.

David Lloyd George is the man of, the hour, whose Cymric fire has set the heart of Britain ablaze. St. David might well complacently regard his birthday of 1917, when it sees one of his sons the biggest man in the world to-day, whose genius for thought and speech and action in statecraft is contributing so magnificently to this victory of humanity in the terrible and terrific struggle of this great war. The world has cause to thank God for St. David and St. David's greatest son, David Lloyd George.

THE ONE THING LACKING.

All reports respecting the efficiency of the Ontario Temperance Act agree in regarding it as a success in diminishing drunkenness and crime, and in promoting social betterment and domestic prosperity and happiness to a very gratifying degree. And all reports and opinions agree that the chief obstructions to the more perfect operation of the act consist in its own defects, in the opportunity it affords, the permission it gives, for the importation of liquor from points outside of the province. Every day we see examples of drunkenness, disorder and domestic disturbance, due to the bottle habit. The government may seek to monopolize credit for the passing of prohibition, but it must assume responsibility for provisions in it that go far to neutralize its evident advantages. In 1911, the government, and government party, antagonized Mr. Rowell's prohibition proposals, because they did not provide, they said, for the abolition of shops. The government joined hands with the liquor interests to secure their defeat. Forced, however, later by public opinion, enlightened and influenced by the Liberal propaganda, to take action, the government passed a prohibition act that to all intents and purposes embodied the essential features of what was objectionable in 1911, as regards facility of access to drink.

If the government wants to complete its work, it will procure amendments, which Sir Robert Borden says the Province has the power to enact, that will strengthen the act by the removal of weakness and a very important weakness, the permission to import strong drink, contrary to the spirit of the act itself, in contributory defeat of its object, and in manifest opposition to the interest of the community, industrial, commercial and domestic. If the government does not act from an inward sense of duty and consistency, it might be shamed by the action of our neighbours. In the United States yesterday the largest stride for a long time towards absolute prohibition was the adoption of a motion by the United States Senate by a four-to-one majority—319 to 78 — looking to the prohibition of the importation of liquor into nominally prohibition states—states that would be absolutely "dry" were it not for importation. We can't expect our Dominion government to enact any such blanket prohibition. It will only go as far as Sir Robert's action in throwing the responsibility upon the provinces. He tells the provinces that they already have the power to pass legislation prohibiting import from points outside the province. If the government has "its ear to the ground" it will hear the voice of loud demand for such improvement in the Ontario Temperance Act as will stop the leaks that are its serious, and, if not stopped, mortally serious defects. We now pay the penalty of prohibition in the way of loss of revenue, and in the greater penalty of the possible and legitimatised importation of strong drink. By neglecting improvement the Government will retain the stigma upon Ontario of being under an unlicensed liquor traffic—of being a provincial "blind pig."

THE PRESS, THE PEOPLE, AND THE POWERS THAT BE.

At the second engagement of Mayor Duffus' civic cooperation campaign, Mr. Kerr in his remarks intimated that the press was sometimes a little severe on the aldermen. If this is advanced as a legal opinion, or regarded as a generality, the indictment is both entiled to respect and subject to amendment.

We nearly all shrink from criticism. We are all human, but most of us are better for criticism and the most wholesome comes sometimes from our best friends. Events of recent occurrence show that the aldermen themselves are not averse to fair criticism; in fact, Mayor Duffus invited it at the first banquet. These very occasions themselves, their object and their meaning, show that the members of the city council have blazed out an excellent new trail; they show they think they have no monopoly of wisdom, or of good ideas, and welcome those of thoughtful citizens. They have begun to realize that if they are to be representatives of the citizens in the best sense, they must know what the citizens want, and one of the best ways has been taken to find this out.

Newspapers are an important element in regulating, influencing and improving the life of a community. They are the indicated and legitimate medium through which the sentiments, wishes and opinions of the people should reach those who should be influenced by them. If they are not more used for this purpose, the fault is not with the press itself.

If the public do not make use of this means as much as may be desirable it becomes the duty of the newspapers to do their duty by their constituents, the public. In the discharge of this duty the newspapers sometimes run afoul of the aldermen—that is, that is sometimes the feeling of the latter. But in the main, the criticism of the press is impersonal, and directed not towards individual shortcomings but to corporate errors of policy or administration.

Speaking for itself, The Examiner is influenced by a desire to serve the public interests only, and not to attack any individual alderman or even council. In discussing civic affairs, and civic needs, we have most often arraigned a policy or lack of policy as influencing the course of, not the present council only, but of previous councils—called attention to mistakes in civic policy and administration that have been made from year to year.

The Examiner has aimed to take an intelligent view of civic interests and to demand in these interests adoption of policy and course of action that would promote them. The justification of this general attitude and course is found in the endorsation by various speakers at the recent civic conferences of policies and improvements, The Examiner has steadily and persistently advocated for years. This is not stated in self-praise, but in proof that the things advocated have been in line with public sentiment and opinion, and that what has sometimes been regarded as criticism, has been the expression of a simple desire to promote the welfare of the city.

It is noticeable that at the last mayorial symposia various speakers endorsed several things that The Examiner has made a specialty of advocating for years, and even to the point of the charge of faddism; were advocated by serious thinking citizens.

Mr. Breyfogle, in an excellent speech, the keynote of which was the necessity of Peterborough "dressing up," to make herself attractive, touched on the chord The Examiner has long been harping on—"the city beautiful." Mr. Fisk, in his dry official capacity, touched on the preservation of the beauty of our trees—another "fad" of The Examiner, and Mr. Roland Dennis touched another high spot when he advocated a Park Commission as a means to secure in the most effective way the beautification of Peterborough. City Engineer Parsons put his professional cachet upon another "fad" of The Examiner—cribbed boulevards, to narrow down the width of the driving surface of the streets—something at once an important factor in lessening cost of construction and maintenance, and better results, and enhancing the beauty and attractiveness of our public places.

These things are not cited in the way of boasting, but the endorsation of prominent and thinking citizens, the approval of capable professional and official citizens, show that it is possible for a newspaper to gauge the requirements of an important and potentially great city like Peterborough, and be a factor in drawing attention to public needs and in enlisting the interest of capable citizens, and through them encouraging and supporting and stimulating the City Fathers who, with the multiplicity of details have little time left for matters that do not almost thrust themselves upon their attention.

We have made a splendid departure in promoting greater civic rapprochement; and we must keep the spirit alive. The Mayor and Council and citizens will find in the Press of Peterborough willing servants in promoting the highest interests, material moral and æsthetic, of the city.

What is most needed is harmonious cooperation of all these factors. Let the Press be made a mouth piece between the alderman, the industrial commission, all interested citizens and the public by the expression of views and the submission of suggestions. If all are animated with a desire to promote the highest welfare of the city, good results are sure to follow. No one interest has more to gain from a progressive and prosperous city than the press, and no one interest is, with all its errors of judgment and other shortcomings more earnestly desirous to secure effective civic government and patriotic exercise of influential citizenship, than the newspapers of Peterborough.

TOO OLD.

Oh, that the fires of youth still burned
Within my eager veins—
That woo of years I had not learned
Through bitter griefs and pain!
My country needs me! In the stress,
The strain of war, she calls!
Would that my form were strong to press
Where death or glory thrails.

Oh, that the strength of yore were mine.
The tensioned muscle, will,
That zeal of patriot fire divine
Might not, all helpless, thrill!
My country needs me! In the throe
Of honor's strife, she waits;
Alas, the young in years may go—
I stay within the gates!

Mid-age, you torture wantonly
With mock of what might be,
Had feeble flesh and penury
Not seared the soul of me!
My country needs me! For her weal,
Had time not stolen might—
How would I cherish fire and steel,
How glory in the fight!

THE BLINDFOLDING OF BERNSTORFF

Count Bernstorff and his numerous staff of embassy and consulate officials have been enjoying for a few days the hospitality of British protection in the harbor of Halifax. It can hardly have been an agreeable thought for the German ex-ambassador that for his safety in the harbor and on the high seas he is indebted to one of those "scraps of paper" for which his Government, in the case of Belgium, had so much contempt, to the chivalrous generosity of the nation against which he has so long been conspiring at Washington, and that while he was so protected by the British flag, the once vaunted German navy was lying with rusting anchors in the Kiel canal. That Count Bernstorff was glad to be assured of this protection of the British flag may safely be assumed. Yet at the moment when he and his family and staff were being treated with every courtesy by the British officials at Halifax he must have reflected on the difference between that courtesy and the treatment accorded by Germany to British subjects wherever German power prevails. There was, however a limitation to the privileges granted to the German party. Usually the good city of Halifax is delighted to show its visitors the many attractions of its harbor and the approaches thereto. But in this respect Halifax is not doing "business as usual." It is doubtful if any of the beautifully illustrated literature of Halifax was handed to the Count on his arrival. He was not invited to "wait and see" Halifax. To wait, indeed, he was courteously asked, but not to see.

Halifax is one of the most strongly fortified places on the North American continent. Many of the fortification works are so concealed that they do not meet the eye of the ordinary observer. But there are portions of them that are quite visible to all who enter the harbor in daylight. Plans of these fortifications, as they were in former years, are no doubt on file in the Berlin war office, for the Germans were busy for many years in assembling information of that kind. But the fortification works of a few years ago and those of the day are not the same. If any of the Kaiser's rusting ships should come across the sea and make an attack on Halifax, relying on the old plans from the Berlin office, the attacking party would in all probability experience some surprises. At all events it was not deemed advisable to encourage studies of the harbor works by the German party, even from the deck of a neutral vessel. So when the ship bearing the German visitors came within ten miles of the entrance to the harbor in daylight, she was politely met by vessels of the ubiquitous British Navy and escorted out to sea again, to await the coming of darkness. Then as midnight approached, the Scandinavian ship was brought in, passed under the frowning but unseen forts, up through the main harbor, past the city, through the narrows and into the quiet waters of Bedford Basin, where the most prominent object to meet the visitors' eyes on the heights the next morning was the large city edifice known as Rockhead Prison. There, with wireless disabled and all communication forbidden except that of the polite British and Canadian officials engaged in examination of the ship, the cargo and passengers, Count Bernstorff and his party passed several days which they are likely to remember with interest—and possibly with pleasure—during the remainder of their lives. The party will probably be, in some respects, wiser men and women from this visit to Halifax. But they will not be any wiser than before respecting the fortifications of the Canadian Gibraltar. —Journal of Commerce.

NOT JAWBONE, BUT BACKBONE.

Woodrow Wilson ought to realize by this time that the thing most needed by the United States just now, in order to combat German submarine frightfulness, is not jawbone, but backbone.

The Effect of Union on the Great Departments of the Church

By Rev. GEO. C. PIDGEON, D.D., of Toronto.

The Mission Boards of the Church are overwhelmingly in favor of Union. Whenever men face seriously the problem of the extension of the Kingdom of God in home or foreign lands, they feel the need of the help of their brethren, and anything like civil strife is a betrayal of the cause. It is a significant fact that of the 170 missionaries under our Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions only one actually voted against Church Union. Where the need is greatest the desire is strongest for the conservation of our forces.

In the Foreign Field it is not financial pressure that drives toward Union. Under the Comity of Missions, each Church has a district of its own to evangelize. Yet there the need of a united front against the colossal mass of heathendom is most keenly felt. To make any impression on that vast body, all must act together. After converts are won and admitted to the Church, our denominational differences perplex them sorely. Some of the most intelligent of the native Christians in different countries have protested vigorously against imposing western divisions and rivalries on Eastern Churches.

Christianity in these different countries should develop churches which will express each people's peculiar spirit of genius and meet its peculiar needs. The Church of Christ in China should be a united body, as indigenous to the soil as Presbyterianism is to Scotland. So should it be with the Church in India. Their most thoughtful men affirm that Westerners can never understand the mind of India, and, if that be so, we can never construct a Church for India, and we should not try to impose on them competing systems that have grown out of our own struggles and experiences, and therefore belong to us alone. Their own religious life and spirit must take a form of its own. In no other way can they be true to the leadings of the Spirit of God within them. If they are to unite, the home Churches must lead the way.

All these considerations have weight in the Home Field. In addition, we have here the great economic argument for Church Union. Between Quebec and the Pacific Coast the Presbyterian Church has 176 fields where the Methodists are also working. These 176 fields bear the same name on each of our lists. To these the Presbyterian Board voted $42,967 last year and the Methodist Board $51,395. That is to say, about one-eighth of our entire Home Mission revenue goes to support causes that overlap Methodist congregations. This statement, however, needs amplification. In addition to the 176 places mentioned, there are over 50 others where the two churches cover the same territory but call their congregations by different names. ... the names are different in the lists, it is impossible to secure exact statistics. On the other side of the account there is the consideration,—that the village where the missionary resides and by which the field is named is sometimes only a centre for a group of preaching stations and overlapping at the centre may not mean overlapping at outside points. The money wasted in the one case may be counterbalanced by the money supplied in the other, so that the statement still stands that one-eighth of our Home Mission money goes into work that duplicates that of a sister denomination.

These figures do not take into account the larger amounts raised by the fields themselves for their own support. Add these, and the situation is more serious, and the argument for joining forces still stronger.

Now, no one would object to this expenditure if it were to maintain anything vital. Recently an anti-unionist reproached a Western man with advocating Union because he was too mean to support his Church. "It is your differences that are not worth paying for," was his retort. This is just the point. For years we have been co-operating with the Methodists. In hundreds of places one has withdrawn, leaving the other in full charge. In not one instance has it ever been suggested that any vital truth or principle was imperilled by such withdrawal. Each assumed that the interests of the Kingdom of God would be as faithfully and efficiently guarded by the one as by the other. Then when nothing vital separates them why maintain separate organizations?

Further, one would not object to rival congregations even then if the cause of Christ in the community were strengthened by them. On the contrary, each weakens the other. In one place after the churches had united, the attendance at the Union services was 50% greater than the attendance at both churches before and there was an enthusiasm and success in their work previously unknown. The united church can then become a community centre and exert an influence in its life utterly beyond the capacity of the struggling causes that preceded it. "The Churches are the only divisive influence among us" is a statement often heard. "In everything else we are all together." In a time when the community spirit is possessing our people, especially in the newer districts this tells heavily against the progress of true religion.

Both in the Home and Foreign fields, therefore, the interests of the Kingdom of God demand the Union of the Churches. Not one vital interest will be imperilled thereby, and at all points the cause of Christ will be strengthened.

SEEMS EVERYONE HEARD ABOUT IT

All Want to try new drug that dries up corns so they lift out

Good news spreads rapidly and drug gists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

HIS POTATOES $6 A BUSHEL.

Representative Gerry, of Rhode Island, Has $120 Lot Sent to Washington.

NEWPORT, R. I., March 1. — Although fancy potatoes from Rhode Island are high, Representative Peter Goelet Gerry is true to his home State, and just had twenty bushels shipped to Washington for which he paid exactly $120, or $6 a bushel. The potatoes were raised in the town of Portsmouth, a few miles from Newport.

When the producer was asked if he had potatoes for sale he replied, "Yes, but I reckon I want good money." Portsmouth was a few years ago a great potato raising town, but of late years the farmers have said the crop did not pay.

Try this and see how good it is: Make some mush as usual, salting it well, and let it bubble and pout for several hours on the back of the stove. Then when ready to use have plenty of hot bacon fat in a frying pan, and when it boils drop spoonfuls of the mush into it, to make little fat cakes to be eaten hot.

ROUMANIA'S CAPITAL

The city of Jassy, to which the Roumanian Government and diplomatic corps removed when the Teutons began their victorious advance on Bucharest, is a city of about 100,000 population, and an important trade centre. It is situated in the valley of the Bachui, a tributary of the Pruth, and only a few miles from the latter river, which forms the boundary between Roumania and the Russian province of Bessarabia. This was not Jassy's first experience as a capital, as it was the seat of government of the principality of Moldavia, when the Turks controlled Roumania. From a distance Jassy is an imposing city, and appears to have many times its population, because of the great area covered, due to the fact that most of the houses have large surrounding grounds. In the old Turkish days it was a squalid place, but in the last half century it has more than doubled in population, and has been completely modernized. Jassy is celebrated for its many churches and convents, the metropolitan church of St. Nicholas and the Church of the Three Saints being the most famous of these religious structures.

POTATOES IN HEARSE

Belgian Wit Too Sharp For the Hun —Sometimes

The people of Brussels have not allowed the German occupation to depress them to such an extent that they are unable to enjoy a practical joke at the expense of the invaders. One of their greatest troubles is to supply themselves with potatoes. For the purpose of smuggling a consignment a brewer loaded one of his drays with barrels that held, not beer, but potatoes; and several journeys were made successfully before the trick was discovered. The driver was taken into custody at once, and his employer did not remain long at liberty. His present address is the Prison de St. Gilles.

A still more daring trick proved successful, but only in such a way that it cannot be repeated. A potato merchant conceived the idea of getting his wares to his hungry townsmen by filling with them one of the huge hearses [illegible] that are peculiar to Belgium. Horses draped in black drew it, preceded by croque morts in their long mourning capes and three-cornered hats almost to the gates of the cemetery at Ixelles; but perhaps there was a lack of solemnity about the mourners. At all events, the authorities became suspicious, and the driver was called upon to stop while the hearse was opened. Instead of doing this, he whipped up his horses and drove off at full speed, and another load of potatoes was saved from German clutches!

LORD HUGH'S RETORT

Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., is a politician who is not slow in administering a sharp rebuff to anyone attempting to take a rise out of him. On one occasion the member for Oxford University, who is very tall and slim, was addressing a meeting where the audience were not altogether in sympathy with the speaker's views.

"Go it, telescope," rudely ejaculated a burly laborer.

"My friend is mistaken in applying the term to me," quickly retorted Lord Hugh. "He ought to claim it for himself, for, though he cannot draw me out, I can both see through him and shut him up."

In pre-war days Lord Hugh shone in the House as a staunch upholder of the Establishment of the Church in Wales. So keen was he that he has been described as the "lawyer of the Church."

DIGGERS SAVE THE DAY

Little Known But Vital is Work of Pioneers' Battalion

W. Beach Thomas, with the British army in the field, writes: The prevalence of mud over the battlefield gives double prominence to the pioneer battalions, and too high a tribute cannot well be paid to their work during the later stages of the fighting. They are engineers, without the name. They are amphibious in all possible senses of the word. They can live in an atmosphere of mud and gas fumes. Their proper haunt is No Man's Land and they are busiest at night. At the same time they are infantry, and on occasion their machine guns and rifles have done as noble service as their spades and shovels. Night after night they go where the chief trouble is, and this may mean a tedious wade, a stagger, a wrestle of five or six hours to and from their comparative haven in No Man's Land.

Every sort of enemy must be tackled. On one occasion a company cut a passage through a wood under such conditions that every man among the active workers was physically sick from the reek and brutality of the work. Contempt of shell fire—as other of the elements in which they live—is integral to their business. They move about in the open when every other soul is as far underground as he can get.

The only obvious effect of shell fire is to make them dig rather harder, and all kinds of records have been broken by the miners who are the making of many of the best battalions. How many lives have been saved by expert digging in the later stages of the offensive, how many attacks simplified by the straightening of trenches, is beyond all calculation. Yet perhaps less is known of the pioneers than of any part of the army.

AGED 48 AND 41

Appeal by Father From the Front For Son

A soldier stepped briskly forward at Fulham Tribunal and told the chairman, Alderman Royston Evans, that he was seizing the opportunity while home on leave of appealing for his eighteen-year-old son, a clerk, whom he wanted to stay to look after the home and two younger sons. He had three other sons serving. He was a widower and joined the army when the appeal was made in October, 1914.

Alderman Sainsbury: "How old are you?" "Forty-nine next birthday."

"And how old were you when you joined the army?" "Forty-one."

The tribunal smiled, and the chairman said they would give six months' exemption.

Swiss Military Chief

GEN. ULRICH WILLE

Chief of the General Staff and Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of Switzerland, who has stated many times, whenever rumors of German invasion have arisen, that the armies of the Helvetic Republic will resist to the last all attempts at the violation of the neutrality of the mountain state, "from whatever source the menace may come."

DEMOCRATIC PRINCE

Credit for the splendid successes of the gallant Serb allies in the Balkans is due to the brilliant leadership of their Regent, the Crown Prince Alexander. He has been described as the most democratic ruler in Europe, and this fact naturally makes him extremely popular among his peasant soldiers. His Royal Highness is devoted to his troops, and when on active service insisted on partaking of the same fare as his soldiers. During the evacuation of the Serbian army from Durazzo, after the terrible retreat across the Albanian mountains, Prince Alexander, although badly wounded, refused to leave the quay side until every Serbian soldier had embarked on the transports.

WAS ONCE SWEETHEART OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN?

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—Miss Linnie Cheatham, 76 years old, at one time said to be a sweetheart of Abraham Lincoln, is dead at her home in Winchester, Ill.

Mrs. Cheatham was the daughter of Maj. R. E. Haggard, a veteran of the Mexican and civil wars. Before the Civil War he kept the Eureka tavern near Burlington street in Winchester. It was to this tavern that the lawyers, circuit riders and county officials stopped when court and other business carried them to the county seat.

Linnie Haggard had a good voice and during the evening after supper she entertained the tavern guests with songs. On one of these occasions Abraham Lincoln wrote and dedicated a short poem to Linnie Haggard's voice and inscribed in her album. The album was exhibited at the Panama Pacific exposition.

Right They Were.—Teacher.—"Now, boys, I want to see if any of you can make a complete sentence out of two words both having the same sound to the ear." First Boy—"I can, Miss Smith." Teacher—"Very well, Robert." "Wright right." Teacher — "Very good." Second Boy— "Say, Miss Smith, I can beat that. I can make three words of it— Wright, write right." Third Boy (excitedly)—"Hear this—Wright, write rite right."

There was a Time, Not so Many Years Ago When Little Was Said About "Food Values"

Gradually, however, scientists began finding out that many common ills were directly traceable to the excessive use of certain "foods" which are deprived of a large portion of the mineral salts of phosphorus, iron, calcium, etc.—food elements absolutely essential to life.

These facts led, some twenty years ago, to the making of GRAPE-NUTS, a food rich in these mineral elements. This splendid food, made from whole wheat and barley, supplies perfectly the wonderful "food values" of these grains lacking in the ordinary dietry,

GRAPE-NUTS is most delicious! Eaten with cream, as it usually is, it is an ideally balanced food and should be served daily

"There's a Reason" For

Grape-Nuts

Food prices may soar, but there has been no change in price, quality, or size of package of GRAPE-NUTS. This is also true of Postum, Instant Postum and Post Toasties, also made by the manufacturers of GRAPE-NUTS.

A Word Of Thanks

I desire to express my most sincere appreciation of the splendid patronage received from the public on the Opening Day of my Forced-Out Sale. From the moment the doors were opened this morning a continuous overflow of buyers crowded the store, and our increased staff of salespeople had their work cut out for them.

To-morrow and Following Days

There will be no let-up to the deluge of Bargains; and we hope to merit a continued run of "crowded houses" every day until every vestige of the stock is sold.

Thanking the public for their hearty co-operation in helping to relieve the undesirable situation I have been placed in, Sincerely yours

57th CHAPTER I.O.D.E. HAS HAD BUSY YEAR

Reports Read at the Annual Meeting Yesterday Show the Completion of Successful Twelve Months' Painstaking Work.

MANY SOCKS KNIT

The annual meeting of the 57th Regt. Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A., Mrs. Duncan Walker, the Regent, presiding.

The reports of the different officers were read and showed the completion of a very successful year of much painstaking, unselfish work.

The work had been carried on largely by Standing committees on the various departments of work, and special committees when any special plans for raising funds, etc., were being carried out.

The urgent call for immediate practical help in supplying the needs of our men has received the first attention, but at the same time the work of keeping in touch with the families left behind has not been neglected, and some time was even found for the study of questions relating to the war.

The Visiting committee with Mrs. W. Sharpe as convenor, endeavoured to call on the families of the members of the 57th Regt. and others who have suffered bereavement and convey to them the sympathy of the Chapter, Mrs. Sharpe reported having made 339 visits.

Working along with this committee was the Flower committee under the convenorship of Miss Maude Rush. Flowers have been sent to the homes of the bereaved families with notes expressing sympathy and these silent comforters have done good work.

Besides this the Hospital committee, with Mrs. T. A. S. Hay as convenor, visited any soldiers in the hospitals, supplying them with books, magazines and fruit, and most important of all with personal sympathy and good cheer, 103 men were visited and 273 calls made. Mrs. Hay is to be especially commended for her unselfish and faithful work.

The Tea Room committee has done splendid work in carrying on arrangements so that the tea room has been open all year, on Thursday afternoons, except for a short time during the very warm weather.

In November the tea room was moved from the Turnbull building to the Masonic dining hall, as the Turnbull Co. wished to open up a new department on the fifth floor. The hearty thanks of the Chapter is due them for the many kindnesses shown the Chapter while in the building.

Since September the tea room has been under a committee with Miss Flora Davidson as convenor and this arrangement has proved very satisfactory.

As on other years, the schools were visited on Empire day and the graves of deceased soldiers decorated.

On May 24th our Chapter assisted in the celebration at the Exhibition grounds by the 93rd Battalion, operating a booth from which a splendid sum was realized. This of course, was handed over to the Battalion.

On [illegible] booth was operated [illegible] on the occasion of [illegible] celebration.

[illegible] spring a chain of [illegible] from which over $[illegible]

In [illegible] sort was given in the Royal theatre, a neat sum being netted from this.

Following this, a melting pot was arranged and the people of the city were asked to contribute odds and ends of silver, gold—in fact, metals of all kinds. The old silver which was saleable was sold, and the remainder as scrap material.

Mr. N. W. Rowell was secured in November to give his lecture on his visit to the front. This was much enjoyed and a good sum realized.

At present an autograph quilt is being made which is to be sent to Canon Davidson, and arrangements are under way for the systematic collection of scrap paper as a source of revenue.

In regard to educational work, little time was available. In June Miss Marion Rush read an excellent paper on Kitchener, and Mrs. Neal another on "The Austro-Hungarian Position in the Present War," and in November Mrs. Widdifield gave a paper on "The Origin and Work of the I.O.D.E."

The Treasurer's report was a very flattering one. Monies spent for patriotic purposes were as follows:

Wool for socks	$ 800.56
British Sailors' Relief Fund	25.00
British Red Cross	15.00
French Relief	25.00
Christmas gifts for men overseas (Miss Plummer)	50.00

Madam Regent,—I have the honour to present herewith my annual report of work done by the Knitting committee during the past year as follows:

Number of socks on hand beginning of year	302
Number of socks received	1,701
Total	2,003

Wool was supplied to 65 knitters as required, being given out each Wednesday between 3 and 5 p.m. at the Y.M.C.A., and socks were returned at the same place.

The following shows the disposition of socks:

Secours National	150 pairs
Miss Plummer for Can. soldiers in the trenches	100 pairs
Prisoners of war at Christmas	42 pairs
Sent direct to our men in the trenches	1,313 pairs
Number on hand	46 pairs
Total	2,003 pairs

Referring to the 93rd Battalion shower, in addition to the 100 pairs of socks as stated above, various sums of money were contributed by which wool was purchased and knit into socks, also contributions of socks not included in the above.

The thanks of the committee are due to all the knitters who have worked so faithfully for the cause, to St. Paul's Auxiliary, the Morning Musical Club, the Women Teachers' Guild, the Thursday Club, the ladies of Bridgenorth, Stewart Hall and Trinity Church for contributions of socks, to individuals who have donated socks and money and to the secretary and management of the Y.M.C.A. for the use of a comfortable room and also for their many kind attentions.

And the Convenor wishes to express her warmest thanks to her co-workers on the committee, Mrs. M. Comstock and Miss F. Gladman, and also Mrs. J. Sharpe.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Pretty Vassar College Girl In Individual Marriage

Pretty twenty-one-year-old Eleanor Taylor, as attractive a girl as ever helped carry the Daisy Chain at Vassar College, has given prosaic Greenwich Village its latest excitement. From the quiet of the halls of the ancient seat of learning she has walked with bold and undaunted step into the very centre of the "Village" Bohemians. What has she done? She has entered into the latest of marital contracts with Benjamin Marsh, war correspondent, radical and seventeen years her senior, in what now becomes famous as the 'individual marriage."

For it became known only the other day that Miss Taylor and Marsh were made one on the last day of 1916 in the Municipal Chapel by P. J. Scully, the City Clerk, who never asks questions, and therefore didn't know he was making history when he said:—"Bless you, my children," or whatever is said after a marriage in the Municipal Building. But inasmuch as the ceremonial part of the "individual marriage" is the same as any other, it was none of Mr. Scully's business anyway.

The "individual" clause of the contract was added when Miss Taylor and Mr. Marsh—not Mr. and Mrs. Marsh—found themselves sipping tea in the cheerful home they had previously fixed up at No. 11 Vendam St., New York City, one of those unostentatious little thoroughfares on the environs of Washington Square.

The clause that makes a marriage an "individual" one is nothing to be scoffed at by the struggling artist who finds both ends hard to meet. True, it robs him of what many men glory in—dominion over his spouse—but it makes life less worrisom. It seems that the wife is to retain her individual rights, including everything. She does not even have to give up her name, her position, her thought, her work; nor does such a marriage permit a husband to support his wife. She supports herself, and Miss Eleanor Taylor and Benjamin C. Marsh are carrying their contract out to the letter.

Listen to what the bride of the first "individual" wedding has to say:

"If 'obey' was in my marriage contract I didn't hear it.

"An 'individual' marriage means a wife retains her individual thoughts, works, beliefs, and above all, her own name.

"That husband and wife each contribute an equal amount for the support of the household.

"I believe in individuality, hence I had to give an individual wedding.

"If, when marrying, I assumed my husband's name, people would only think of him when addressing me as Mrs. Benjamin C. Marsh.

"I pay for my own laundry, my meals and my car fare.

"The fact that Mr. Marsh and I disagree on some phases of life make our married life happier.

"For a married woman to retain her name is one step nearer the individual life for women."

A CONTENTED CITY

THAT IS WHAT THE AUSTRALIANS CALL ADELAIDE

Adelaide's unusual plan—a business section surrounded by a zone of 2,000 acres of park lands, beyond which are the residential sections—seems designed to put business cares, recreation, and quiet home life in separate compartments. The organisation of city life to allow for leisure—a feeling more prevalent in Adelaide than in Melbourne, or even in Sydney, and almost unknown in American cities—is partly responsible for the universal impressions among visitors that Adelaide ranks high in general culture.

Both climate and the high quality of the South Australian pioneers are also factors which have helped to make Adelaide such a desirable place of residence. Those who are attracted by the climate, people, and manner of life of the foothill cities of Southern California, who care for out-of-door life and flowers and fruit, and wish to spend week-ends in nearby mountains or at the seashore, would feel at home in Adelaide.

Most writers on Australia profess to see differences in types and manners in the three leading cities of the Commonwealth, and the natives feel sure that differences exist. Melbourne is "hustling"; Sydney is "easy going"; Adelaide is "solid" and "contented." On the basis of short acquaintance these characterisations seem as unreal as "dead" Philadelphia or "provincial" Boston would to an Australian traveler. In the American sense, no Australian city is hustling: all are easy going and contented; all are doing much business in an orderly efficient manner. As places for residence they have few competitors among the cities of the United States—National Geographic Magazine.

FOUR PEOPLE ARE DROWNED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 1.—Four persons met death in the icy waters of the Harbour early to-day when the taxicab in which they were riding plunged over the bulkhead at the foot of Quay street.

THEY MEAN TO KNOW NEXT TIME.

A report by the Prussian Ministry of Education on "foreign studies," the result of an investigation began in February, 1914, has just been published in Germany, and it contains at least one passage of decidedly curious interest—so curious that one cannot help wondering why it should have been allowed to come out at just this time. It begins with a statement that the Germans will become a "world people," not through anything done abroad by their Consuls and diplomats, but only "when our academic youth adapt themselves to the new tasks of the Empire and fill themselves with world-political thinking." Then, it seems, "will the necessary ground be provided in Germany for the labour of the German pioneers in foreign countries in the economic and kultural spheres." There follows this truly significant sentence—a clear confession of what has often been declared by non-German critics to be the fatal defect in German efficiency:

The war has made plain to those who did not know it how terrible our ignorance of foreign thinking has been, and how bitterly we need scientific understanding of the present time.

Germany's failure to foresee that England would enter the war is, of course, the greatest of proofs that this statement is true, but the mistakes of her propagandists in the United States in 1914 and for a year or more later illustrate the same thing. That the errors then committed are realized by the draftsmen of the report is clear, for, continuing, they write:

Our field is the world. Every member of a university must regard it as a duty of honour to inform himself, whether in economics, law, or politics, and to make up his mind about the great problems of world politics and world economics. The judgment of questions of foreign politics according to our domestic points of view, which has been seen even during the war, can be overcome only if we make a thorough scientific training about foreign countries a goal of our national education policy. The necessary consequences will be better possibilities of education and more understanding and help for Germans abroad from the Germans at home. Then a German "Kultur" policy in foreign countries will be possible on a greater scale than hitherto.

The last phrase has obvious reference to what may be expected, in certain contingencies, as to German activities "after the war." Is it a warning or a threat?—New York Times.

CAULIFLOWER-HUNTINGTON

Drain a cooked cauliflower, separate into flowerets and pour over the following sauce: Mix the yolks of two eggs, one quarter cupful cream, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoonful nutmeg and the juice of one-half lemon. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Add two tablespoonfuls butter bitby bit, and when melted serve at once.

Forks in particular, because of their construction, are difficult to cleans; thoroughly and should be washed with care.

BIG FOOD VALUE IN CORMEAL

Board of Health, in Bulletin, Gives Comparison of Nourishment in Various Edibles

NEW YORK.—Vegetables, like onions, cabbage, cauliflower, turnips, lettuce and carrots, produce very little energy for the body as compared with bread, corn meal, rice and dried beans, says the Board of Health in a bulletin issued for the education of housewives.

The food units in a pound not counting the waste in preparation for the table, are as follows:

Celery, 85; cucumbers 80; lettuce, 90; onions, 235; carrots, 210; cauliflower, 140; cabbage, 145; bread, 1,215; cornmeal, 1,650; rice 1,630; dried beans 1,620.

The great value of fresh vegetables, says the bulletin, lies in the mineral salts which they contain. Among these are salts of iron, phosphorous and lime, a liberal supply of which is necessary to health, although life may be sustained for months without them.

Mayor Mitchel's Food Supply Committee, of which George W. Perkins is chairman, gave out a pamphlet called "Facts About Rice." It says that rice contains more strength giving material than potatoes, and can be used in place of potatoes. Potatoes are three-quarters water, while rice has practically no water. Potatoes are one-fifth starch, while rice is more than three-quarters starch, and starch gives heat and strength to the body. The pamphlet gives eighteen ways for the preparation of rice.

Normal School Literary Society

The Normal School Literary Society held its meeting on Monday afternoon. The programme was as follows:

Opening chorus.

"Hill Top Oracle" read by Mr. Bigelow.

Illustrated Lecture by Mrs. Douglas in "Y.W.C.A. work in India and Japan."

National Anthem.

KITCHEN KINKS.

Common tasks are important, because they are common. For example, washing dishes. Everybody may not wash dishes, but they eat from dishes that someone has washed.

Properly to cleanse dishes and eating utensils, they should be washed and rinsed in boiling water. Washing in lukewarm water, even with soap, is not sufficient.

There are numerous communicable diseases caused by germs which are present in the mouths of those who are afflicted. People in the various stages of tuberculosis, diphtheria, syphillis, and so forth, may transfer disease germs from their mouths to eating utensils. Unless these are sterilised by boiling water, they are a source of danger to whoever may use them subsequently.

In public eating houses exceptional attention should be given to the sterilization of eating utensils and the drinking glasses. Care in the choice and preparation of food is easily offset by careless handling of the service.

One on the 'English."—The matter-of-fact English, as we sometimes call them, contrive to get their jokes even out of situations dealing with the war. For example:—An English milkman had just finished his morning's round, and was returning home as he was addressed by an enlisting sergeant. "Well, my man," said the sergeant, "would you like to serve the king. It would be the making of you." "That I would," said the milkman, very excited. "How much does he take a day."

Ammunition column 2, and the Cobourg Heavy Battery, 8.

Recruiting for the infantry units of the district during the first two weeks of February showed the following returns: 230th Forestry Battalion, 72 men; 235th, Belleville, 35; 240th, Renfrew, 92; 247th, 15; 252nd, Liddsay, 38; 253rd, Kingston, 77; 254th, Belleville, 16.

Major Campbell stated that Col. Ackerman had been very particular in the quality of recruits received. There would probably be fewer discharges from the 247th than from some other battalions. All the men appeared fit to go overseas, but the fact remained that the 247th had made the poorest showing during the past fourteen days of the units in this district. At a former meeting he had addressed in Peterborough when the new battalion was about to be organsed here Major Campbell said he had been impressed by the enthusiasm manifested by the representative citizens who attended it and he had left with a feeling of confidence of the success of the new battalion.

Passing tactfully and candidly over the first appointments to the command of the 247th, Major Campbell stated that Col. Ackerman had taken charge on Nov. 8. The latter had employed every means to secure recruits and the assistance of the citizens. "I was told to-day," the Major said, "that Col. Ackerman has done everything that could be done."

Continuing, he said: "No matter what plan the Government may adopt within the next month or six weeks, we are still under the voluntary system. We have no alternative but to carry on the work. The situation with your battalion is exceedingly grave. It has come to the question: is the 247th Battalion to be or not to be. Do you want this battalion to leave Peterborough, to be merged with some other? Do you want it said of Peterborough that it fell down in recruiting when other battalions around it continued to grow?"

If the 247th were broken up, Major Campbell stated that it would be then too late to profit by conscription.

THE OPERATION OF THE MILITIA ACT.

A question that was being generally asked just now was how the Militia Act would be carried out. The officer of each regiment would first be notified and he, in turn, would carry the announcement to whatever officers and non-coms. remained. If, for example, only 200 men responded and the Regiment in peace times should muster 500 men and at war strength 1,000, the Militia Act would call out sufficient men to complete its strength. This was a form of conscription. The men would be put to drill, home guard duty, and similar work. They might, for instance, be sent to Hull or some other place, and under the particular work demanded of them, Major Campbell was confident that from 60 to 80 per cent. would be glad to serve in an overseas unit in preference to three months of home-guard duty.

JUDGE HUYCKE.

The situation was a perfectly disgraceful one, said Judge Huycke, who added that he could not trust himself to voice his feelings. The local condition was certainly not attributable to Col. Ackerman and his staff of officers. They had the implicit confidence of every one in Peterborough. Judge Huycke said he did not know what could be done. "We can never get over this disgrace as long as we exist." There were men in stores, offices and factories who were as ready to employ eligible men as they were to employ returned soldiers and girls who could do the work. There were men who had promised to support the new battalion, but had fallen down in the fulfillment of that promise. With a hip-hurray to keep alive the military service six months ago they had since never turned a finger.

Judge Huycke said he did not want to see the Militia Act conscripts or convicts marching up and down Peterborough. "Take the 1,000 or 1,500 eligibles by the scruff of the neck and bring them in whether they want to or not, then trot them off out of here to Hull or any other place. We don't want to see them."

MR. JOSEPH WEARING.

Mr. Wearing said he noticed only two members of the Council present (Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Smith), and only one employer, Mr. A. E. Coulthard. He had called up many citizens and urged them to be present, but most of them had other engagements and some had to curl. It showed how much they had the interests of the city at heart to say nothing of the Empire. Men occupying the highest places, who could have got 50 or 100 recruits had done nothing.

Ald. Dobbin explained that the Mayor and a number of aldermen were in Toronto and the City Clerk and other aldermen were in Montreal in conection with prospective industries.

"For the Germans to take over, I suppose," commented Judge Huycke.

COL. STEVENSON.

"Why is the Government employing fifty able-bodied men, I am told, in the C.G.E. as manition makers," asked Col. Arthur Stevenson, "at wages three, four and five times more than they are offering soldiers." Other factories were doing the same thing. "Is it not possible to suggest to the Imperial Munitions Board that they send fewer contracts here," asked Col. Stevenson.

Throughout the meeting the manufacturers were raked fore and aft. Col. Ackerman stated that they had not lived up to promises not to employ men of military age. One glaring case was cited.

J. A. Aylmer stated that the decline in recruiting was not a local condition. It prevailed throughout the country and was a result of the lack of education of the youth to patriotic sacrifice.

Capt. Belton pointed out that the past three years should have provided for any previous deficiency in education.

Mr. Aylmer moved a resolution, seconded by Mr. R. B. Rogers that the Government be requested to pass in the immediate future a measure that would compel the eligible men to take up arms in the defence of the country.

Maj. Campbell stated that 375 names of eligibles had been handed out in the first batch counted.

Mr. A. B. Coulthard said that manufacturers of war supplies believed their men were exempt on account of the nature of their work.

Col. Campbell—Military men think that too large a proportion of eligibles are on munitions work that older men and women could do.

Col. Miller recalled the fact that many men had gone from Peterborough for whom the city had not received credit. The willing men have gone and a spirit of apathy seemed to prevail just now. Nearly all of the officers and men of the old 57th had gone. Hence no aspersions could be cast on them.

Judge Huycke moved, seconded by Ald. Smith that the meeting regretted the danger of losing the battalion and requested the military authorities not to take any immediate action and the citizens present pledged themselves to work for the ultimate success of the 247th Battalion.

Downright selfishness, Capt. Soden said, kept 1,400 young men here who ought to be in khaki. If the employers wished to materially help recruiting let them place on their sign boards notices that eligible, physically fit men need not apply.

A MAN'S JOB.

Ald. Dobbin said he had seen the manufacture of 6-inch shells made at the Henry Hope, Metal Products and Peterborough Machine Company plants and was confident women were not physically capable to replace men in its performance. The rough, uncut ingots weigh 140 pounds. They have to be lifted by the men from machine to machine and are turned out weighing 96 pounds. Only one factory, the Wm. Hamilton is producing 32-pound shells. Mr. Dobbin stated that returned men had found this work too laborious, and only good, strong men could handle the 96 pounders. Too much was being made of the proposition that women could replace men on munitions. They could turn out nose pieces, bands and light parts but not the bulky shells.

Mr. J. C. Stook suggested that the factories on war supplies be nationalised and operated by the Government.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford moved, seconded by Ald. Dobbin that the Speakers' Patriotic League be a committee to call a conference with manufacturers and merchants to ask them to get behind the 247th Battalion.

At Chatham a soldier was brought before the officer for selling part of his kit, when the following dialogue took place:

Colonel— "Now, Private Murphy, why did you sell your boots?"

Private Murphy—"I'e worn 'em for two years, sorr, and thought they were my own property."

Colonel—"Nothing of the sort, sir. Those boots belong to the King."

Private Murphy—"I'm sure I'm sorry, sorr, but I didn't know His Majesty took twelves!"

No Medicine As Good For Little Ones

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. The first few doses make her realize there is nothing to equal them in making baby well and keeping him well. Concerning them Mrs. C. E. Stilwell, Winthorpe, Sask., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and have found them so good for my little ones that I always keep a box in the house." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DUTCH MAD, BUT HELPLESS

Cannot Enforce Reparation For Sinking of Large Freighters.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 27.—There is no apparent lessening of the popular anger which has found expression over the spectacular German attack upon the flotilla of Dutch vessels. Indeed, there is evidence of its intensification as the impotence of Holland to enforce reparation is realized.

It is stated the nine large merchantmen that Holland lost in the course of the disastrous week were insured for war risks aggregating 40,000,000 florins. Most of the underwriters were Swiss, but some insurance was also placed with Scandinavian, German and Dutch companies, many of which are hard hit, and it is doubtful whether they will be able to meet their liabilities.

ENGLAND'S "STATE OF MIND"

A remarkable anonymous article, ostensibly written by a British soldier returned from the trenches appeared in the London Nation of October 21, 1916. It immediately attracted unusual attention in England, and it was said that the military authorities made special effort to learn the author's identity. These efforts, however, were apparently unsuccessful. Whether the author of the article was just in his estimate of British public opinion at home or not, those in power were evidently much perturbed by his contemptuous comments on what he regarded as the British state of mind.

This writer described his own feelings on visiting England after some months at the front as those of a "visitor among strangers whose attentions are kindly, but whose modes of thought I neither altogether understand nor altogether approve." The people, he says, with whom he really is at home are to be found in "the England that's not an island or an empire, but a wet, populous dike stretching from Flanders to the Somme."

This soldier makes these direct allegations:

A Changed Country.

"As we exchange views, one of you assumes as possible or probable something that seems to us preposterous, or dismiss as too trivial for comment what appears to us a fact of primary importance. You speak lightly, you assume that we shall speak lightly, of things, emotions, states of mind, human relationships and affairs which are to us solemn or terrible. You seem ashamed, as if they were a kind of weakness, of the ideas which sent us to France, and for which thousands of sons and lovers have died. You calculate the profits to be derived from 'War after the War,' as though the unspeakable agonies of the Somme were an item in a commercial proposition. You make us feel that the country to which we've returned is not the country from which we went out to fight! And your reticence as to the obvious physical facts of war! And your ignorance as to the sentiments of your relations about it!"

The Writer proceeds to give some of the reasons which seem to him to account in a measure for the fact that the British civilian population and the army at the front have drifted apart in ideals and modes of thought. He shows that when men have taken up arms, not as a profession or because forced to do so by law, but under the influence of some emotion or principle, they tend to be ruled by the idea that compelled them to enlist, long after that idea has yielded among civilians to some other ruling passion. This is partly because the soldier is less exposed than the civilian to new intellectual influences and so is likely to retain firmly or even to deepen the impressions that made him a soldier in the first instance.

"We see things which you can only imagine. We are strengthened by reflections which you have abandoned. Our minds differ from yours, both because they are more exposed to change and because they are less changeable. While you seem—forgive me if I am rude—to have been surrendering your creeds with the nervous facility of a Tudor official, our foreground may be different, but our background is the same. It is that of August to November, 1914. We are your ghosts."

Can Not Bear the Truth.

The veil that hangs between the soldier and the people at home, according to this writer from the trenches, "is not a negative but a positive thing. It is not intellectual; it is moral. It is not ignorance (or I should not mention it); it is falsehood." "The people," he says, "have chosen to make for themselves an image of war not as it is, but of a kind which, being picturesque, flatters the appetite for novelty, for excitement, for easy admiration, without troubling with masterful emotions." According to this writer, the people have chosen to make this image because they do not like or cannot bear the truth; because they are afraid of what may happen to their souls if they expose them to the inconsistencies and contradictions, the doubts and bewilderment which lie beneath the surface of things.

Interpreting the spirit of the army, this soldier declares that the men who have spent a winter in the trenches do not describe war as "sport."

"It is a load that they carry with aching bones, hating it, and not unconscious of its monstrosity, hoping dimly that by shouldering it now they will save others from it in the future, looking back with even an exaggerated affection to the blessings of peace.

"They carry their burden with little help from you. For an army does not live by munitions alone, but also by fellowship in a moral idea or purpose. And that you cannot give us. You cannot give it to us because you do not possess it. You are, I see, more divided in soul than you were when I became a soldier, denouncing the apostles of war, yet not altogether disinclined to believe that war is an exalting thing, half implying that our cause is the cause of humanity in general and democracy in particular, yet not daring boldly to say so, lest later you should be compelled to fulfill your vows, more complacent and self-sufficient in proportion as you are more confident of victory and have less need of other nations, trusting more in the great machine which you have created and less in the unseen forces which, if you will let them, will work on your side."

SEES NO HOPE OF LOWER PRICES SOON

Dr. Emerson Says Study of Food Values Would Help Situation—Think Wage Adjustment Will Be Necessary to Enable Public to Meet Conditions.

NEW YORK.—Holding out little hope of an immediate decline in the price of foods, but saying that greater value may be obtained by a fair amount of study of nutritive values, Dr. Haven Emerson, Health Commissioner, made public the results of an investigation of the high cost of living which he has had made throughout the city for Mayor Mitchel. Dr. Emerson recommends extension of the school lunch system and urges vigorous support of measures now before the Legislature, such as permitting the sale of skim milk and bob veal in this city. He says the latter two foods are exceedingly valuable and there is no good sanitary or health reason for excluding their sale.

Dr. Emerson believes that many a family of small income is living too luxuriously and not getting adequate returns from money spent on food because they do not study relative food values. His report suggests that cornmeal, rice and beans could be substituted for much of the meats, potatoes, onions and other staples that are now held at high prices.

Increases of exports have been enormous in the last three years, ranging from thirty-six per cent. in the case of mutton to as high as 1,347 per cent. in the case of cheese. The export of onions alone— the article which started the food riots on the east side —showed a decrease.

LESS REAL NEED THAN IN YEARS

And it is interesting in this connection that Dr. Emerson maintains that there has been no sudden or recently developed emergency in the food prices and that there is less dependency and real need than the city has known in years. The Commissioner holds that the present economic condition cannot be changed by any financial relief given at this time by the city, as "there is no unusual amount of perishable goods held in the cold storage plants of the city and retail dealers are not charging more than a fair profit.

But Dr. Emerson makes the observation that "unless the high prices are reduced and controlled, or wages increased where the incomes of families are under $800 a year, the health will be jeopardized."

The investigation by the Health Department men took in the increase in the exportation of staple articles from 1914 to 1916, the conditions of storage of perishable and retail prices of staple articles in all parts of the city and the economic condition of 2,600 families who have been under the care of the Health Department.

DISCUSSES HEAVY EXPORTATIONS.

The figures show that there has been a great increase in exportation in the last three years, the most notable being the increase in milk products shipped. "As much milk in condensed form was exported from the United States during the last year as would supply New York city for two years. The enormous increase in the exportation of staple articles without a corresponding increase in the production chief reason for the gradually rising prices of food in this country is probably the case of food in this city.

"The amount of perishable food held in the cold storage plants of the city," continued the report, "is no unusual nor is it more than a reasonable margin for safety, in view of the emergencies of weather and freight delivery from a distance. The figures do not indicate that there is any hoarding of food or holding of food for speculative purposes in this city. At this time of year there is always a shortage of eggs and of stored milk and dairy products, which are now down to their seasonal minimum. Within the next four weeks a great increase in the supply of eggs is to be expected and within two months the seasonal increase in milk products may be expected to give substantial relief.

"The prices obtained at six hundred points throughout the city in twelve districts in all boroughs, showing the differences between the wholesale and retail prices, show that in many instances the retailers are selling at cost certain staple articles about which there has been public clamor or complaint of exorbitant prices in the retail stores. The retailers are evidently making no more than a reasonable profit and the difference between the wholesale and retail prices is not unusual and represents the almost inevitable cost of distribution.

LITTLE LOWERING OF WAGES

"In reporting upon the 2,600 families visited by our agents it is important to realize that these are families in which there is at present some cause of economic dependency. There is a general reduction in the amount of meat food that is being used in these families and some, but decidedly less reduction, in the amount of vegetable and farinaceous food. In about one-half of the families there is reported to be a slight deterioration in the quality of food which they are now purchasing. In 373 of the families the wages are found to be less than they were a year ago, and in 2,358 they are the same as or higher than a year ago. There are more members of the household at work than a year ago in about ten per cent of the families. In 594 families in which unemployment was found it was due chiefly to illness or physical unfitness not brought about by the lack of food. In 1,922 there was no complaint of want.

"A close analysis of the food bought and used in these families makes it clear that the selection of food is rather from habit and racial custom than by discrimination or intelligent choice. The purchaser does not take advantage of such economies as are possible, as, for instance, a family upon a $10 a week budget is found to indulge in butter at forty-eight cents a pound, when the same food value and a better quality can be obtained from oleomargarine at twenty-five to thirty cents a pound. Potatoes at eight cents and onions at ten cents a pound are extravagance, when they may be replaced easily in food value by cornmeal, rice and beans of smaller amounts and less cost. In one instance a family of eight, on $15 a week, was found indulging in the luxury of imported Italian cheese at $1 a pound.

WANTS MORE SCHOOL LUNCHES

"I strongly recommend the extension, so far as possible, under the auspices of the city, of the school lunch system, which has been operated with much benefit to the children of many of the elementary schools.

"I urge vigorous support for two measures now before the Legislature which will give relief to this city, namely:

"A bill permitting the sale and distribution of skim milk and a bill to remove the present restriction upon the sale of so-called bob-veal. There is no good sanitary or health reason for excluding these valuable meat foods from the city.

Education through the public press in matters of selection and preparation of food is fundamental and should be encouraged, especially at this time of high prices. The well-to-do may contribute considerably in the reduction of high prices by altering their habits of carelessness and extravagance in their homes.

"In conclusion, I would say that there does not appear to be any sudden or recently developed emergency in the food situation in this city. There is obviously less dependency and real need than has been common for many years past. It is, however, apparent that unless the present high prices of food are reduced and controlled or, as an alternative, the income of families which now maintain themselves on $800 a year or less is increased by raise of wages or through relief agencies there will be a constantly increasing number of people whose health will be jeopardized by their inability to buy sufficiently nourishing food at the present prices."

Dr. Emerson said that as a rule the outdoor workers felt the increase in the price of foods much less than the indoor workers.

CAPTAIN ASHINGTON, "BLUE," IS KILLED AT THE FRONT

One of Finest Athletes Ever Turned Out By England Dies on the Field

LONDON, March 1.—The latest casualty list issued of well known British sportsmen killed and wounded in action on the western front contains the name of one of the finest athletes ever turned out by England in Captain H. S. O. Ashington, of Harrow, and a Cambridge University 'Blue,' who has made the big sacrifice.

His athletic successes began at Harrow, where he won the long cross-country steeplechase and the mile run; but it was at the University sports that he made his name. In 1912 he won the 120-yard hurdles in 17s and the long jump with 23 ft. 1 in. In 1913 he won the hurdles in 16 1-5s. and the half mile in 2m. 1-5s. and beat C. B. Fry's famous record for the long jump—23 ft. 5 in.— which had stood since 1899, by by clearing 23 ft. 5 3-4 in. In 1914 he won the high jump with 5 ft. 8 in. and beat his own record in the long jump with a leap of 23 ft. 6 1-4 in. At the Cambridge Intercollegiate sports in 1913 he won six events —100 yards, 220 yards, high and long jumps, weight and hurdles.

At Olympic Games.

Captain Ashington was one of the English team at the Olympic games at Stockholm in 1912, but failed to win. He went to the front in July, 1915, and a year later was wounded and invalided home, but returned to the firing line in November and doing splendid service, received the command of a company and was gazetted acting captain.

Lieutenant W. L. Beattie, killed, was a well known Yorkshire footballer under Northern Union rules, being one of the best forwards of the Wakefield Trinity Club.

Captain C. McVilly, former Australian amateur sculling champion, who won the diamond sculls at Henley in 1913, has been wounded.

The death in action of one of London's famous soccer footballers is reported in Captain E. A. Ellen, the goalkeeper of the Richmond Association and Crouch End Vampires clubs, while Lieutenant S. F. Johnson, who captained the Westminster School soccer team in 1905-6, prominent in the cricket eleven and a member of the Surrey County Cricket Club, has also fallen.

Sportsmen Promoted.

The rank of major has been given to the following well known sportsmen for conspicuous services in the field:

Brevet Major R. C. S. Waller, who played three-quarter back for the Royal Naval College and United Services and cricket for the Marines and United Services.

Captain G. R. Benson, famous Royal Artillery rider, who won the Irish Militiry Hunters' hurdles at the Kildare hunt meet in 1911.

Captain J. C. Crocker, who won the hurdles at Woolwich and for Woolwich against Sandhurst in 1908.

Captain C. E. D. Bridge, Royal Artillery lightweight rider, placed second in the R. A. Drag lightweights in 1912 and 1913 and winner of the farm 'rs' race on the latter occasion.

Captain R. W. Ling, who was a prominent member of the cricket and football elevens at Bradfield and Woolwich, played at back in the Royal Military Academy soccer team in 1905 and 1906 and was a splendid shot putter, played cricket for the Royal Artillery and forward in the famous Harlequin and Kent County Rugby fifteens.

Captain W. W. T. Massiah Palmer a well known sprinter, who ran for Exeter College in the Oxford University Intercollegiate finals, and for some time a regular competitor in open events in the metropolitan district.

Brevet Major R. S. Ryan, once honourary secretary of the R. A. Drag, who won the Garrison Cup at Woolwich in 1912 and played for the Harrow side which won the Cairo Public Schools Polo Cup in 1913.

Captain M. H. Dendy, the famous polo player, who won the R. A. lightweight steeplechase and the Charger race at Aldershot in 1913.

Captain A. B. Ogle, a well known Royal Military Academy soccer player and hurdler and Royal Engineer and army hockey player.

A Girl's Health

Perhaps you have noticed that your daughter in her "teens" has developed a fitful temper, is often restless and excitable without apparent cause. In that case remember that the march of years is leading her on to womanhood and that at this time a great responsibility rests upon you as a mother. If your daughter is pale, complains of weakness and depression, feels tired out after a little exertion; if she tells you of headaches or backaches, or pain in the side do not disregard these warnings. Your daughter needs the help that only new, rich blood can give, for she is anaemic—that is, bloodless.

Should you notice any of these signs lose no time, but procure for her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or her unhealthy girlhood is bound to lead to unhealthy womanhood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enrich the impoverished blood of girls and women, and by so doing they repair the waste and prevent disease. They give to sickly, drooping girls health, brightness and charm, with color in the cheeks, sparkling eyes, a light step and high spirits. If your daughter shows any signs of anaemia insist that she begins to-day to cure herself by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont.

IF 247th HOLD THEIR LEAD THEY WILL PLAY KITCHENER HERE TUESDAY

If the 247th Battalion are successful in holding their lead of six goals against Hamilton to-morrow night, they will meet the Kitchener seven in the finals. The first game will be played here on Tuesday night next, and the return on Friday in Kitchener, total goals on the round to count, of course.

Bobby Armstrong will be discharged from Nicholls' Hospital this afternoon and will accompany the team to Hamilton, but will be unable to get into to-morrow night's game. His place on the forward line will be taken by Harry Thornton, Evans playing centre. The rest of the team will be in their usual places. The team is in charge of Major O'Flynn and with a number of supporters, will leave on the 7.35 C.P.R. train to-morrow morning.

DENTS HAVE TWO LEAD ON RIVERSIDES

TORONTO, March 1.—Dental H. C. secured a two-goal lead over Riversides A. C. in the first of home-and-home games for the O. H. A. senior championship and the John Ross Robertson Cup at the Arena last night. The winners gained the lead in the second period after they broke a one to one tie. The final count was 3 to 1.

Dentals possessed more speed than last season's champions, and this was apparent in every period. Riversides managed to follow the pace for the first few minutes of each frame, but faded toward the end. Dentals showed a superior attack, and were much more effective around the net. Riversides had thirty-seven shots on goal, as against Dents' twenty-five. In the final period Dents probably set a record for a final game in having only four shots on Collett, but despite this Milan counted once, while Riversides, with nine shots, failed to beat Stewart.

The game was a hard checking affair throughout, and combination was ineffective. What little team play was displayed was shown by Riversides, but none of their combined rushes resulted in a score. The shooting of Riversides was mostly from a considerable distance out. Three out of the four goals scored were of a lucky nature, especially the one by Riversides when Dopp shot from mid-ice.

Both Dopp and Box worked their way through the respective defences, only to have their shots blocked by the net guardians.

The game was free from deliberate rough play and the penalties imposed by Referee Whitehead were all for tripping. Riverside players spent sixteen minutes on the penalty bench, while Dentals incurred only two rests for a total of four minutes. Dopp was the chief offender with four infringements of the rules, and McCaffery came next with two, along with Sheldon of Dentals. No goals were scored while the offenders were in the penalty box.

The only position in which either team showed marked superiority was in goal. Charlie Stewart for Dentals gave one of the most brilliant exhibitions in that position seen on local ice this season. Stewart had 37 shots to handle and was successful in all but one of them. Collett for Riversides had 25 and let three of that number pass him.

The defensive work of both teams was very creditable. Sheldon and Laflamme broke up several dangerous rushes. Merrick was effective for Riversides, and Smith, although playing under the handicap of illness, gave a good account of himself. Box was the speediest player on the ice and his good back-checking was a factor in Dents' victory. Hodgins at left wing improved as the game progressed, and in the second period scored a goal. Milan and Smillie rounded out the Dentals forward line and both played useful hockey.

Parks at rover for Riversides was the mainstay of the losers' forward line and was unfortunate in not scoring. He came up the ice several times, evading practically the whole Dental team, and might have scored on an ordinary goalkeeper. Farr was watched closely by Dentals, and at no time was allowed to get away uncovered. McCaffery and Dopp on the wings gave a good account of themselves. The teams:

Referee—Lawson Whitehead.

LINDSAY COMMENT ON TUESDAY'S HOCKEY GAME

The Lindsay Post has the following comment on Tuesday's game.

NOTES.

That six goals lead looks pretty good, and it's hardly likely that Hamilton will overcome it.

Armstrong was taken to the hospital after the game. He was in a bad way when it started and received a rough passage throughout.

Hamilton had a lot of speed, and displayed good team work, but lacked finish around the nets. At that there is not six goals difference between the two teams.

Peterborough had the breaks in the first and last periods, but they clearly outplayed Hamilton in the second.

The "Gold Dust Twin" defence, Pat Flanagan and Halpin, were unbeatable last night, and kept Hamilton shooting from outside throughout the game.

Nineteen hundred fans witnessed the game. It was a big night for Jack Maharry.

It is reported that Armstrong will be unable to play in the return game at Hamilton. It will hurt the soldiers a lot, but six goals is a big margin.

Reise, the Hamilton defence man, played great hockey. He rushed innumerable times, particularly in the last period, but could not seem to penetrate that little defence.

Jack Adams showed great form last night. He had barrels of speed, and his shooting was both hard and accurate.

National Games and War.

The Canadian national games, lacrosse, hockey, and Rugby, have shown their close relationship to the life of the country by languishing for the duration of the war, except, of course, among the soldiers, the various battalions in Ontario having fought it out for a lacrosse championship during the past summer. The men in khaki also plan to play Rugby and hockey this autumn and winter. Before the war the value of manly amateur sport had been frequently mentioned among Canadians, who believed that the young men of Canada should be urged to play their national games, instead of interesting themselves in professional sport, played largely by men who were not Canadians. The war has demonstrated the place of real sport in a nation, and indicated by contrast that commercialized sport is a foreign element in the Canadian national life. The list of heroes of the athletic field who are laying down their lives for their country grows with every battle. Canada's honor roll contains many names that were famed on the playing field in the years before the war. Only a few facts need be given to indicate that the men who take chances in games in times of peace can be counted upon to respond to the call of their country. The majority of the members of the great Argonaut and Tiger Rugby teams who played just before and during the first war seasons have joined the colors, and several well-known men have paid the supreme sacrifice. In the season of 1915 a junior and a juvenile lacrosse team in Toronto won Ontario championships. Eleven out of the fourteen of the men connected with the Beaches Junior Champions and ten out of the twelve men connected with the St. Simon's Juvenile Champions—all the latter have just turned eighteen years of age—are now on the way to the front. These figures alone indicate why the national sports have been put aside until the end of the war, and the examples of patriotic response among the young athletes could be multiplied endlessly.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have been reading with great interest letters written by soldiers' wives, who are finding it hard to get along on the paltry sum which they receive. Then again I noticed one by a soldier's wife who had sufficient. This soldier's wife must have something to learn on other than what she receives from the government. Here are a few items which no family can do without:

Now take for instance a wife with three children, two of whom are attending school.

The costs for one month, as close as can be figured are:—

A Dutiful Son.

R. Caton Woodville in his book, "Random Recollections," gives some of his experiences in Albania.

Mr. Woodville wanted a certain man to come and cook for him on a journey. The man was doubtful whether he could leave his mother, who was very old and infirm, but he said he would try to follow Mr. Woodville in a day or so. Eventually he arrived, and Mr Woodville asked what arrangements he had made about his mother.

"He replied," says Mr Woodville, "that the old woman was very decrepit and that she could not last long. I knew all that, but I wanted to know what he had done for her during his absence. He went on telling me how hard it was to get a living until at last I got impatient. Then he told me quite calmly that as his mother was so old and useless he had thought it best to poison her and that he had stopped behind, as a good son should, to have her buried properly."

Mr. Woodville adds that the man was such a liar that he didn't believe he had done anything of the sort, though he was quite capable of it.

Diplomacy.

"I told her she was the sweetest woman in the world."—San Francisco Chronicle.

STRICKLAND-HILL

In the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties, one of the most interesting and charming weddings ever solemnized in Peterborough took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Captain and Mrs. W. H. Hill, 303 Brock street, when Aimee Agnes became the bride of James Fordyce Strickland, Lieutenant 247th Battalion.

The lofty and handsome reception room in which the ceremony was performed, looked its best with shaded lights and banks of huge palms and daffodils. The arch under which the bride stood was a glowing mass of daffodils intertwined with smilax. The bride looking very lovely in her elaborate Paris model travelling suit of Alice blue gabardine and cream satin embroidered collar, maize georgette crepe blouse with touches of Alice blue, and small tuli- hat to match her suit, grey suede boots and gloves, and wearing a corsage bouquet of sunburst roses and violets, entered the room on the arm of her father, Captain W. H. Hill, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by her sister, Miss Jean Hill. She was unattended. Rev. Robt.. Pozue performed the ceremony.

After the signing of the register during which Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered, a dainty buffet wedding breakfast was served. The dining table on which the breakfast was set, was given a decidedly military touch by its covering of a huge Union Jack. In the centre the bridal cake stood, and was banked about with enormous bouquets of red American beauties. Another charmingly military effect was given in the cutting of the cake, which was done by the bride with the groom's sword. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful paltinum and diamond pendant. This and a brooch, an heirloom, the gift of the bride's grandmother, were worn by the bride.

After the customary speeches and toasts to the bride and the absent heroes, Captain Harold Hill and Captain Strickland, the brothers of the contracting parties who are on active service, the happy couple left for the 3.40 train, where scores of the young people of the city, amongst whom Lieut. and Mrs. Strickland were extremely popular, were waiting with showers of confetti and rice.

Dummer Man Shoots Wild Cat On His Farm

"You've got to quit chasing my dog around," was something of the remonstrament that aroused Mr. Frank Harding of Dummer, against a wild cat that invaded his farm last Friday. While working around the barn Mr. Harding heard his hound barking in a fight with some other animal, and getting a gun, discovered a husky wild cat. The first shot clipped one ear and a second crashed through the cat's eye. Mr. Harding brought the carcass into the city to-day to dispose of it.

The Folly of Taking Digestive Pills

A Warning to Dyspeptics.

The habit of taking digestive pills after meals makes chronic dyspeptics of many thousands of men and women because artificial digestents, drugs and medicines have practically no influence upon the excessively acid condition of the stomach contents which is the cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The after dinner pill merely lessens the sensitiveness of the stomach nerves and thus gives a false sense of freedom from pain. If those who are subject to indigestion, gas, flatulence, belching, bloating, heartburn, etc., after eating would get about an ounce of pure bisurated magnesia from their druggist and take a teaspoonful in a little water after meals, there would be no further necessity for drugs or medicines because bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes stomach acidity, stops food fermentation and thus insures normal, painless digestion by enabling the stomach to do its work without hindrance.

WONDERFUL FEATS OF MODERN SURGERY

Moulding New Faces For Soldiers, Removing Bone and Muscle From Parts of the Body For Grafting

Somewhere in England there has come into being a hospital—or, to be quite accurate, a large and increasing sector of a hospital—which exists solely for the restoration of faces shattered and disfigured by the war. The surgeon in charge of these wards is one whose speciality is the plastic surgery of the face. In co-operation with him there works a dental surgeon whose task is to re-create the bony framework of jaws that are either fractured or partly missing. The technique is somewhat as follows. Each case is first of all photographed and then X-rayed, so that the precise nature of the deformity may be correctly estimated. In this hospital a pastel drawing is also executed, for it has the extraordinarily good fortune to possess on its medical staff a physician who is also a well known artist.

How Grafting is Done

In the operative treatment of these cases one main fact has to be borne in mind. Within certain limits bone is interchangeable with bone, muscle with muscle, skin with skin. The bone forms a framework, the muscle a pad, and the skin a protective covering, and the art of plastic surgery consists in taking pieces of bone, muscle, and skin from parts where they can be spared and grafting on parts where their existence is imperatively necessary.

In such cases a piece of rib cartilage will be transplanted to form the bridge of a new nose, a piece of rib to form a new lower jaw, and a large flap of skin from the arm to cover in and protect the newly created parts. The technique of transplanting a skin flap consists in detaching a piece of skin of the appropriate size and shape, generally from the inner surface of the arm, but leaving it attached by a narrow strip of skin, so as to preserve its blood supply.

Three Weeks in One Position

The flap, twisted on its axis, is then placed over the gap on the face to be covered in, which has already been "freshened up" so that the graft may take, and the arm is strapped to the side of the head, where it has to be kept for three weeks. This is no light trial for the patient. When union has occurred, the narrow strip of skin still attaching it to the arm is severed. The results of these operations and the skill with which what seems, to the layman at least, a perfectly hopeless condition can be repaired must be seen to be appreciated. There are inevitable limits placed on the hand of man. But one can make a perfectly presentable new face.

WHY DISRUPT AUSTRIA

To Save East From Domination of Pan-Germanism

The following is an Italian view of the proper results of the war, as affecting middle Europe: Only the Alps and the Adriatic can protect Italy. By exacting these natural boundaries she is not only pursuing national aims, she is closing to Prussianism the door of Trieste and Fiume, which made the Adriatic in the past and would make it in the future one of the main channels of invasion of the Mediterranean, equally harmful to Italy as to England, France, and Russia. Moreover, by thus forcing the dismemberment of Austria-Hungary, Italy causes the abolition of slavery for 40,000,000 of her non-German subjects, who, through the omnipotence of Germany and the evil policy of the 10,000,000 Germans of Austria, were compelled to be blind tools of Prussianism.

In other words, with the policy long cherished by London and Paris, all the 50,000,000 of Austria-Hungary's subjects were put at the disposal of Germany; while with the solution insisted upon by Italy, only 10,000,000 Austrian subjects of purely German blood will be in a position to do so. It is not absolutely sure that the Germans of Austria will become satellites of Germany. But, even if they did, this would not mean an increase of power for future Germany. If all the program of the allies is realised, Germany will lose about 10,000,000 of her non-German subjects. Therefore, even if she gained the 10,000,000 Germans of Austria, Germany would consist, after the war, of at most 70,000,000 people—exactly as she was before the present war.

The dismemberment of Austria-Hungary means something further. It means the formation of a number of small but powerful states, founded on the principle of nationality, utterly anti-German at heart, and profoundly devoted to the allies, because it will be from the allies that they receive liberty and independence. The benevolent protection of the allies and a possible league among them will insure a permanent and indestructible barrier against any further peril of Germanic expansion toward the East.

REFUSED WEAR TROUSERS

Girl Munition Workers Were Discharged and Sought Redress

Four girls who refused to wear male attire at their work sought before the Glasgow Munitions Tribunal a week's wages from a Clyde shipyard firm in lieu of notice on being dismissed. Certain girls employed by the firm wear male attire, and it was decided that all should wear trousers and tunic or leave the firm's employment. The girls alleged that there was no danger from machinery through wearing skirts. The sheriff refused compensation, observing that due notice was given.

Lucky to be in England

"I should probably have been shot by now," said a conscientious objector to the Metropolitan Asylums Board Appeal Tribunal when asked what he would do if he were in Germany.

BIG JUMP IN POTATOES.

Potatoes are 20c per bag higher this week than last, according to E. J. Ryan of Toronto who reports New Brunswick shippers asking $4.75 per 90-lb. bag. At Uxbridge from $3.25 to $3.50 is being asked for Ontario potatoes, which are not of so good a quality as the Delawares—smaller and more irregular. Mr. Ryan is of the opinion that potatoes will be easier, but the wish is doubtless father of the thought. There is no indication at present of lower prices, but consumption of potatoes is falling off considerable, as people cannot afford to pay the high retail prices being asked.

EGGS AT TORONTO.

Eggs are quoted at Toronto this week by Gunns at 48c per dozen for fresh, with held stock completely off the market. This price is exactly 21c per dozen above last year, and a break is expected soon, though the market depends upon weather conditions largely. It is a day-to-day trade, and firm prices are hard to quote. Farmers are advised to keep their egg supplies cleaned up, as prices may decline, and leave a few on their hands. The tendency will be downward, but it is hard to say when any drop will come and prices might even firm up for a time under the right sort of weather conditions. American eggs are off from 3c to 5c per dozen this week.

Cream At Toronto.

While the 47c net price for churning cream has been maintained by the Toronto Creamery, says the Sun, it has been necessary to grade more severely than in the past, and thin cream has resulted in the dockage of 1c per pound of fat for surplus express charges. For the last half of the present month the price is 46c to 47c per pound of fat net to shipper, the variation being on a quality and express basis. There is also reported a good demand for sweet cream, with the steady quotation of 50c per pound of fat, delivered at Toronto.

Local Price of Hogs.

Matthews-Blackwell Co. quoted $14.50 per cwt. for live hogs yesterday, another new top price.

Bagdad Looming Up As Probable Sequel To Kut

Junction Between British and Russians From Armenia and Persia is Again Being Talked Of

MORE SUCCESSES GAINED

LONDON, March 2.—Five thousand Turks have been captured in Mesopotamia, and it is estimated that the total loss to the Turks will exceed twenty-five thousand men.

LONDON, March 2.—The rapid advance of the British expeditionary force under General Maude on the Tigris, after the capture of Kut-el-Amara from the Turks, has revived interest in the various phases of the long-halted campaign for the ancient City of Bagdad, capital of the Caliphs, and famed in fable and story.

Last spring, before General Townshend's force at Kut was forced to surrender to the Turks, Russian operations in Persia and Armenia were counted upon to aid in driving against the Ottoman armies defending Bagdad. The three branches of the drive were directed respectively from the south, by the British, on the Tigris; from the east, by the Russians, in Persia; and from the north by Grand Duke Nicholas's forces, in Turkish Armenia. A junction between the Tigris forces and those in Persia was at one time thought to be in prospect, and one Russian cavalry detachment, indeed, did succeed in crossing the mountains of the Persian frontier, joining the army of the British-General Gerringe, below Kut-el-Amara after Townshend's surrender. The fall of Kut really spelled the collapse of the Entente plan, if one there was, to effect the capture of Bagdad by these joint and converging operations. Turkish forces released by the capitulation of Townshend in late April reinforced the Turkish army contending against the Russian advance in Persia, and General Baratoff, who had penetrated to the vicinity of the Mesopotamia border, from which Bagdad is less than 100 miles distant, was obliged to retire. Soon the Russians found themselves back at Kirmanshah, some 100 miles eastward of the border, and, in the summer, were driven from that place and later even from Hamadan, nearly 50 miles further from the frontier. The promised Russian advance southward from Bitlis, in southern Turkish Armenia, about 350 miles north of Bagdad, also failed to materialize. The fighting between Turks and Russians in Persia since then has for the most part been in the vicinity of Hamadan and of Sultanbad, which is still further east.

Obviously, with the British still tied fast at Kut, there could be small encouragement for operations looking to a juncture. With that place again in British hands, however, and General Maude's forces now within 75 miles of Bagdad on an airline, apparently having thrown the Turkish forces into at least temporary demoralization, the prospect of co-operative movements again opens.

As yet there have been no indications of any contemplated move in force by the Russians in either Persia or Armenia. It was about this time last year, however, that their armies in Persia were set in full motion, and it may well be that they are awaiting this year the outcome of the British operations at Kut before starting a new offensive campaign.

IF FOOD DISAGREES DRINK HOT WATER

When food lies like lead in the stomach and you have that uncomfortable, distressed feeling, it is because of insufficient blood supply to the stomach combined with acid and food fermentation. In such cases try the plan now followed in many hospitals and advised by many eminent physicians of taking a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of water, as hot as you can comfortably drink it. The hot water draws the blood to the stomach and the bisurated magnesia, as any physician can tell you, instantly neutralizes the acid and stops the food fermentation. Try this simple plan and you will be astonished at the immediate feeling of relief and comfort that always follows the restoration of the normal process of digestion. People who find it inconvenient at times to secure hot water and travelers who are frequently obliged to take hasty meals poorly prepared, should always take two or three five-grain tablets of Bisurated Magnesia after meals to prevent fermentation and neutralize the acid in their stomach.

URGENT NEED FOR PROMPT ACTION AND EXTREME CARE IN PROCURING GOOD SEED

Farmers Should Exercise Extreme Care in the Selection of This Year's Seed—Danger From Growing Weak Seed —How to Test the Seed—Treatment For Smut.

THE FIRST ESSENTIAL

There is urgent need for prompt action and extreme care in procuring the best available seed grain supplies, because of injury to the grain crops in the Prairie Provinces and parts of Eastern Canada during the season of 1916. Rust practically ruined the wheat over a large part of Manitoba and Saskatchewan. In the northern districts of the Prairie Provinces the grain crops were considerably injured by frost. In Ontario and parts of other eastern Provinces the late, wet spring, followed by drouth, resulted in low yields and poor quality of grain, particularly oats. Severe injury to the principal grain crops from different causes over such an extended area has produced a serious situation in respect to seed grain. Individual farmers and responsible governing bodies within the affected districts should act promptly and procure the best available seed grain. If this is not done, and the matter is allowed to drift until nearly seeding time, large areas must necessarily remain idle or be seeded with grain which is unfit to sow and likely to produce a poor crop.

THE FIRST ESSENTIAL IN SEED OF ANY KIND IS STRONG VITALITY.

The extent of the injury to grain, from the standpoint of its suitability for seed, is measured by the extent to which its vitality or strength of growth, has been impaired. Rust is not transmitted by seed grain. The danger from using rusted wheat for seed is therefore limited to the extent to which its vitality has been lowered. With wheat the injury from either rust or frost is more apparent than with other grain. The extent of the injury is largely indicated by the appearance of the kernels. Seed that is badly shrivelled from any cause should not be used if it can be avoided as the kernels have not sufficient reserve food stored within them to nourish the young plants until they get a good start. Shrivelled seeds may produce plants under favourable conditions, but at best they will be weak and if they encounter adverse conditions they are not likely to live. No definite rule can be given for the extent of injury which may be allowed in grain that might be expected to produce a good stand of growing plants, but in general it is probably unsafe to sow any that is not at least three-fourths normal seed.

FEED OAT GRADES UNFIT FOR SEED.

Flour and feed dealers who offer the Feed grades of Western oats should be very careful to warn farmer purchaser against using them for seed. The Feed grades contain oats which are frozen or otherwise unsound and not suitable for milling purposes. They usually give a very low percentage of germination which results in serious crop failure. The sowing of these frozen oats in past years has given the general impression that all Western oats will not do well in Eastern Canada the first year. Home-grown seed oats of good quality is so scarce this year that farmers should be specially warned against using the Feed Grades for seed.

Eastern Canada farmers are advised to procure local grown oats of the best quality and clean them to thirty pounds per bushel or better if

Debentures Never Issued; Claimed As Genuine Surpluses

LONDON, March 2.— Controller R. W. Shaw is anxious to get some information regarding the operations of the utilities commission, and at the special council meeting on this evening, at which the commissioners will be present, he will ask a number of pertinent questions, as to the surpluses, how arrived at and also regarding contracts. He wants to know whether there are any favourable contracts given to any person.

It has been discovered that debentures amounting to $228,000, may have been authorized, but not issued, according to information received at the city hall. Of this amount, $148,000 was authorized in 1914, $30,000 in 1915, and $50,000 in 1916. These the utilities commissions claims must be credited to it, and are figured as surpluses. The facts will be brought out at the meeting.

"We have nothing to hide," said Chairman Philip Pocock. "Our department is well managed, and we have the goods to show the doubters. I am not answering any questions until I know what they are. We will show a proper balance, make no mistake about that."

MIGHT OF EMPIRE VIVIDLY PORTRAYED IN HALIFAX VISIT

Bernstorff Sailed Past Transport Loaded With Troops For Britain, Himself Only Able to Leave By British Safe Conduct—Many Types of Men From Many Climes Voice Loyalty to Mother Land and Empire Ideals.

INHERITANCE OF CENTURIES

(By Stewart Lyon.)

HALIFAX, March 2.—Count Johann Von Bernstorff has had occasion recently to contrast British and German methods of Empire building. When the Count and his retinue passed up the harbour of Halifax in the Frederik VIII., to the land-locker inner anchorage known as Bedford Basin, there to be subjected to a careful search for dangerous documents or contraband articles, they sailed within pistol shot of a huge transport laden with Canadians on their way to the front. Von Bernstorff and his staff, in the darkness of the night, saw nothing of the troopship or of the vessels of war that lay near by. But the Count knew that it was only by the courtesy of his country's foes the Atlantic was open to him while Canada's fighting men went without let or hindrance, guarded as they have been since the first by the warships that have safely piloted every transport—on the Atlantic route.

Why had Bernstorff to submit to the indignity of detention by the representatives of British sea power while, despite the best efforts of the Germans underseas, Britain's soldiers can pass in safety? The obvious answer is that the German navy is not a match for that of the United Kingdom, and perforce, must yield control on the surface, however desperately it may strive for mastery beneath. The British navy was ready. By its preparedness the war was won before a shot was fired. Without the British navy to keep the seas Germany would have had victory speedy and complete.

Why was the British navy ready amid a thousand unreadinesses ashore? Because it mirrored the national genius and typified the Briton's love of adventure. For centuries the Islander has voyaged to far lands. For him there is no longer any land of mystery. If there were he would not be content until he had mastered its secrets, bought and sold its wares, and colonized its empty spaces.

INHERITANCE OF CENTURIES.

Centuries of struggle with Nature on land and sea, and with men in every quarter of the earth, have given the Briton an inheritance of racial and individual self-confidence all the more remarkable because it is often concealed beneath a heavy crust of reserve and surface self-depreciation. Probe beneath the crust and in the bulk of the United Kingdom and the overseas dominions, among the uneducated as well as among the cultured, one finds the pride of race and consciousness of high ancestry that must have animated the Greek and the Roman in the days of their greatness. It is this pride of race which after two and a half years of a tremendous conflict sends men eagerly into the very heart of the inferno "to do their bit."

The matter-of-fact talk to the officers and men en route to the front might lead to the casual hearer to suspect lack of imagination or of knowledge as to what may be ahead. A gunner beside a big weapon, or mounted astern, quotes from Kingsley's "Westward Ho!" He is a Londoner by birth, but knows and loves Devon and her heroes. If a submarine should cross his path he will fight as Drake's men fought three centuries ago against all the devildoms of Spain.

Here is another type. He is a young Canadian, born in Edmonton of Eglish parents. He ever saw the sea till this morning. He never saw a vessel bigger than the little river steamers that ply on the Saskatchewan. Yet he comes aboard without the slightest perturbation. The salt sea air, the great ship, the heaving water, are his racial inheritance. It will take generations of the plains to make landsmen of his breed and create in his descendants distrust of the sea.

World Shrinks in Size.

To many of the men of the western regiments on board the world is very small. One tells a story of Shanghai. Another talks with intimate knowledge of the Kaffir problem in South Africa, whither he went in 1899 to fight the Boers, and where he lived long enough to respect them. Smuts and Botha are well-known figures to him. Something turns the conversation to navigation and description of ports in many lands are available. The man who knows all about the Straits of Magella swaps experiences with the boatsman from the Peace River. The rancher who got 128 bushels of oats per acre from part of his Alberta holding, and secured sixty cents a bushel, gives a short dissertation on the absolute folly of permitting men to desert their holdings and their cattle when the Empire needs meat so badly. Lots of them, he says, turned their live stock over to the buyer at any offered price, and left their places unoccupied.

I had not suspected him of such speculation, but he, too, made a valuable contribution to the mental movie entertainment He had gone to France two years ago with a very poor opinion of Englishmen. They were, he fancied, surly, uncompanionable and lacked adaptation to

OUR SERIAL STORY

THE RED PAPER

By C. HOTCHKISS

He washed the blood from his mouth and with another warning to Planet went out, taking his way to the captain's room.

Though there was now no reason for concealing himself, from prudential motives Wentworth continued taking his meals in his own room, and the hours of his exercise on deck were confined to daylight. Nor did he ever go by a gloomy corner without being alert against what might come from it. Of Bagshot he had less fear than of the wily Mexican whom he had not seen since coming on board of the Lone Star; however he knew Planet was on the vessel, and he rightly conjectured that if any foul play was put forward the plot would be laid by Bagshot, and executed by his less astute henchman.

Therefore, never for a moment did he permit his sense of danger to slumber, though as time passed nothing happened to justify his fears. He did not confer with the purser, not deeming it advisable he could see no way for Van Buskirk to help him.

The hours were monotonous, but the feeling that a climax would be reached on the vessel's arrival at Galveston kept Wentworth's feelings at a point well above depression, though not above a measure of worry. He thought it strange that his open appearance caused no comment from Captain Shearpole, who had passed him twice, but with hardly a second look at him, taking him, the young man thought, for one who wished to be excluded, as he had not appeared at the public table. Once in the ensuing three days of the voyage he saw Bagshot, but that individual appeared to have his equanimity completely restored for he grinned broadly as he caught the young man's eye, disappearing immediately thereafter.

Though he waited and hoped and longed for a sight of the girl, Wentworth did not see her, and in consequence was troubled. For he was beginning to discern the truth, and being honest with himself had come to know that he had not taken his position entirely in vindication of his honour and in pursuit of his father's suspected murderer.

That he was in love with a girl he had seen but three times seemed monstrous to him though the footing on which they stood made the conditions unusual. But so it was. Aside from considerations apart from the lady he knew that he would follow her; he would help her; beyond that he had no plan, even in his secret thoughts. He desired to win her strong regard; anything beyond that appeared preposterous though why it should be he could not have told.

He worried and worried and continued to wonder and worry, planning nothing in detail. All he had determined upon was to keep his parties in sight and the way to accomplish that seemed to present no difficulties. It would be simple. When they left the steamer he would follow, unless, indeed as he hoped and believed, the criminal would be met by an officer of the law the moment the Lone Star reached her pier. In that event the lady would need his protection.

The island city of Galveston was reached just after sunset, and, not greatly to Wentworth's surprise, the vessel dropped anchor. He knew a little of the difficulties of navigation in the waters of that port and the necessity of high tide in order that a steamer of the size of the Lone Star might crawl through the pass of the bar and reach her berth. He was puzzled by the fact that a deeply laden steamer came out without difficulty, but he asked no questions though he could not understand the delay. He thought that it was a trifle strange, too, that the steamer had not been met and boarded by the Galveston police; but for a surety no police came.

The young man was not discontented at the prospect of a few hours' delay. He walked the deck breathing in the balmy and delightful air of the semi-tropics, soothed by its graciousness. The glittering lights of a great hotel on the sea-wall of the distant city stimulated his imagination. Although wealthy he had never travelled extensively, having but once gone over the treadmill of the "grand tour" of Europe with no great pleasure. He was far from being blase and now he promised himself that as soon as his pressing business was finished he would learn more of his own country. And he figured that this business would be over in the course of twenty-four hours.

Should he then return to New York—he could not answer that question; the haze of uncertainty veiled all beyond the capture of his father's murderer, and the man who had robbed him of the red paper. Of course he would write to Harper and explain; otherwise it made no difference to anyone where he was or long he stayed.

He was in a rather complacent frame of mind when he went to his room early in order to be up by daylight. He undressed in the dark and had hardly laid himself down when he was aroused by a knock. Springing from his bunk he opened his door, and it did not surprise him when Van Buskirk stepped inside. That individual appeared to be hurried and his voice was perturbed.

"They are going to-night," whispered the purser. "Bagsot Planet and Miss Merridale. I heard the captain give an order for the quarter-boat to be lowered for them at eleven o'clock. Bagshot's trunks are to be sent after him, but to where I don't know. You see the pull he has!"

Wentworth was thunderstruck, and his hand fairly shook as he lighted the cabin lamp. "The cursed villain! The miserable coward!" he exclaimed. "Would Captain Shearpole interfere if I went to him and told him the truth?"

"No! I think not. You remember what I said about them being old friends? He'd pretend not to believe you. He's a hot-headed specimen! Hello! Is this yours?"

The purser stooped and picked up a folded paper which from its position looked as if it might have been thrust under the door. With a quick intuition as to its nature Wentworth opened it, catching a breath of the perfume with which it was scented, and which he now knew so well.

"Have discovered we leave the steamer-to-night. I have been unable to see you. He hardly lets me from his sight. Our first stop San Antonio, Menger Hotel. I will continue with him. There is nothing else for me to do. Will write when I get home. Heaven bless you, my friend, for all you have done for me.

G. M.

Wentworth read and re-read the note and then thrust it into the purser's hand.

"Doesn't that look like a bid to follow?" he asked excitedly.

"Looks more like hopelessness," said Van Buskirk. "Bagshot is giving you the slip, and will get clear! What are you going to do about it?"

"Do?" cried Wentworth, getting into his clothes with record haste. "If she has given up, I haven't. I'm going in that boat!"

"How will you manage it? I can't help you."

"I don't know how I will manage it, son; and I would not tell you if I did—it might compromise you. But I am going in that boat; if I fail I have had my trip for nothing—Bagshot will get away! Why are we lying off here instead of going up to the city?"

"I don't know. I hear something's gone wrong with the machinery and in fixing it we lose the tide, to take us through the pass. We won't berth till morning."

Wentworth stared at him. He thought he saw a great light. The purser went on: "The old man rigged me like the devil for not reporting you. I did not dare tell him that you were a friend of mine, or that Bagshot had been lying to him; only that you had come aboard at the last minute, paid your passage, and said you were sick and wished to be alone. Savvy? Don't give me away on your life, or you will ruin me."

"Don't be afraid. What time is it?"

"Not yet nine o'clock."

"Where will the boat be lowered?"

"Amidship—on the port side."

"All right! Don't you get mixed up in this, Van. I can't tell you how I thank you! In the morning you are to know nothing about me, and—"

At that moment there sounded a smart knock. The purser retreated behind the berth curtain. John opened the door.

"I wish Mr. Wentworth," said a young officer whom Wentworth had never seen.

"I am he."

"Captain Shearpole wants to see you at once, sir—in his cabin."

"When? To-night?"

"At once, sir; if you please."

"Very good! Lead ahead," returned Wentworth seeing the necessity of giving the purser an opportunity to escape. That his call was in some way related to Bagshot he guessed. "Perhaps," he thought as he followed the quickly stepping officer, "perhaps Shearpole had reviewed the facts, and not wishing to become implicated in helping a criminal to escape, was about to put a few questions before Bagshot left the vessel.

Had Wentworth given the matter longer consideration he would have known his conclusion to be false. In a moment the two entered the captain's room.

Captain Shearpole was sitting at his desk when Wentworth was ushered in. He turned his hard weather-beaten old face to the young man and motioned the escort to retire.

"You sent for me," said John, who had an idea that his chance for appeal had been forced upon him. The captain's frown deepened to a scowl.

"Who are you, sir? I fail to recognise you as a passenger."

"But I am a passenger," was the serene reply. "My name is Wentworth."

"Oh! Your name is Wentworth, is it?" exclaimed Shearpole, with a well defined sneer in his voice, as he squared himself and his eyes began to shine. "You are the sneak, hey? Why did you not come openly on board of my ship? Tell me that, sir."

FOUR WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Brown Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"For years I suffered so shockingly it seemed as though I could not stand it any longer. It was all in my lower organs. At times I could hardly walk, for if I stepped on a little stone I would almost faint. One day I did faint and my husband was sent for and the doctor came. I was taken to the hospital and stayed four weeks but when I came home I would faint just the same and had the same pains.

A friend who is a nurse said for me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it that very day for I was suffering a great deal. It has already done me more good than the hospital. To anyone who is suffering as I was my advice is to stop in the first drug-store and get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before you go home."—Mrs. W. C. CAMPAIGN A SUCCESS.

Canada's Output for 1915 Has Broken All Records.

That the results of the greater production campaign in Canada far exceed even the most sanguine hopes, is the statement made in a report just issued by the Commission of Conservation.

The idea has generally prevailed that greater production meant an increase only in the wheat crop and other agricultural products, but its effects have been much more far-reaching. True, Canada harvested a wheat crop estimated at over 336,000,000 bushels, more than double that of the previous year, and 45 per cent. more than any previous wheat crop in her history. The dairy industry also sent from the port of Montreal butter and cheese valued at $23,705,000, exceeding the exports of 1914 by over $5,000,000.

But the results in other industries were as striking, to quote the report: "In mineral production Canada has made numerous advances. Copper and zinc refining plants have been established at Trail, B.C., and are treating native ores. Improvements have been made in certain steels to enable them to be used for shell purposes. Improvements have also been made in the concentration of molybdenum ores, the molybdenum being used in the manufacture of big gun linings and high-speed lathe tools. The recovery of benzol from by-product coke ovens has been developed. Benzol is used in the manufacture of explosives. In Western Canada the discovery of phosphate of lime in Rocky Mountains Park should prove of great value to the agricultural interests."

The following figures furnish a comparison between the quantities of the different metals used in the manufacture of the 22,000,000 shells for which orders have been placed in Canada, with our production of such metals in 1913:

"Steel used, 400,000 tons. In 1913 it was estimated that the production of iron ore in Canada, 307,634 tons, did not exceed five per cent. of the country's requirements of iron in that year.

"Zinc used contained in brass 11,200,000 pounds. No zinc was refined in Canada in 1913, but the exports of metallic zinc in ore shipped amounted to slightly over 7,000,000 pounds.

"Copper used, 55,000,000 pounds. The total production in 1913 was about 77,000,000 pounds, and all of it was exported for refining.

"Lead, 101,760,000 pounds. The production in 1913 was about 37,665,000 pounds, of which over 97 per cent. was recovered as refined lead.

"Canada's fisheries have received especial attention, not only in the production but in the marketing, both on the Atlantic and Pacific Coast advances have been made. Due to conditions brought about by the war, Canada last year placed herfish upon the British market, and it is hoped that some species may be permanently established there."

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

A "sameness" that is most enjoyable——the daily, unvarying goodness of a cup of "SEAL BRAND" COFFEE. It never fails to greet you with that same exquisite fragrance, amber clearness and delightful flavour, that win people with the first cup.

In ½, 1 and 2 pound tins. Whole—ground—pulverized—also fine ground for Percolators. Never sold in bulk. 184

Three Wishes.

"Once aloud and twice in silence shalt thou wish, and thy best wish I will give thee." So spake Destiny.

The moments ticked eternity-ward. The silent wishes were made, but the other—frantically the woman stared at the face of the clock.

Vainly she prodded her mind, but five minutes—four—three remained—two—one—

"Oh!" wailed she aloud. "Oh, could I but choose!"

Solemnly the hour struck. "Thy wish is granted thee, the sovereign gift of Surety. A greater lies not upon the knees of the high gods. Beside thy first two (for beauty and love) the power to choose aright is as gold to clay."

And the future proved to this woman that Destiny's choice for her had indeed been right.—Minna Thomas Antrim in Lippincott's.

Uses For the Nose.

The triangular pyramid projecting from the center of the face has always had peculiar interest for me. In infancy I used it as a pocket, storing therein an occasional bean—filched from the cook's store, and I remember the stir one such occasioned in the household as well as in me when a canny country doctor put his open mouth to mine and with mighty blast persuaded the bean to stand not upon the order of its exit. Later a cooking accident left me with some nasal vacuity and the ability to run a grass blade up one nostril and down the other. Thus I became persona grata at juvenile circuses, the price of admission for my performance going all the way up from five pins to 3 cents, my profits invariably being paid in pins, the distaff side, I suppose, very properly.—Lucy Elliot Keeler in Atlantic.

To foil automobile thieves an inventor has patented a steering wheel that can be removed from a car when its owner leaves it.

A territorial government in Hungary has formed a company that will build a factory for the extraction of oil from pumpkin seeds.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Transfer In Love

It Worked Well For All Concerned.

By ALAN SINSDALE.

Who has ever read a romance in which a pair of lovers gave each other the mitten and the story ended happily? If such an incongruous tale has ever been written, certain it is that few authors have ever broken what may be called the romantic laws. In real life numberless escapes have been made by lovers backing out from their pledges, and much misery would have been avoided had certain other couples followed their example.

The British had shelled the German works in Flanders, and now the order was given to advance. There was a desperate conflict, at the end of which the ground was strewn with the dead.

Two British officers, Captain Arthur Fitz-Herbert and Lieutenant Howard Margrave, both wounded, lay side by side. It was night, and neither could see the other. Fitz-Herbert groaned.

"Are you badly hit, comrade?" asked Margrave.

"Hit to death," replied the other.

"Can I do anything for you? I've got some life left in me."

"If you live, yes; if you die, no."

"What is it?"

"A year before I left home I married a girl who I supposed loved me. Later I learned that she loved another and had married me because I had befriended her and her family when they were in trouble. When the call came for troops for this war I was largely influenced by this discovery to enroll. If I were killed it would end a life embittered by a great disappointment and she would be free to marry the man she loved. If you live to get back to England tell her what I have said to you and it is my wish that she live a happy wife with him."

"Singular," replied the other, half to himself and half to his comrade. "The main reason for my being here is that the girl I love married my rival."

"You will find her to whom you are to deliver the message—her—the message—in the town"—

"He's dead," said Margrave, "and before he could tell me that without which I can't serve him."

At this moment the field was again alive with the contending armies. The Germans countered, but were driven back by the British. Men went stumbling over Margrave, and a German fell across him, preventing what life there was left in him from being trampled out. With a frightful din in his ears he lost consciousness.

The next thing Margrave knew he was in a field hospital, looking up into a pair of eyes belonging to a woman, regarding him with feminine sympathy. She was young and comely. Indeed, to the sufferer, used to scenes of frightfulness, she seemed an angel. But naturally his first thought was whether he was done for or would live.

"Which is it," he asked, "life or death?"

"In all probability life," was the reply, with an encouraging smile.

"Good! And yet," he added, speaking rather to himself than to his nurse—"and yet I came to"—

Looking into the face above him, he checked his words. A new interest in life was born in him.

When Lieutenant Margrave left the hospital he left the army, too, for he was no longer in that perfect health required for a soldier. He was not only sorry to leave the army, but to leave the hospital, for his departure broke in upon a companionship that had given him a desire to live. His nurse was Gladys Erskine, the daughter of an English country gentleman. She had volunteered among the many noble women not only of England, but of America, who resigned comfortable as well as luxurious homes to minister to sick and wounded soldiers. When Margrave parted with her he asked her to return to England to assume the position of head of his household. The temptation was great, for he had lately come into a large estate, but Miss Erskine preferred, so long as she was able, to work in the cause of humanity.

Margrave had been home a month when he met the lady whose decision between him and another man had sent him into a field where he might find relief from his disappointment, in excitement if not in death. She wore widow's weeds. Her husband had also responded to his country's call and had not returned, being reported among the missing, which usually means those who have died, but have not been accounted for.

Now, had not Margrave found a new love in a hospital in Flanders there might have been a romantic end to the circumstances that sent him to the front. Since the lady was a widow there was no impediment to their marriage. But even if Margrave's heart had not been transferred to another there were evidences besides widow's weeds to indicate that she really mourned her husband.

What a singular transition! When the two had parted shortly before her marriage there was a heartrending scene. The man declared that his life had been blighted, the girl that the adverse circumstances which compelled her to marry another were deplorable. Down in the bottom of her heart there would always be a place for the man she really loved.

And now not two years had passed to show these former lovers that life's conductor hands every lover a transfer, to be used or thrown away at will. It was plain to Margrave that the lady had become absorbed in her husband. True, that husband had been eliminated, but his elimination did not replace the status between his widow and Margrave where it was before her marriage.

The widow had no knowledge of the change that had taken place in her former lover. Had he not given his heart to the woman who had nursed him he might have looked for some flinching out of her former feeling for him. Possibly he seemed much cooler toward her. But she did not appear to be at all pained at the change. Margrave took his cue from her and treated her as it was evident she preferred to be treated.

The way she preferred to be treated seemed to be that they should be friends. Despite a slight twge of jealousy, Margrave was quite content—indeed, relieved—at this. His second love was not with him, and a friendship with his first was quite a comfort to him. He was with the widow so much that those who knew of their sad separation in times past naturally supposed that they were undergoing a secondary courtship preparatory to a union. Margrave was not absolutely sure whether the widow so regarded their intimacy or not.

Naturally she was much interested in hearing from a participant what was going on at the front and listened eagerly to his descriptions of active service. One evening when they were together Margrave told her the story of the man who had charged him with a message to his wife and had died before he could give the lady's name and address.

What was Margrave's astonishment to hear a moan coming from his companion. He turned and looked at her inquiringly. Instead of meeting his gaze she covered her face with her hands, then without a word of explanation arose and left the room.

Margrave did not call upon his friend again till he had received a note from her asking him to excuse her strange conduct when he was last with her, but offering no explanation. She especially requested that he should not let the matter interfere with their friendship. Margrave called upon her, thinking that she might account for her emotion verbally, but she did not refer to it again. His recall puzzled him. Was her former feeling for him returning?

A complication for Margrave arose with the return to England of his new love, who had at last been broken down by overwork. Upon her arrival his visits to the widow became fewer and more constrained even than before. He felt that a confession that his wild words of constancy, delivered when he had departed to the front for the avowed purpose of getting himself killed, had proved nothing so surely as that he was a turncoat in love could not be long delayed and it would cover him with shame and confusion. To make matters worse, he was less sure than ever that his first love might not be counting on consoling herself with him.

One morning when Margrave was with Miss Erskine he received a telegram from the widow:

Where have you been this long time? There has been a great change with me, and I am eager to tell you of it. Do come and see me.

Margrave was taken flat aback. What could the message mean but that the widow had discovered that she still loved him and that she was pained at his absence? He was at the time with his fiancee making the arrangements for their wedding.

What an embarrassing situation!

Margrave handed the telegram to Erskine, told her the story of his former love, assured her that his whole heart was now hers and asked her what he should do in the matter. It required much time to convince her that there was not in him a lingering feeling for his former love, but when he succeeded Miss Erskine suggested that the proper way for him to treat the matter was to announce his engagement.

Margrave accepted the suggestion and wrote the widow accordingly. For reply he received an invitation to visit her, bringing with him his fiancee. The fiancee was loath to go, but Margrave declared that he would not face the enemy single handed, and she finally consented.

Margrave and his second love were not received by his first alone. A pale and very much emaciated man arose, whom the widow introduced as "my husband, Captain Fitz-Herbert."

There was a tableau which could not be given except by living persons, followed by an explanation that is hardly necessary here. Captain Fitz-Herbert had been picked up on the battlefield by the Germans, resuscitated and made a prisoner of war. He had escaped and returned to England, where he was recovering under the care of his wife.

The message he had sent to her had been intrusted, unknowingly by both, to the man she had vowed always to love. Unfortunately for the romance involved she had fallen in love with her husband instead.

And so it was that four persons were made happy because two of them had vowed eternal constancy for each other and broken the vow. Mrs. Fitz-Herbert nursed her husband back to health as Miss Erskine had nursed Margrave to the same satisfactory condition.

All of which goes to show that transfers in love are occasionally as essential as in other affairs of life. What a mess there would have been had the lovers been true to each other and had married, supposing Fitz-Herbert to be dead.

GAULT CASES IN SECRET.

Husband and Wife to Air Troubles In Montreal Court.

MONTREAL, March 2. — The actions in which Major Hamilton Gault is suing for a separation as to bed and board from his wife, Marguerite Clark Stephens, and in which Mrs. Gault, as incidental plaintiff, is suing for a like separation from her husband, fixed for hearing in the Superior Court yesterday before Mr. Justice Weir.

CHOOSING AN EMPRESS.

Princess Tokiho May Mount Japanese Throne in Spite of Objections.

Princess Tokiho of the noble house of Ichijo seems mostly likely to become the new crown princess of Japan. In fact, her nomination is practically inevitable. She is the only princess of rank available for the place. She will attain this honor in spite of a number of objections that have been raised against her. It is said, for instance, that she is lacking in temperament, because she is a little "short tempered," as the Japanese express it, or "quick tempered," as we would say. It is, however, hoped that as she grows older she will become better able to control her temper and be a suitable consort for his Imperial Highness.

It is also said that she is not perfectly strong in body and does not enjoy absolutely good health. But again it is hoped that, with care, she may become physically perfect.

In the third place she is not yet expert in the writing of Japanese poems. That is one important qualification of a prospective empress. Skill along that line may be developed by practice; so that she may yet become a poetess.

It remains that, in spite of these drawbacks, she is the only one who is really eligible among all the princesses of the Go-Sekke, or five noble houses, from which the consorts of the crown princes have always been chosen. If she is not selected, it will be necessary to break the ancient custom and choose the crown prince's bride from some family outside of that charmed circle. Custom, however, is powerful in the Orient.

In this connection I may be permitted to add a few lines to cover some points learned indirectly from one of the tutors of the crown prince about the young man himself. That teacher has always aimed not to give merely mechanical instruction, as many of the imperial tutors are attuned to do, but to inculcate the proper spirit in the future ruler of the empire. And he seems to have succeeded with striking results.

It is said that the crown prince takes no notice of the lectures, but remembers well. And when he was once asked what was the most important thing he remembered, as impressed upon him by the teacher, he correctly replied "personality." The same instructor has been emphasizing the importance of self-sacrifice. He has also taught the prince not to love, but to honor money, and has held up before him the example of industrious farmers who are making valuable contributions to the welfare of the nation.

The royal tutor also says, with the greatest pride, that the young prince resembles most his grandfather, the late emperor, now known as Meiji Tenno. From all sides I hear the statement that the hope of the nation lies in Prince Hirohito.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

Hebrew in Scotland.

Although the famous Scottish reformer, John Knox, "had a fervent thirst" for Hebrew, it was not he, but one of his associates, John Row, called "Row primus," who first brought the Hebrew letters to Scotland, and among his most eager pupils was his own son, Row secundus, afterward the historian of the Church of Scotland. The first Hebrew book printed and published in Scotland, 1644, was a short grammar and vocabulary of Hebrew by Row tertius, the grandson of Row primus. In 1642, two years before the appearance of this tiny but epoch making book, a professorship devoted exclusively to the teaching of Hebrew was founded in Scotland—the Hebrew chair in Toon's college of Edinburgh. But the fact remains that, in the matter of Semitic scholarship, Scotland was at this period far behind England, for the mid seventeenth century produced in England a galaxy of Semitic scholars, at whose feet the foremost students of the continent were proud to sit, and the works of Selden, Lightfoot, Pococke, Usher and the Polyglot Bible of Brian Walton remain to this day unsurpassed as monuments of Semitic learning.

MRS. JARVIS, BOX 286, PENETANG, P.O., ONTARIO, says: "It is a pleasure to write and tell you what Dr. Cassell's Tablets have done for my baby. When only five months old he was taken ill. I had medical advice for him, and was told he had colic, for which he was treated, but he did not get any better, only worse. I tried several special foods, but none of them would stay on his stomach, and he became so thin that he seemed just skin and bone. He only weighed ten pounds. We never thought poor baby could live, but one day I chanced to hear of a baby's case almost like mine, that had been cured by Dr. Cassell's Tablets, so I got some for my baby, and I am thankful I did. After a few doses the nervous jumps he had suffered from stopped, and soon he was almost well. I have given him the Tablets during teething, and find them very soothing. He is a bonny boy now, quite cured, and weighs twenty-five pounds at twelve months old."

AN EMERGENCY SALAD.

Use raw carrot grated as a foundation for salad. It is very nice to look at and makes a tasty salad too. To two carrots, I use a cupful of chopped cabbage and a half cupful of celery, a tablespoonful of lemon-juice and a half teaspoonful of salt. Mix with either mayonnaise or cooked dressing. I have used the carrot with peas, also with nuts and apples, all are equally good. Serve on lettuce leaf, says one lady. The carrot is often mistaken for shrimp. It is nice with onions and radishes, too.

FISH FLAKE.

Place the following ingredients in a chopping-bowl; one-half cupful of fish-flakes; one medium-sized apple, peeled and sliced; one good-sized onion, peeled and sliced, and two sliced hard-boiled eggs. Chop together fine and then add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, salt and pepper to season and one tablespoonful lemon-juice. Mix well and spread on rounds of buttered rye or whole-wheat bread. The bread may be toasted if desired. Also one-fourth teaspoonful of dry mustard may be added to the fish with the seasonings though it is very nice without it.

Was Completely Laid Up With Severe Case of Piles

Sworn Statement From a Man Who Has Unbounded Confidence in Dr. Chase's Ointment

There is no longer any debate as to the best treatment for itching, bleeding or protruding piles But since about one person in every four suffers more or less from this annoying ailment it is necessary to keep on telling the people about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Wm. Shaw, Island Brook, Que., writes: "I am writing this to let you know the benefit that I have derived from your Ointment. I have suffered more or less for years with protruding piles and last winter I got so bad I was completely laid up with them. I went to our local storekeeper and asked him if he had anything that was good for piles and he recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment. I purchased a box and took it home and used it according to the directions and for over one year I have not been troubled with piles. I had tried other remedies before but they only gave me temporary relief and that one box of your Ointment did more for me than all the others, so I have not been troubled since last winter. I consider it to be the best remedy for piles I have ever used and shall always carry a box with me, although I don't think I will need it for piles. We have used it for other purposes in the family, such as burns, and cuts and scratches, etc., and my wife says it is one of the best remedies for such purposes we have ever had in the house. Although you only charge sixty cents a box for it it is well worth $5.00 a box for anyone who is afflicted with piles. Now you can use this letter if you wish or refer anyone to me who wants to know about it for piles. I might say that in my business I am known all over the English portion of Quebec, and am having this statement sworn to before a Justice of the Peace."

Composing Letters.

It is related of a merchant that, impatient at the long delay of a customer in settling his accounts with him, he said at last to his young clerk, "Write to that man and tell him that I can wait no longer." "What shall I write to him?" the young man asked. The merchant was hurried and answered crossly and without thought, "Something or nothing, and that soon!" In a few days a check came from the delinquent, paying the entire amount of his indebtedness. Surprised, the merchant asked his clerk, "What did you write to that man?" "Just what you told me to," the young man answered. "I did not tell you what to write." "Yes, you did. You said, 'Something or nothing, and that soon.' I wrote that."

True, oh, Uncle Joshua, it takes some one more wise than a fool to compose a letter."—Atlantic Monthly.

Suffered From Severe Headaches

FOR TWO YEARS

Headaches are many and varying; but when the head starts to ache you may be sure there is some chief cause. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that unless the cause is removed some other baneful disease is liable to assert itself.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches and has proved itself to be a remedy that cures where others fail.

Mr. I. N. Petershen, Dnieper, Man. writes: "I am only too glad to be able to state that I derived wonderful benefit from Burdock Blood Bitters. I suffered from severe headaches for two years. I was treated by several doctors but received no benefit until by chance I heard of B.B.B., and I at once procured two bottles and in a short time I was completely cured. I am and always will be grateful for what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am glad to recommend it to all who suffer from headaches."

B.B.B. is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Atmosphere and Beyond.

At what altitude above the earth would the atmosphere become too thin to breathe or to support life? What is beyond the atmosphere? asks a correspondent of the Indianapolis News, which replies:

"The height of the atmosphere has been variously estimated at from forty-five to a hundred miles, but with constantly increasing thinness. The comparatively short duration of twilight, which depends upon the atmospheric reflection of the light of the sun from below the horizon, shows that the atmosphere extends only a limited distance above the earth, and the difficulty of mountain climbers and aeronauts in breathing increases quite rapidly as one rises above sea level. The exact height at which the atmosphere would cease to support life cannot be stated, but, judging from the effects experienced by air explorers, it is not many miles from the earth. As to what exists beyond the atmosphere science offers no solution beyond the vague terms space and ether."

When Matches Were Introduced.

The Atlas, a London newspaper, published on Jan 10, 1830, the following paragraph under the head of "Instantaneous Light:" "Among the different methods invented for obtaining light instantaneously ought certainly to be recorded that of Mr. Walker, chemist, Stockton-on-Tees. He supplies the purchaser with prepared matches, which are put into boxes, but are not liable to change in the atmosphere, and also with a piece of fine glass paper folded in two. Even a strong blow will not inflame the matches, because of the softness of the wood underneath, or does rubbing upon wood or any common substance produce any effect except that of spoiling the match. But when one is pinched between the folds of the glass paper and suddenly drawn out it is instantly inflamed. Mr. Walker does not make them for extensive sale, but only to supply the small demand in his own neighborhood."

About Words.

Fairy was once a beautiful woman.

Refer once meant only to carry back.

Confer was originally simply to carry with.

Jade originally signified any rude person without regard to sex.

Craven was at first a man who had craved or begged his life of an enemy.

Voyage was formerly any journey, whether by sea or land it did not matter.

Farewell originally signified "may you fare or travel well or in safety."

Primrose was at first the prime rose, or the first rose that opened in spring.

Polite at first meant polished and was applied to any smooth shining surface.

The word ascertain formerly meant nothing more than to make certain of a fact.

The word idea formerly meant a completed performance, whether mental or physical.

Old Wall Paper.

In many houses there are often left odd lengths of wall paper, and these should be carefully preserved. Damage may be done when moving in, or later, a chair may get pushed roughly against a wall, and there is a bad tear. Get a piece of the paper, scallop the edges quite roughly and paste it over the place. The mend will be unnoticeable. But if the house is not new and the paper has faded the contrast is startling. In that case put a piece of the spare wall paper out of doors in the sun for two or three days. Dampen it occasionally. All that is needed is exposure.—Exchange.

And This Is Glory!

Little Willie, sitting opposite to an old pensioner, whose breast bore many medals, gazed at him and the medals long and earnestly and at length said to his mother: "Mamma, why does that man wear his money on his coat? Won't they let him have pockets?"—London Mirror.

Inventing the Sleeping Car.

Inhabitants of Central City, Colo., will tell you that George Pullman got his idea for his sleeping car from the little cabin he occupied near the stamp mill he owned and ran in Russel Gulch when he was a pioneer at that place in the early sixties. This cabin had its sleeping quarters in the form of bunks along the wall to leave more space for the living room. In speaking to his friends of his idea of a sleeping car Pullman said it would look like a cabin with bunks along the sides. In 1862 Pullman left Central City, having made considerable money from his various ventures there. He kept experimenting along the lines of his idea and in 1868 constructed the first sleeping car of commercial value.—Wall Street Journal.

A Week of Blunders.

Sir William Harcourt once told me that he had dined out every night for a whole week in advance of his invitations. He discovered his mistake only on the last night, when on going to dine with some people who gave long invitations and large dinners he found them alone. After a very pleasant evening he thanked them for asking him in so friendly a manner, whereupon they explained that the invitation had been for a week later, but that they had been only too delighted at his mistake. On hearing this Sir William looked at his engagement book and discovered that this was the last of a number of invitations which he had anticipated by a week.—"Memories of Fifty Years," by Lady St. Helier.

Dragoons.

Four centuries ago, when firearms were in their infancy, soldiers were armed from the weapons they bore. Thus infantrymen were called "pike" or "shot," according to their weapons. The "dragon" was a short musket or carbine, and the soldiers who bore them were dragoons. The original dragoons were mounted infantrymen, being organized as infantry. The original dragoons, being without cavalry training, were decidedly poor horsemen, but they improved until they were classed as medium cavalry.—American Boy.

One Way Out.

Mr. Foghorn—Take out your debt in singing lessons! You're crazy! What kind of a voice do you think I have? Professor Squeale—Like a steam whistle, only worse. But when you're taken one lesson in your home the neighbors will raise the money and pay the debt.—Boston Globe.

The Essential Thing.

In Gilbert K. Chesterton's book "The Flying Inn" is a sentence worth thinking about in this day of excuses and evasions. "For she felt God's wind from nowhere, which is called the will and is man's only excuse upon this earth."

Art Is Long.

"It took eight years of work."

"That's a long time to devote to one picture."

"Yes, indeed—six days to paint it and the rest of the time to sell it."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

URGENT NEED FOR PROMPT ACTION

possible. Thus far not more than 100,000 bushels of No. 1 Canada Western seed oats free from wild oats are available in storage. It may be found necessary to make a grade for No. 2 seed oats containing not more than eight wild oats to the pound. This would be very much superior to the Milling or Feed grades which are foul with noxious and other weed seeds.

One or two degrees of frost in the milk stage of oats are sufficient to ruin them for seed. Frozen oats are difficult to detect. A sample may be badly frozen as to be totally unfit for seed and the injury not be apparent to external appearances. From outside appearances there is nothing to indicate that the seed has been injured by freezing. A kernel of sound oats when stripped of the hull is usually semi-transparent and remains flakey when crushed. A frosted kernel has a clouded, dark appearance, particularly at the tip, is more brittle and reduced to powder when crushed. Frozen oats have a characteristic sweet taste. In wheat frost injury is more apparent, being evidenced in severe cases by shrunken and discoloured kernels. Lighter injury is shown by lack of lustre caused by the crimping of very fine cracking of the seed coat. These factors render a vitality test with oats especially important and where any doubt exists in respect to frost injury to oats a germination test should be made, and if the result is unsatisfactory other seed should be procured.

HOW TO MAKE THE TEST.

For this purpose a shallow box or flower pot filled with ordinary soil may be used. A definite number of seeds, not less than 100, should be planted at about the ordinary depth for sowing and the soil kept moist, but not wet. It is advisable to conduct each test in duplicate in order that uniform results may be obtained. The box should be placed where it will not be too warm in the day time and where it will be cooler but will not freeze, at night; the alteration of temperature favours germination. By noticing the number of plants produced and whether they came up quickly, are strong or weak, one can determine the suitability of the grain for seeding purposes more accurately than from the results of a test which he does not see. When seed is being tested in this way it is advisable to plant beside it some grain of the same kind which is known to be strong in vitality, in order that the test may be checked and a comparison made between the growth of the sample under test and the seed that is known to be good.

GREATER LIABILITY TO DISEASE, INSECT AND WEED INJURY IS ANOTHER DANGER FROM USING SEED OF LOW VITALITY.

Weak, young plants from poor seed are more susceptible to infection with smut and other diseases before they emerge above the ground. Throughout the season, healthy growth is a protection against adverse weather conditions as well as disease and insect injury. When a crop gets a poor start weeds have a better chance to develop and choke out the crop, resulting in a reduced yield and lower grade.

WITH WEAK SEED THE TREATMENT FOR SMUT PREVENTION IS RENDERED UNSAFE.

While ordinary seed is not materially injured by the formalin or bluestone treatment, there is considerable danger if the vitality is already weakened through other causes. If it is necessary to sow shrivelled grain it might be advisable to omit the treatment for smut or use a weaker solution than ordinary, unless there is evidence of smut contamination in the seed or doil.

Canadian conditions. "I found out," he said, "that the English officer is the finest gentleman I have ever met, a model of courtesy, and as brave as he is courteous."

The Great Testing time.

There are a lot of people making discoveries—as this young Canadian did—by coming into close touch with Englishmen in the great testing time of war. German patience, thoroughness and subordination of individuality can do much in both peace and war, but who can doubt that in the final trial of strength the individualistic, adventureous Briton at home and in the overseas dominions, whose greatest ambition it is to live his own life in his own way, will emerge victorious?

His humour will help mightily. It emerges unexpectedly. To-day a company of leathery-faced Westerners, who had been a week on trains with few facilities for dolling-up, were paraded on the deck. "Are we down-hearted?" shouted one. The answer was the usual thunderous 'No.'

Then the company way looked along the line. "Are we ugly?" he yelled. Every man looked at his neighbour and a perfect gale of laughter swept the ranks. Those fellows will go into battle as if it were a championship hockey game.

STRONGER TONE IN WHEAT MARKET

Cash Wheat Situation is Firmer —The Cattle Market

An improvement in the car situation gave a stronger tone to the market in the earlier trading yesterday, but later some of the advance was lost. Chicago closed 1 1-2 up on the May option, and Winnipeg 5-8. Cash wheat situation is a little firmer. After the posting of the Board of Trade quotations on oats, and announcing that no G.T.R. oats were available, several dealers asserted that they had oats at G.T.R. points, but not at the quotations given above.

A Miraculous Escape.

The age of miracles has not yet passed. John Blanchard, reservist of the Coldstream Guards, last seen in the midst of a mass of German bayonets fighting to the death in the retreat from Mons in the early days of the war, and officially reported dead, having been mourned as such for over two years by his widow, is alive and a prisoner in Germany. Blanchard was a member of the Brantford police force, and when the call to reservists came quickly answered. He was sent on to his battalion soon after reaching England, and was last seen by Corp. (Constable) John Cobden, a member of the same regiment, fighting for his life. What has happened in the intervening time is unknown. That he was in such straights in a German prison camp that he was unable to write is shown by the fact that only within the past few weeks was he able to notify his wife that he was still in the land of the living, after she had mourned his death for two years. Mrs. Blanchard returned to the Old Land soon after her husband had left, to be with her own people. The news came through Seaman Charles Wiley, former employe of the Massey-Harris factory, Brantford, who as a naval reservist was the first man to leave Brantford to rejoin, the naval call preceding that to the army veterans. He is a brother-in-law of Constable Blanchard, and was in the fighting on H.M.S. Kent, having wounds in both legs.

Four Sons Enlist.

How the war is affecting some farmers of the Ottawa Valley is shown in the case of John B. McLaren, who owns one of the largest and best farms in Renfrew County on the outskirts of Renfrew town. About a year ago two of his sons enlisted. Recently they reached France, and their arrival there filled two of their brothers at home with a resolve to enlist also. Now they are in khaki, and the father remains at home with a seven-year-old boy as his only helper.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S HOUSE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The woman of to-day who gives her own time and attention to keeping the domestic machinery in running order wants her house dress to be on approved fashion lines, because she knows that her appearance carries weight in this as in any other garment. Just how her requirements are met is shown by design No. 8,090.

The collar that marks the style of the hour found its way to this practical dress; it provides all the novelty that is really necessary in a work dress. An important feature is that the garment is cut in one piece and there is a choice of long or shorter length sleeves; if long, a band cuff finishes, and a roll cuff when the short sleeve is preferred. An elastic at normal waistline gathers the fulness of a skirt section that fits comfortably about the body and which has a width of 2¼ yards at its lower edge in size 36. A pocket either side in the skirt is a convenient addition.

Figured percale, chambray, gingham and linen are appropriate materials for this type of dress, with contrasting goods for the collar and perhaps to edge the pocket. With economy the watchword, every woman should avail herself of the advantages that paper patterns afford.

The dress pattern, No. 8,090, cuts in sizes 36, 40 and 44 bust. To make in size 36 requires 5⅛ yards of 36 inch material.

To obtain the pattern send 20 cents

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

British Capture Large Quantity Of Supplies in Mesopotamia

Turks Are Retiring in Great Confusion---Over Four Thousand Prisoners Taken, Also a Number of Guns and River Boats---Activity on the French Front---Two German Raids Repulsed by the French Troops

THE WAR ON ALL FRONTS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 2.—The pursuit is being continued in Mesopotamia by the victorious British forces out of Kut. The statement says the Turks, in great confusion, had passed through Aziziyah on Tuesday, and that since February 23, 4,300 Turks have been taken prisoners by the British.

"Since February 23 we have captured twenty-eight guns, nineteen trench mortars, eleven machine guns, three Turkish ships, two tugs, ten barges, thirty pontoons, in addition to the recapture of our gunboat Firefly," the statement said.

FORCED TO WORK.

ROUMANIAN HEADQUARTERS, March 2. — A Roumanian officer left behind at Wallachia succeeded in passing the German lines, and brought interesting information. The whole civil population between the ages of 18 and 42, he says, is compelled to work for the enemy. The Germans have requisitioned everything, leaving the population hardly enough to eat.

ALLIED CAMPS SHELLED.

SALONIKA, March 2.—The Germans are making aeroplane raids on a larger scale. During the last few days Janesh and Karesuli villages near the front were bombed. Yesterday 15 Albatrosses appeared over the Allied camps at Salonika and dropped bombs. This was the first bombing raid here in ten months. The material damage seems to have been one motor lorry burned. The raiders paid toll for their exploit, one of their machines being brought down by an Allied airman on the way back to the frontier, and the German officer and pilot were taken prisoner.

GERMAN RAIDS FAILED.

PARIS, March 2.—Two German raids, occurring simultaneously last night on the front west of Soissons, were broken up by French fire with losses to the Germans, the War Office announced to-day. A German trench near Vauquois, in the Argonne region, was raided and prisoners taken.

KAISER IS INDISPOSED.

AMSTERDAM, March 2.—Kaiser William is confined to his room with a severe chill, Berlin despatches reported to-day. His physicians are not apprehensive over his condition, but are insisting on all precautions. The Kaiser is receiving ministers in his apartments, and communicating daily with headquarters, despite his illness.

TWO AMERICANS LOST.

TORONTO, March 2.—A United Press despatch from Washington to-day says: An official despatch, tending to confirm that two Americans were lost in the torpedoing of the British barge "Galgorn Castle," Buenos Aires for Queenstown, reached the State Department to-day. Another message told of the unwarned torpedoing of the Donaldson liner "Tratianian," Halifax for Liverpool, in a night attack, but reported that one American aboard was saved.

SMITH TOWNSHIP CONTESTED DOCTOR'S BILL FOR INDIGENT

Dr. King Attended Elijah Fredenburg and Brought an Action in Division Court for $31 For His Services

JUDGE URGED SETTLEMENT

In an interesting case before Judge Huycke in the Division Court this morning, the question came up for decision as to the liability of townships for medical attention given to indigent patients sent in by them to the city hospitals. Dr. King sued the Township of Smith for $31.00 for medical services rendered to Elijah Fredenburg in the spring of 1916. In his evidence the doctor swore that this service was rendered to Fredenburg while he was attending the indigent patents of the city. He gave his services free to the patients from the city, but did not feel called upon to render free service to patients sent in by the surrounding townships. The doctor stated that the doctors of the city were being continually imposed upon, and often gave free treatment when there was no reason for so doing. Under cross-examination, Dr. King stated that it was the opinion of medical men in the city generally that under the new Act, the Medical Health Officer was the proper person to attend indigent patients at the hospitals, and that the other doctors should not be expected to give free services at the hospital from day to day as they had been in the habit of doing.

In delivering judgment, His Honour stated that while the townships were perhaps not legally liable for payments of the bill, they were certainly morally liable, and he urged Messrs. McKee, Kelly and Telford, representing the townships, to make a settlement with Dr. King, who, he said, certainly should be paid. "You would pay this if it were a private bill of your own," said the Judge, "and you ought to be as honest as councillors as you are as citizens."

Mr. Joseph Wearing appeared for Dr. King, and Mr. F. D. Kerr for the Township of Smith.

Men's Spring Suits At a Saving of $10

Gentlemen who want a new spring suit for Easter are offered a chance on Saturday to save ten dollars by leaving their measure to-morrow with the Globe Tailoring Company, corner Brock and George streets.

Few men can afford to resist such a good offer. Their offer is an extraordinary one at the price asked for suits to-day; and it looks as if the Globe will be kept busy from morning until closing time to-morrow night booking orders. After Saturday the same suits will be advanced 10 per cent.

MILLIONS LOANED

German Money Sent to Mexico in the Form of Personal Loans to Carranza's Government—Money Sent in Spite of Warning

SMELTERS PURCHASED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.

(By Robt. J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, March 2. — Millions of dollars have been sent to the Carranza Government of Mexico recently by the Germans in the United States, it was learned on high government authority to-day. Some of the millions were in the form of personal "loans" to Mexico. Other millions went into the purchase of smelter plants wherever available in Carranza's republic. The money was sent in spite of a warning by the United States that such "loans" would not have the support of this government unless all details of the arrangements between the loaning parties and Carranza met with the approval of Washington.

INSTRUCTIONS TO AGENTS.

It was definitely established to-day that full instructions to the German Consuls in the United States were sent to Von Bernstorff at the same time as the Zimmerman letter, covering the handling of pending business and to direct further dismantling of German ships in American harbours in event of a break in relations. They covered also the matter of instructions to be left by Consuls with special agents when the Consuls left this country. All goes to show, it is officially declared, that while at peace with this Government, Germany was constantly plotting hostile acts in hundreds of forms against the United States. It is known also that evidences of established German propaganda has been found in revolutions both in Cuba and Costa Rica, and restlessness in Colombia.

COL. ACKERMAN WILL NOT DISCRIMINATE AGAINST MEN WHO SIGNED NAT. SERVICE CARDS

Peterborough men who signed the National Service cards and who have been listed in Class No. 1, as defined by the National Service Commission, will not be embarrassed by the officers of the 247th Battalion. This was announced by Col. Ackerman to-day, who stated that the men who had signed the registration cards had acted in good faith, and he was aware that most of them had already tried to serve or were otherwise doing everything they could to assume a share of the present demands for service. These were willing men, who had signed their cards in good faith. Their promises were made to the Government, while hundreds of men in the city had not even signed the registration cards. Col. Ackerman estimated the number of the latter at 400, and these were the men who would receive the first attentions of the 247th Battalion in their recruiting efforts.

It would be an unfair discrimination against those 93 men to approach them after they had already tried to enlist while 400 slackers remained who had even ignored the Registration cards. Col. Ackerman made this statement, in view of Major Campbell's announcement that the names of the 93 men had been forwarded to the local headquarters.

WAR MAY EASILY EXTEND OVER ANOTHER WINTER

Director of Military Operations Has "No Patience With the Idea That the Germans Are at the End of Their Fighting Resources"—Refers to the British Successes in Mesopotamia.

BRILLIANT STRATEGY

Examiner Special:

LONDON, March 2.—The war may easily extend over another winter, as far as purely military factors are concerned, according to a statement made by Gen. Frederick B. Maurice, Director of Military Operations for the Imperial General Staff, in an interview. "I have no patience with the idea that the Germans are at the end of their fighting resources. They are still capable of and will put up a strong fight. From a purely military standpoint, I see no reason why the war should not go through another winter, but conditions outside the military zone may operate to end it sooner."

PURSUING THE TURKS.

Major-General Maurice expressed great satisfaction regarding the recent British successes over the Turks. He continued:

"It is undeniable that our prestige suffered much from the Dardanelles operations, from the fact that we were on the defensive for a long time in Egypt, and because of our retreat from Bagdad. This condition now is completely changed. The Turkish forces have been driven entirely from Egyptian territory and the decisive defeat with which they met at Kut-el-Amara completes our ascendancy.

"General Maude's crossing of the Shumran bend over 400 yards of flooded river was a particularly brilliant military operation. It compelled the Turks to withdraw rapidly from Sannayat and enables us to pursue them on the high side of the river. There are no marshes there, so floods will not impede our movements as they did when we were advancing below Kut."

Rubber Company Officials Change

L. D. Brown of Akron Succeeds Treasurer W. A. Means Who Becomes Second Vice-President

NEW YORK, N.Y., Mar. 2.—The B. F. Goodrich Company announced an important change in the personnel of its officials which brings L. D. Brown, who has been cashier of the First-Second National Bank of Akron, into the office of Treasurer, succeeding W. A. Means.

Mr. Means will be elected Second Vice-President of the Goodrich Company at the annual meeting, March 14th, and at the same time, Mr. Brown's appointment as Treasurer will be confirmed.

For almost twenty years Mr. Means has been associated with the Goodrich Company and during that time h has seen it grow from a comparatively small plant with a $2000,000 capitalization to the ninety million dollar institution of to-day, which is rated as the largest of its kind in the world. For the past seven years Mr. Means has occupied the office of Treasurer. This experience has qualified Mr. Means for the new responsibilities which the Second Vice President is obliged to handle, for it has been during the past twenty years that the rubber business has seen the greatest growth and development.

Steamers Will Be Confiscated

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 2.— The British prize court today refused to postpone confiscation in the cases of the steamers Kankakee, Hereking and Genesee, all flying American flags and alleged to be German owned. Further postponement of the confiscation decree was sought on the ground that the documents essential to the defendants were lost on the steamer Laconia, and also that the president of the American Trans-Atlantic was unwilling to travel through the danger zone to testify.

Judgment For Martin Hoover

In the Surrogate Court, this morning His Honour Judge Huycke gave judgment in favour of Martin Hoover, in a retrial, which took place yesterday. Several months ago Mr. Hoover was allowed his claim against the estate of Hulda Hoover, but this was objected to by the Inspector of Prisons and Public Charities. Yesterday the action was reopened with Mr. O. A. Langley acting for the Inspector. The result was the same as in the former action. Mr. Hoover was allowed his full claim. Mr. B. D Hall appealed for the plaintiff and Mr. Joseph Wearing for the Trust and Guarantee Co., administrators of the Hulda Hoover Estate.

President Wilson is Ready to Endorse the Armed Neutrality Bill Any Time it Passes—Congress Aroused By by Disclosures

LEADER'S OPINION

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, March 2.—All the power President Wilson asks in dealing with the German crisis will be granted by Congress within thirty-six hours, leaders declared to-day. The President is ready to sign the armed neutrality bill any time it passes and to act at once in arming American ships.

WASHINGTON, March 2. — The British Embassy announced to-day that no official connected with them knew anything about the Zimmerman Mexico Japan plot letter until it was made public yesterday.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Aroused by the disclosures of Germany's plot to unite Japan and Mexico with her in a war upon the United States, and then convinced by official evidence of its authenticity, Congress yesterday abandoned the delays and obstructions which have checked President Wilson's efforts to be clothed with express authority to deal with the submarine menace.

The House after a ten-hour debate and by an overwhelming majority, passed a bill to empower the President to arm merchant ships and providing for a hundred-million-dollar bond issue. This bill, however, does not contain the grant of authority to use "other instrumentalities" which the President specifically desires, and would prevent Government war insurance for munitions ships, a prohibition which the President does not approve.

First, Last and All the Time.

Official announcement was made at the White House that the Administration stands behind the Senate bill "first, last and all the time," with its provision for "other instrumentalities." In the Senate an attempt to ask the President to disclose the Government's source of information of the attempted intrigue with Mexico and Japan on the supposition that it came from one of Germany's enemies, was defeated after a sharp and sensational debate. Instead, the Senate merely asked for official notice of the authenticity of the despatch of instructions from German Foreign Minister von Eckhardt in Mexico City. The President transmitted it immediately with the statement that it would not be compatible with the public interests to reveal further details concerning it.

Congressmen classed with the so-called pacifist group in the House who have been opposing a grant of authority to the President on the ground that it would be a step toward war, announced that they would vote for the armed neutrality bill in the belief that to arm the President to protect American rights might be the way to avoid war.

WOMEN' WAR AND POLITICS.

Women's magnificent work in the various home, hospital and field activities, in connection with the war, have brought about an intensified regard for her capabilities; and directly challenged recognition of her rights to political equality. Her work in war has paved the way to her entrance into politics. Not only that, but a wider recognition of her capacity for public services, other than war work, or marking ballots. The British House of Lords has legislatively conceded to women the privilege of practising as solicitors, a work for which, if a play upon words is permitted, she is well trained—she has been so long soliciting recognition of her civil and political rights that she has become more or less expert in the business. From an almost unexpected source as the House of Lords, another recognition of woman's newly developed importance comes—from Rev. Dr. Symonds of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, well known in Peterborough. The other day he expressed the opinion that women should be allowed to enter the gospel ministry, and preach from the pulpit.

There is no doubt that at the present session of the Legislature the Bill permitting women full political enfranchisement—the right of voting for members of the Legislature, if not the right to a seat in the Legislature—will become law, and entitle her to vote not only at municipal elections, but in parliamentary elections. Sir William Hearst, the leader of a party that has for years antagonized the cause of woman suffrage, has with all the zeal of a new convert, intimated that things will be so arranged that women should vote at the next general election.

Since the question of woman's right to vote is virtually settled, the question of the use of her right and of her place in politics will become an interesting matter of speculation. Will woman use her ballot now that she has got it, or will possession lower its value in her eyes? No woman no matter how anxious to be photographed, has ever been known to be pleased with the result. Possession and disappointment must go hand in hand. Will woman appreciate and use the ballot, or will her attitude to it be in accordance with the sentiment of Lord Byron, a specialist in feminine psychology—

'Tis an old lesson, time approves it true,
And they who know it best deplore it most;
When all is won that desire to woo,
The paltry prize is hardly worth the cost.

Will woman use the ballot when once she gets it? There may be a question in regard to the general rank of political matters, but there is hardly a doubt when moral questions are to be decided at the polls. There is no doubt that when the question of the protection of their homes—and husbands—and society comes up on the referendum vote on prohibition in 1919, the woman ballot will play a marked part in deciding the issue.

As to woman's part and place and influence in general politics there is more room for conjecture. If she decides to take an active part and vote as numerously as the men, she will keep the candidates of both parties guessing; that is for the first two or three contests. Party workers won't be able to "size up" the voters' lists and decide—"she's for us"—"she's agin us"—or be able to tick off the purchasable female voter as they have become expert in doing in respect of men voters. The addition of some half a million female voters to the lists, will for a time render election forecasts a difficult matter.

If women, however, doesn't use the ballot, and sits down satisfied with having it, content with the joy of possession, no harm is done. The Legislature will have done its duty in giving woman something she has a right to have. It is no more a concern of theirs whether women will use the ballot wisely or at all than it is the concern of a man, who pays an honest debt as a matter of doing right, whether his creditor uses the money he is entitled to wisely, or uses it at all. It is a great thing to do right—fiat justitia, ruat coelum.

MUST LOOK OUT FOR OURSELVES.

The Montreal Herald is indignant over the coal situation. It admits that there has been advance in price, due to traffic congestion, but contends that the selling agents of the Deleware and Hudson and Western coal companies might be induced to show what they charged Montreal wholesalers and compare the latter's prices with what the people have been compelled to pay—in some cases $13.50 per ton. The Herald says:

> It has been shown that according to the customs returns the coal coming into Montreal in January, 1917, was valued at $5.23 per ton, as against $4.65 per ton in January, 1916. This is a difference of only 58 cents per ton, yet the price has been increased to the consumers in some instances as much as $12 per ton, making a total of $20 for what costs them $5.26. Surely it is time the Government took action!

If the conditions are such in regard to manipulation of coal to advance prices, it is reasonable to assume that similar or some other form of manipulation is responsible for extraordinary and unnecessary rise in the price of food commodities. The Ottawa Journal-Press, a government newspaper, says:

> Canada, to a very large extent, is under the heel of corporation influences in regard to the necessaries of life. Domestic trade is largely throttled by combines and agreements, and there are retail merchants from coast to coast bound hand and foot. The consumer is victimized accordingly and has to pay the price demanded under buying and selling agreements and arrangements. This is in effect what has been discovered as a result of the investigations which have been taking place during the past few weeks under the cost of living regulations. It may be said, so far as individuals are concerned, that the retail merchants have come out of the preliminary investigations in a very satisfactory light.

Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, says the invesitgations show that the retail merchants are, as a general thing, not to blame. They have, however, shown a widespread existence of buying and selling agreements forced on retail dealers by jobbers and manufacturers of various foods. He further states that these things contravene the Order-in-Council, and that the guilty parties are being warned; and that he hopes this warning will be heeded "to the material advantage of the consumer." "Warning" seems to be a mild way of dealing with people who in effect are no better than highway robbers. The offenders should not escape punishment for their crimes nor be left free to concoct some other form of food robbery.

Evidently the Minister's mild way of dealing with these offenders is not a case of the "punishment"—warning—"fitting the crime." Prof Leacock of Montreal, Canada's highest authority on economics, in a recent address, suggested a more radical, more direct and more effective way. He said he would set up an inquisition—"trace every article of plain diet—potatoes, milk, flour, meat, from the producer to the consumer—

> "I would make it clear that in time of war and in the face of famine, purchase and sale is no longer a private act. Every man should answer to the community for the price he charges, just or unjust, fair or extortionate. I would treat a monopolist as I would a public thief. He should feel the full weight of the law."

This is what business governments, and what faithful trustees of the public interests would do. But when, as the government organ at Ottawa says, "combinations have the public of Canada under their heel," through having the government in the same position, we cannot expect any other treatment—as long as corporations are allowed to exert their influence upon the governments, and visit the results upon the people.

We owe it to corporation influences that the Trent Canal is not completed, and we shall perhaps owe to that delay in completion, as a result, grave injury to Peterborough's industrial interests.

While we cannot hope for much of anything like prompt and effective government action to help relieve the food situation, we must depend upon ourselves to increase production of food stuffs. Such production is the price of winning the war in the old country. Sir Arthur Lee, Director-General of Food Production, says he will import 2,000 traction ploughs from America and equip them with headlights for night plowing—they are to be made to work for 24 hours a day. If such intense efforts are to be made in Britain to counteract the effects of Hun methods, in the way of food scarcity, are we not called upon at home to take similar methods to counteract the Hun methods of Canadian combinesters. We must grow all the food we can at home, and to the extent of our production, snap our fingers at the cornerers of food.

The home garden plot—every one of them—and the vacant lot—every one cultivated to capacity, will help solve the problem.

MORE NICKEL TRUST REVELATIONS.

If any more proof were required of the need of a revolution in the relations of the Ontario Government with the nickel trusts, surely that proof is to be found in the fact that as recently as December last the Canadian Copper Company was granted 236 acres of valuable mining lands at the rate of $3 per acre. This revelation was made in the Ontario Legislature last week by Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C. The Hon. Mr. Ferguson endeavored to explain that the claims were staked in the ordinary way under the mining laws by a private prospector, but the fact remains that the patents were issued direct to the Canadian Copper Company. Well may the people ask whether the province of Ontario has any rights in the public domain. And well may the people of Canada demand to know why, in spite of the criticisms and suspicions attaching to deals with these nickel trusts, resources of the most valuable character continue to be handed over to these trusts and that at a paltry three dollars per acre. Are men who would make such a deal worthy to be trustees of the national heritage of Canada?—Montreal Herald.

GOVERNMENT BY "OPPOSITION"

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 28. — In the western provinces of Canada, as indeed practically everywhere under the British system, it is the government which rules a country. Ontario has the unique distinction of possessing such a vigorous and capable opposition that it is the real governing factor in the province. Time after time in the last few years has the government after unbending and reactionary opposition turned around and adopted fundamentally important measures which the Opposition had been advancing in able and active campaigns.

Prohibition was the outstanding example last session; woman suffrage is the equally important instanc this year.

What the public is thinking now-a-days is doubtless this: If the Opposition while out of power can accomplish such great reforms what will happen when they get into power? And the public is likely to answer that they want to give the Opposition a chance for a fuller exercise of their abilities. When this Opposition becomes the Government it is safe to predict that the greatest era of reform and advancement which the province ever saw will be ushered in.

On the question of Woman Suffrage the McDonald Bill now becomes law, and Wm. McDonald, the Liberal member for North Bruce, J. C. Elliott, Liberal member for West Middlesex, Alan Studholme, Labour member for East Hamilton, as well as Mr. Rowell himself and the Liberal members who favoured this project year after year, in face of the heavy opposition of the government, have every reason to be delighted at the turn of events, which are at last giving the women of the province what they justly deserved years ago.

Mr. McDonald's criticism of the government as "trailers" is one so apt that it is likely to stick.

IS READY TO SIGN

trality bill, not because opposed to it, but to force an extra session of Congress, declared their conviction that the situation demanded united support of the President.

No More "Playing Politics."

A Congress badly divided, and, in its dying moments, with its legislative programmes at sixes and sevens and charges of "playing politics" flying from every side, suddenly took on a new aspect.

It was as if the cry "America first" had rung through the halls of both Houses and the response had been almost instantaneous.

In the Senate members who have opposed the President in his manner of dealing with Germany on the ground that it was leading to war, were found fighting influences which the President's supporters declared were calculated to embarrass him.

There were bitter references in debate to Senators to whom the President would be expected to look for advice on foreign affairs. Chairman Stone, of the Foreign Relations Committee, was voted down in his own committee on his own draft of a resolution asking the President to disclose if the American Government's information concerning the latest phase of German intrigue came from one of Germany's enemies.

To the Next Stage.

With the authenticity of the now celebrated Zimmerman instructions officially established to the Senate and the armed neutrality bill passed, the House is expected to advance the situation to the next stage—the perfection of an armed neutrality bill acceptable to the President in all respects.

The question of an extra session of Congress is still undetermined. President Wilson told enquirers to-day he did not expect to call one, although it developed that Democrat whips in the House were advising members and members-elect to be prepared to attend on March 6.

Secretary of State Lansing authorized this statement: "We do not believe that Japan has had any knowledge of this or that she would consider any proposition made by an enemy."

As to Mexico, the Secretary said: 'We have confidence that Mexico would not be a party to any such agreement in view of the friendly relations existing between this Government and the de facto Government of Mexico."

Tokio Rejected Idea.

The evidences at hand are that if Mexico, as Germany suggested, communicated to Japan the proposal for an attack on the United States it met with a reception in Tokio which was quite contrary to what Berlin had expected.

Observers here believe that the breakdown of the scheme, so far as Japan was concerned, was signalized when the Mexican Government suddenly reversed its attitude and announced that it had no intention of cutting off the British supply of naval fuel oil, as had plainly been indicated in Gen. Carranza's proposal to make peace in Europe by cutting off exports of food and munitions from neutrals.

At Columbus, N.M., it is charged that German influences were responsible for the Villa raid ,with the object of forcing intervention by the U. S., which was expected to draw the attention of the American military forces and munitions and consequently cut down the munitions exports to the allies.

It is probable that a full account of German intrigues in this country as well as in Central and South America of which the American Government has knowledge, may never become publicly known. It is known positively, however, that evidences of the activities of Count Von Bernstorff, sufficient to force his departure from the country at any time, were in the hands of the Government even before it knew of the attempted intrigue with Mexico and Japan.

A SUBURBAN HOME

Means no rent to pay, no moving to do. It means trees, lawns, shrubbery, flower and vegetable garden, pure air, safe place for your children to play away from the city streets and their evil influence, better health especially for the children, fewer doctor bills, neighbourly neighbours, low taxes, and many privileges.

Every payment on your home is a deposit in the most profitable savings bank that cannot fail. Something to leave to your family, always increasing in value as the city grows and as you wisely direct your children and employ your spare time making improvements. Infinitely better than a bundle of rent receipts of no value.

I have land in north and south, close suburban, which I cannot use and want to sell on any reasonable terms desired. Come to me and own your home.

Everyday Reading

What does being a Christian mean? In our day we have to be careful to look to the real meaning of words. Many words have to the majority lost their real signification. Some words possibly have really changed their meaning by being used wrongfully for a long time. This being the case, it is wise on our part to carefully look for the original and real meaning of words that are of intense import. The word "Christian" is mentioned three times in the New Testament scriptures: Acts 11:16, Acts 26:28 and 1 Peter 4:16. The meaning of the word Christ is "The Annointed" and is synonymous with the word "Messiah", the Saviour of the world. The disciples of Christ, in the days of Jesus upon the earth, were followers or learners of Christ. Hence the reason why they could be called "Christians" are recorded in Acts 11:26. Therefore, to be a Christian is to be a follower or learner of Jesus. A person may have his name inscribed on the roll book of some (so called) Christian order society in character to a real Christian or follower of Jesus. An individual may stand aloof from all (so called) church organizations and call himself a Christian, but if he is devoid of the character of Jesus his claim to being a Christian is false. Amid the varied religious clamour, on the street corner, in the public halls, in the buildings called churches, or that that comes to the solitary individual; is there a danger of the people getting confused? Is it any wonder that men speak in a sneering manner, when speaking of so called Christians? Is it not strange that there are so few agnostics of sceptics among us, when we consider the fact that very many of our fellow citizens and countrymen sit and listen to those so called Christians, times without number, and see their unrighteous acts in their every day life. Have men and women become too indolent in regard to spiritual things to think for themselves? These questions I leave open to the reader to answer. A return to simple facts is necessary. Facts are stubborn things, and yet so wonderfully valuable. He that denies a fact, knowlingly lies. My fellow travelers through time, let us each dig through the rubbish that has been accumulating for so long a time, and get down to solid foundation. In doing this we help ourselves and in helping ourselves we help others. Do not be discouraged and say it is no use, all is wrong. Do not fold your hands and acquiesce. Oh shame! Let us be men. We are not here to dream, to drift, let us face the struggle of right against the wrong. Let us do this in God's name. Fear not God and one man is a majority. Let us shake ourselves free from everything (no matter how dear) that hinders us from knowing the truth for ourselves. My testimony is, that the day we seek God with all our heart, we will find Him. In finding Jesus we find God. We find the way of deliverance from sin. We find the truth that makes us blessedly free, and are made alive spiritually. We have eternal life. What comes to us in this life I cannot tell you all, but I can tell you, putting it in a few words, as I said in my last communication, I say again:—Purity, freedom and power. Fellowmen, the time is ripe, the time has come for a glorious revival of real Christianity, a revival that shall be of the operation of the Spirit of God. Who will fall in line, and do what God wants him to do?

Confession of a Returned Egg

(By H. F. Gadsby)

OTTAWA, March 1—The following confession of a Returned Egg is not without interest. We will give it as near as possible in the words of the victim with an occasional question by the reporter to keep the story to the point.

"I am free after being a year in jail! What are my feelings now that I am restored to society? What is there in my experience which may be helpful to others? Let me begin at the beginning with my sad little story."

"It was just twelve months ago this June that I was sentenced to prison for an indeterminate period. It was, I remember, to be not more than two years, and it might be considerably less if my behaviour was good and my conduct approved by the authorities. At the time I did not consider the judge lenient, nor did I take much comfort of the thought that I could work out my own salvation."

"My chief feeling was one of resentment. I had been sentenced for what do you think? For being fresh! How could an egg only a week old be anything else? Besides it was a fault that I could have outgrown had they given me a chance. But no. Prison bars for me. Do you wonder that I fume and almost fret myself into a fricassee when I look back upon that piece of injustice.

"However, there were several million dozen eggs in the same plight, some young like myself, others older, but not one bad—as yet. Innocent, virginal almost, wishing nothing so much as early martyrdom in some good cause, we were torn from our pastoral surroundings and hurried to the dungeon. I do not know what happened to my companions, but I know that for my part I was not even given time to bid my mother good-bye."

"I need not dwell on my trial or the indignities that were rained upon me by a fat, red-faced man who put me to the question with a candle. He seemed to search my very soul. He was, I recollect, an onion eater, and I did not think any the more of him for that. It was on his say-so that I went down for twelve months. I shall never forgive him. My fondest hope is that we shall meet again and that he will try to eat me and choke to death in the attempt. Believe me I have something in my bosom right now besides revenge that would put him to the bad. An egg doesn't stick around in jail for twelve months for nothing. I have an accumulated rage in my heart that would poison a goat.

"What was the most distressing feature of your life in prison?" asked the reporter.

"The atmosphere. By all odds, the atmosphere. I shall never forget it—the pungent, biting reek of it. My very soul is sodden with it. If I come out of prison with my nature embittered put it down to the atmosphere. It got into me deep. I am not even like the curate's egg, sweet in spots. My disposition has been soured all through. The atmosphere was awful. I went into that horrible place a brown egg — and look at me now. As white as Mary's little lamb and ten times as tough."

"Were there no alleviations?" the reporter inquired.

"Oh, yes," replied the Returned Egg, with a wistful smile. "Mr. J. W. Flavelle used to visit me in prison. People say that he was primarily responsible for putting me there, but I can't believe it—he is such a kind, good man. I'm sure he wished me well. He used to say the most beautiful things to me."

"For example, he would tell me that it isn't what you do but what you are that makes for character. 'Therefore,' he would say, with his Sherbourne Street Sunday School smile, 'remember that it is your duty not only to be good, but to stay good. If you don't stay good you will greatly disappoint me.'"

"Then I would reassure him and tell him that I would do my best, and he would take me in his hand and dust me off and call me his precious. It almost became a scandal the way he would call me his precious, but he meant it only in a fatherly way. What he had in his mind was how precious I and my companions would be, say at Christmas time, when we would be released and mixed in with the new laid eggs at a dollar a dozen. You can figure out for yourself just how precious a few million two and a half cent eggs would be to Mr. Flavelle when sold at the right time for eight cents apiece.

"No," said the Returned Egg, "Mr. Flavelle never used words to me that could not have been uttered with perfect propriety to the world at large. And he never thought any more of me than he did of any other egg. Anybody who says that he did is a liar and a slanderer. His whole concern was for my state of health. I had to be strong to grapple with the high cost of living when I came out, and, thanks to Mr. Flavelle, I am strong. If you don't believe it, just try a fall with me and see how strong I am."

"It is a great satisfaction to me," continued the Returned Egg, "to see my benefactor so honoured by the Borden Government. He is, I understand, the Chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board. Forgive me a poor little joke. From cold storage eggs to shrapnel. From one high explosive to another—both shell games. Mr. Flavelle is a wonderful man. And so keen on uplift."

"Look at me for uplift. Young and unapotted from the world I was worth three cents. Old and pickled I'm worth eight cents. Can you beat it Who did it? Mr. Flavelle and the Borden Government's forty-five per cent. tariff. Do the people realize how much the Borden Government and philanthropists like Mr. Flavelle have done to keep the cost of living on a high moral plane? Where would I be now if it were not for the advice and assistance of these Christian gentlemen? Would I, an eight cent egg, be expecting to lie down presently in the same pan with forty-cent bacon? Not at all. They'd be shipping me to China where they like their eggs gamey. Instead of which I'm paid to stay at home and kill people here. There's nothing like protection for the home market."

"I must say," said the Returned Egg, "that I have no kick against the Borden Government. It is the true friend of the cold storage egg. It enables us to forget our past by associating on equal terms with new laid eggs and does not subject us to a cruel competition with innocent eggs from other countries. I think we cold storage eggs ought to be very thankful indeed to the Borden Government for keeping up the high cost of living and thus preserving our self respect."

"BETTER GOODS FOR LESS"

WHY NEWFOUNDLAND PULP

Lord Northcliffe's Prophecy in Regard to the War

Sir Daniel Morris lectured on the wood pulp, paper, and other productions of Newfoundland at the Notting Hill High School, London. Lady Campbell, who presided, said that these lectures had been arranged by the Women's Patriotic League in order to educate women as to the products of the Empire, so that after the war they would buy only those goods originating from the Colonies and the allies.

Sir Daniel Morris said that the industry had so developed that 80 per cent. of the paper used in Britain and elsewhere was made from Newfoundland timber—black spruce and balsam fir. Other trees were utilized for pit props for coal mines.

Lord Northcliffe had said that he and those associated with him chose Newfoundland for the manufacture of wood pulp because they were certain that this war would come. They would not, therefore, spend money in building factories in Norway and Sweden. Nearly 10,000 of the inhabitants of the island were engaged in cod fishing, and a great portion of the fish were exported to South America.

The tops of cupboards, wardrobes and tall bookcases should have papers laid over them, not only to prevent dust from sifting down, but to lighten the monthly housecleaning.

If the oil in your lamp is poor or does not give a sufficiently bright light, put a small piece of camphor in the oil and you will get a much brighter light. Or a few drops of vinegar will answer the same purpose.

FIGURES REVEAL STAGGERING COST OE EUROPE'S WAR

Task of Keeping 24,000,000 Men in the Field Told in Detail —Vast Trench Material—Millions in Munition Work

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Geographic Society has made an economic summary of the geography of the great munitions trade of the European war.

Discussing the vastness of munition consumption the society considers it from three viewpoints—the cost of equipping a single soldier, the immense quantities of material required to maintain armies in the field. The society's bulletin says:

"When it is remembered that there are to-day under arms more than 24,000,000 soldiers in the European war, the immensity of the task of keeping these men in the field and keeping them supplied with the munitions with which they wage war will appear.

"It has been estimated that it costs approximately $100 to outfit a soldier. Of this $25 goes for his gun and $35 for his 1,000 rounds of cartridges. The average life of a uniform under modern service conditions is short; that of the ordinary rifle is six months. In all of the history of war there never has been such a rapid exhaustion of all of the materials with which it is made.

$829,000 Per Corps a Day.

"An idea can be gained of the immensity of the outlay required in the prosecution of a great battle by reference to some of the figures from Verdun. A seventy-five centimeter gun can fire about 400 projectiles a day. Each of these projectiles costs approximately $6. Counting this and the depreciation of the gun, which is particularly rapid, the daily outlay for its operation amounts to $2,700.

"It is estimated that the 120 seventy-five centimeter cannon in an army corps fired all day, cost in munitions and depreciation $320,000. In addition to this, each army corps has about forty pieces of heavy artillery. Explosives and depreciation for a single day's work for them totals $500,000, making the total artillery expense of an army corps $820,000 a day.

"The fighting of 100 days around Verdun cost an amount which is represented by a column of gold one yard square and 312 feet high, c approximately as high as the statute of Liberty on the capital dome at Washington.

VAST TRENCH MATERIAL.

"If the outlay in gun metal and powder is heavy, it is no more so than the outlay for materials demanded by the present necessities of trench warfare. An officer who has studied this phase of the present war carefully says that to put a trench in a state for occupation in winter requires 1,250,000 running feet of 3x3 timber, 36,000 running feet of corrugated iron, 6,250 sand bags weighing 1,000 tons, and 24,000 standards and pickets to the mile.

"In addition to this, 900 miles of barbed wire has to be used, weighing 110 tons. When one stops to recall the hundreds of miles of trenches which stretch across Europe in different directions, and how often sections of these trenches have to be rebuilt, he can gain some idea of the tremendous amount of mateiral required in their outfitting.

MILLIONS IN MUNITION WORK

Another picture of the vastness of the munitioning trade and the immensity of the task of keeping the armies in the field and in fighting condition may be had from the statement that there now are more than 4,000 controlled munition plants in Great Britain alone.

"Of these nineteen out of twenty never produced war materials before the war broke out. They employ nearly $3,000,000 men and nearly 750,000 women. The vastness of the industry in England is not out of proportion to that in France.

"Although Germany holds 70 per cent. of France's coal and some 80 per cent of its iron, France has been able, by the opening up of new furnaces and by immense importations of ore and pig metal largely to overcome this handicap.

"While it is difficult to present authentic figures upon the proportions of the munitions used by the allies furnished by the United States, the figures of the department of commerce do show something of the growth of the munitions trade. Authorities wiedly disagree as to the percentage of America's contribution to munitions. One authority puts it as low as 2 per cent. while another says it does not exceed 5 per cent.

"Whatever the percentage may be the figures of the department of commerce show that during the first eight months of 1914 our exports of horses, mules, brass, and manufactures of copper, explosives, India rubber products, iron and steel manufacture, lead, leather and manufactures of leather, nickel, mineral oils, sugar, surgical apparatus, tin, zinc, and manufactures of zinc amounted to $433,000,000. During the first eight months of 1916 our exports of those same materials amounted to $1,985,000,000.

"From these figures it would appear that our contribution to the munitions trade of Europe during the year 1916 would approximate more than $2,000,000,000. Our exportation of explosives alone for the calendar year will reach upward of $700,000,000. During the first nine months of 1916 American exports to the allied nations amounted to $3,250,000,000 as against $750,000,000 for all of the other nations of the earth, belligerent and neutral alike."

Soldiers Acknowledge Socks and Parcels

During the past month the secretary of St. Peter's Patriotic Club has received grateful acknowledgment from several of the boys overseas who have received Christmas boxes from the Club. hf

Corporal Wm. J. O'Brien, writing from "Somewhere in France," received his box on January 6th. He says: "It arrived during the inevitable period of want that follows the Christmas week of plenty—thus I was able to make a good fellow of myself with the boys who shared my billet. It was indeed a well chosen assortment and arrived in splendid condition, and I am most grateful to the ladies of the Club for their kindness."

Pte. Harold White, who is only 17 years of age and who has been in the trenches for 18 months, in writing to the secretary of St. Peter's Patriotic Club, says: "I received the box sent by your club and was more than pleased to know that though far away I am not forgotten."

Pte. D. E. Allen, 1st Canadian Batt., France, writes that he is very grateful for all the good things sent by the Club, especially the socks, which he says are needed badly in the trenches, and which are always welcomed by the boys.

Letters have also been received from Sergt. J. L. Kenneally, Trooper R. J. Walsh, 109721, B.S.H., Sergt. Ed. J. Dillon, Pte. J Sweeney, Pte. H. Turner and Pte. T. Griffin.

The boys are very grateful and wish to thank all the members of the Club for their kindness. They also wish them success in their undertaking and hope that they will all be together by Christmas, 1917. So keep up the good work and help the boys.

MRS. A. H. LEHANE,
Secretary.

20 City Trucks Are Sent Out For Food

Baltimore Enters Fight to Put Combines Out of Business and Relieve City's Distress

BALTIMORE, Md. March 2—Twenty-five trucks of the city departments will be sent out in the country surrounding Baltimore to-day and gather in farm products in an attempt by the municipality to help smash the corners in foodstuffs.

Four counties will be visited and, if the plan is successful, trucks will be sent to the eastern shore.

This was decided on at a meeting of the board of estimates at Mayor Preston's house. Spot cash is to be paid to the farmers out of the city's contingent fund right over the side of the trucks.

Potatoes, eggs, cabbage, spinach and onions are to be the chief things sought.

Four city officials have been detailed to each truck, two to dicker with the farmers and two to run the truck.

The trucks will be run with their supplies to the city markets. Mayor Preston said that he expected to cut 25 per cent. off the costs to the consumers.

As decided on to-day, it is planned to limit the quantities sold to a buyer to the average amount sold weekly to one householder, to prevent "ringing in."

The mayor said he expected each day to get the 24 loads sold out by night so that they may be dispatched the next morning for new lots.

The city officials kept the telephone and telegraph wires busy today getting in touch with farmers in Hartford, Baltimore, Anne Arundel and Howard counties. There is over $50,000 available for starting the campaign.

Capt. Thomas Cook Found Not Guilty

WELLAND, March 2. — In the Supreme Court here Captain Thomas Cook of Port Robinson, formerly of Midland, was found not guilty by the jury on a charge of manslaughter. The charge was based on the death of Harry Brown, a watchman on a dredge at Port Robinson, a few hours after he was assaulted by Captain Cook on the night of December 1st.

The defence was based upon the plea that Captain Cook was so drunk he was not in any way responsible for what he did on that occasion. Mr. Justice Clute, who presided, told the jury that this plea could have no effect upon their verdict but only upon the severity of his sentence, and he charged strongly against the accused saying: "I am bound to instruct you as a matter of law that no just and complete answer has been made to the charge, and the charge as fully and conclusively made out of the evidence is to be believed, and I see no reason to disbelieve it."

The jury however returned in less than half an hour with a verdict of not guilty. Captain Cook is more than 60 years old, and the victim of the assault was more than seventy.

Candy Overcomes Fear of Submarines

BOSTON, Mass, March 2.—A boys love of candy may prove stronger than his fear of submarines, as Captain Swart, of the Dutch steamship Eemdijk, successfully demonstrated yesterday. His youthful cabin boy and the cooks' mess boy deserted Monday rather than face the hazards of a voyage to Rotterdam. Yesterday Captain Swart met them at the Netherlands Consulate, and, having some first hand knowledge of their fondness for sweets, he talked candy rather than wages. The boys, at sight of the quantity of confections displayed, promptly agreed to return to the ship.

The vessel, which carries a heavy cargo of grain, is now anchored below Quarantine to prevent further desertions, while an effort is being made to bring up the crew to the required complement.

HOW TO GET STRONG

A Simple Remedy.

Whatever the cause, we want to say to every person who needs strength, you need Vinol as it is the most efficient strength creator we have in our store. Here is proof from Dorchester, Mass.:

"I don't know what we would do without Vinol in our family. I was weak, nervous and run-down as the result of an operation, and Vinol restored my strength. Then Grandmother had a nervous breakdown, and Vinol built her up and restored her health and strength after everything else had failed. We have used Vinol for 13 years in our family, and would not be without it in the house." Myrtle L. Healy, Dorchester, Mass.

We believe in Vinol because we know it is a great strength creator,—due to the beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine, so we always return the purchase money if Vinol fails to benefit those who buy it.

Bar Export Of Potatoes to U. S.

Government to Do So, Says Foster to Donovan.

TORONTO, March 2.—A. E. Donovan, M.P.P., yesterday received from Sir George E. Foster, Acting Premier, a reply to his telegram of a few days ago appealing to the Government to take action to prevent excessive advances in the price of potatoes.

Sir George Foster writes that the Government is taking action in the direction of the request and will take immediate steps to prevent the further exportation of potatoes from Canada.

BOARD OF TRADE OPEN TO FARMERS

HAMILTON, March 2.—The question of having a farmers' department in the Hamilton Board of Trade for the purpose of bringing these two bodies closer together was recommended at a special meeting of the board. An effort will be made to secure a membership of 100 and as a special inducement the membership rates will be lowered. Plans were arranged to canvass for members throughout the rural districts within a 20-mile radius of Hamilton. The idea will be definitely acted upon at meeting of of the council of the Board of Trade later.

Two Meatless Days For Switzerland

Bundesrat Announces Drastic Regulations in an Attempt to Conserve Food Supply.

BERNE, March 2.—The Bundesrate announced the long awaited restriction of food distribution, whereby Switzerland will have two meatless days weekly, must do without whipped cream and similar dishes, and must limit its egg consumption. The regulations regarding meat prescribe that on two days a week the use of beef, pork, goat meat, mutton and horse meat is forbidden in hotels, restaurants and private houses. No one is exempt, but restaurants are permitted to serve liver, kidney, brains, heart, lungs and sausages made from any of the foregoing.

The egg and fish supply of Switzerland is declared to be very meagre, and private families are urged to obey all rules that may be laid for public houses. The regulations further specify that only one meat and one egg dish may be served to a guest, and some egg preparations are listed as meat. The canton authorities are permitted to make special exceptions for festivities.

In the interest of the conservation of the milk supply, the sale of whipped cream is forbidden in all public places such as cafes and pastry shops. The same provision forbids the giving of more than fifteen grammes of sugar with a tea or coffee order and limits the quantity of sugar which may be used for frostings. Butter may be used with cheese. The use of egg meals at which no meat or egg dishes are supplied and may no longer be used withc heese. The use of eggs in making pastry is also prohibited.

The Bundesrat says that the regulations are issued because it is "preferable to clear the situation by direct prohibition."

NEW PLANS FOR LAND REFORM STIR IRELAND

Proposed Effort Aims at Doubling of the Cultivated Area—Cause of the Trouble—May Double Village Area

BY F. X CULLEN.

DUBLIN.—All Ireland is discussing excitedly the new scheme propounded by the board of agriculture for the increase of food production, and one can almost tell a man's politics by the attitude he adopts towards it. If he is a Nationalist he blesses it, and if he is a Unionist he curses it.

There are a few cross currents of opinion. If a man is a big land owner, Unionist of Nationalist, he curses it, while if he is a small cultivator he is likely to look on it kindly.

The secret of the advocacy and the opposition is that it is the thin end of the wedge for breaking up the grass ranches where bullocks have taken the place of men. This has been the policy of the Nationalists for generations, and has been opposed by the Unionists.

Now that the necessity for producing more food has come, it is evident that the grass must be plowed up and the question of how it is to be done arises.

CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE

The Board of Agriculture has issued an order that in 1917 all holders of ten acres and over must till one-tenth more of their land than they did in 1916. If the occupant is unable for lack of labour or any other cause to till it himself, he may let it to others, or failing that the department may enter on it and arrange to have it tilled in any way that seems most convenient. The way selected has been letting "in conacre," and it is over this that the whole trouble has arisen.

Under the present Irish land laws an ordinary letting of land to a tenant becomes a letting in perpetuity, subject only to the payment of rent. It is in practice the extension of the old Ulster "tenant right" to the whole of Ireland, and really amounts to dual ownership.

There is another form of letting in Irish law, which gets over this practice, and it is called letting "in conacre." This means letting the land for the growth of a specific crop for eleven months only.

If the letting in conacre were to be the end of the department's policy no one would object. The large land owners would be glad enough to let to their smaller neighbors and receive their rents without the trouble of personal tillage and superintendence, but they fear that the present head of the department, T. W. Russell, who is a Nationalist, will introduce men who will refuse to leave at the end of their eleven.

SYSTEM BAD FOR COUNTRY.

Of course they will not have a leg to stand on in law, but they will have public opinion behind them and public opinion makes law quicker in Ireland under present conditions than in any other part of the world.

The men, moreover really have a moral claim to the land, for it is agreed that the system of great grass ranches supporting few families while the population is struggling to cultivate the less fertile soil is uneconomic and bad for the country generally.

It is bad even for the landlords, but they prefer it because it clears their land of possible trouble makers and relieves them of the invidious necessity of rent collecting and enforcement of payment.

Now they see this freedom from trouble threatened by the department's policy of settling small cultivators on the land, who, the land lords declare, and rightly, too, will never leave once they set foot on it.

MAY DOUBLE TILLAGE AREA

It is estimated that the scheme will about double the area of tillage in Ireland so that one can see how little of the land was devoted to the raising of direct food crops. Instead of 2,300,000 acres 3,500,000 will come under the plow or spade this year.

One criticism that is quite just is the absence of any plan for the provision of agricultural tools and machinery. The owners of the big grass farms are equipped only for cattle raising and they naturally object to being compelled to buy tools and machinery for one year only. Even the little men have not the equipment to deal with the situation properly.

It is true that Ireland is now being flooded with advertisements of American motor plows and other implements, but unless some scheme of organising their purchase and use on a co-operative basis is worked out they will do little good, for the great bulk of Irish tillage farms are too small for profitable machine cultivation.

$5 "BUNGALOW" ON WINDSOR CITY LOT

Unfortunate Selection of Site Gives Nutt Some Trouble.

WINDSOR, March 2.—Daniel Nutt, 58 years old, is a fresh air fiend. He decided that his living quarters at 117 Mercer street were too cramped for further occupation, with spring weather coming on. Investing, therefore, in $5 worth of lumber, Daniel proceeded to erect a modest bungalow on a large vacant lot of McDougall street. This site happened to be Windsor city property, so Nutt has been summoned to explain to Chief of Police Wills.

The Weather is a Reminder of Spring

The prevailing fine weather is a manifest indication of the fact that spring is nearly due. The twenty-first day of the month is officially known as the first day of spring regardless of weather conditions. The opening of the season marks the advent of the latest millinery creation and the arrival of the spring robin. Then follows the budding of the leaf, spring fever and housecleaning, but why worry; we are here before it.

Otonabee Power Customers Transferred To City Lines

Utilities Commission Wrote Out Cheque For $7812 and Purchase Was Made Yesterday—500 Customers Reminded of Meter Advantages.

The Utilities Commission yesterday paid over $7,812 to the Ontario Government for the Ontario Power Company's distributing plant, and the customers of the old company were forwarded the following letter announcing the transfer of the business:

March 1st, 1917.

To the Consumers of the Otonabee Power Co.,

The Peterborough Utilities Commission have taken over the Otonabee Power Co's system, the transfer dating from March 1st, after which date all accounts for light and power will be payable to the Utilities Commission at their office, 135 Simcoe street. As Hydro rates will be applied to this business, consumers are requested to call at the Commissioner's office not later than April 1st and sign a contract which will insure continuous service.

Yours very truly,
Peterborough Utilities Commission,
Per H. O. Fisk,
Manager.

Benefit of Customers.

The Commission is prepared to instal meters at once in the homes of the Otonabee Power users who had a flat rate. Mr. Fiske remarked this morning that practically 600 customers were affected by the transfer and their addition brings the total number of customers in the lighting department of the Utilities Commission up to 3,000.

Mr. Fiske pointed out that the experience had shown that the meter system works to the advantage of the customer. The Utilities Commission is the public's servant, and any suggestions offered by the management are for the benefit of the citizens. The old flat rate contracts that have been continued by former customers of the Peterborough Light and Power Company are not unwelcome to the Commission for the reason that they yield a greater revenue than would the meters.

There are some flat houses paying practically twice as much for their light as their neighbours who are on meter, and Mr. Fiske added that the latter houses are well lighted.

Hence the customers of the Otonabee Power Company are asked to think well of the fact that the Utilities Commission is serving them, that the lighting department is not run for profit, but for the advantage of the citizens who should not blindly follow a flat rate system to which thy have become accustomed, when the meters will save money for them.

Explanations of the system will be freely given at the office of the Utilities Commission.

MITCHELL'S GROCERY

Waitress Shows Kind Heart And It Brings Her $5,000

Doly Wilson, waitress and factory worker, couldn't see an old man lie sick in his room day after day without proper care, so she took up the burden herself, and gave time she needed for rest and recreation to George Strebel, invalid and recluse in the Pacific Hotel, Minneapolis.

That is why, she explained the other day, he left her his estate of more than $5,000.

When she gets the money she will be able to go back to her father on his farm at Bland, Mo., which she has wanted to do since the first day she began work.

"I just tried to cheer up Mr. Strebel because in his lonely room he needed cheer more than anything else," the young woman continued. "Nobody thought he had any money. I just kept his room straight and tried to make him comfortable. I thought his will, written on a piece of wrapping paper and pinned to the wall, was a joke, just a whim of a queer old man."

Strebel died in a hospital in October but before he left the hotel he called in witnesses and had them listen as he spelled out the will. He didn't even know the last name of the girl who had cheered him.

The will, which will be passed on in the probable court simply left the money he had in Minneapolis banks to "Dolly the girl who has been kind to me." Attorneys believe the will is sound because it was witnessed by other lodgers and represented the man's wishes.

Until a few days ago the will was knocked about the hotel.

ARMED STEAMER SANK A U BOAT

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW ORLEANS, March 2.—The officers of the steamship "Knight Companion," British, arriving here to-day, said the ship was in a battle with a German submarine and sank the war craft. According to the officers, the submersible opened fire at 500 yards. Five shots were fired at the Knight Companion, but none took effect. The Knight Companion's gunner fired two shots, the last sending the "U Boat" to the bottom.

Concert at The Collegiate

The clever little playlet "An Obstinate Family," which will be presented by a number of the students of the Collegiate Institute this evening at the memorial concert in aid of the fund for placing photographs of the students of the Collegiate who have fallen, should prove a great attraction. There will also be several excellent musical numbers by local talent, and the public may enjoy a splendid concert and help place a lasting tribute to the boys by attending.

MAIL CARRIERS CANNOT CARRY INTOXICATING LIQUOR

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, March 2.—A license inspector having asked the Ontario License Board if a stage carrying mail may also carry liquor, the Board wrote to Ottawa and have received a reply from the Superintendent of the Postoffice Department that all stage contracts contain a clause forbidding conveyance of the intoxicating liquors with the mails.

Two More Recruits For the 247th Batt.

J. Ireland of Lakehurst and Leslie Hall of Buckhorn were to-day taken on the strength of the 247th Battalion.

TO RUDYARD KIPLING—TO-DAY.

In the 'Nineties you awoke us with your ringing, swinging song,
When you set our youth a-dreaming golden dreams of gallant deeds—
When you won your heady laurels and you swept the World along
With your realistic stories and your sturdy modern creeds.
We read you and we worshipped you with laughter and with joy—
Your Soldiers Three, your Maltese
Cat, your dreaming Brushwood
Boy!

You sang of British Tommy—made us laugh and made us cry—
You sang a song of Derelicts, you sang of Seven Seas:
You sang delicious nonsense, little songs that you or I Could murmur in the gloaming to the kiddy on our knees;
You thrilled us by your daring, by your vision, by your youth,
And now and then you struck the chord of God's eternal Truth!

Right down the years you rode your steed—and Pegasus was he!
Right well you rode and far you rode . . . but Youth may never stay . . .
And so you faced disaster and you faced it gallantly,
For out of it your genius wrought
the loveliness of "They,"
And every father who has wrought and every lover too
Doth owe a debt, perchance unpaid .
I pay mine now to you!

In later years the sad old World has come at last to This . . .
To War and Death . . . the sacrifice of "all we have and are. . . ."
In other days you struck your note of jarring emphasis,
The grim, relentless Truth you told . . . it echoed wide and far;
But if to-day you sing no song, yours
still "the true romance,"
Yours still the greatest gift there be . .
to England, Belgium, France,

You've staked your all, whate'er befall, the great war lost or won.
For once you gave your land a song . .
but now you give your son. . .
—Elizabeth Newport Hepburn.

Where There's a Will—

Helen's mother passed her the cake, and when the little one went to reach across the plate for the largest piece her mamma said, "Always take the piece nearest to you, dear."

"Well, then, turn the plate around," was the answer.

New Overseas Minister Faces Very Large Task, But Work Is Progressing

THE Canadian Associated Press is informed that no decision has been reached anent the sending of another Canadian division to the front, but its organization is being completed. What will ultimately be done in this connection will depend largely upon the response obtained for recruits in Canada. For the present, however, the Canadian divisions on the firing line will be maintained and their establishments kept up to full strength.

An adjustment of the representation of battalions in France from the various provinces in Canada is to be undertaken for the purpose of making the distribution more equal in proportion to the number of men recruited. To accomplish this two or more units from the same province, district, or city will be amalgamated or combined. Experience has shown that a more satisfactory service may be maintained by the system of reinforcing depleted battalions with men recruited from the same territory or province as that in which the battalion originated. With that in view the present redistribution is to be made. Moreover, it is felt that the men may feel more at home if they are sent with units recruited in the province from which they come themselves.

At the present time Quebec and British Columbia have larger representation of battalions in France in proportion to the number of men recruited from them than the other provinces, and in the past it has been necessary to draw reinforcements for these battalions from other centres, and an effort is now being made to equalize representation and replace those thus absorbed. Complete units from Ontario and from Nova Scotia are likely to be sent to France. One of the battalions from Ontario will probably be commanded by Lieut.-Col. Sam Sharpe. It is quite possible the senior battalion of Nova Scotia Highlanders, under command of Lieut.-Col. Borden, will be sent forward to give Nova Scotia additional and merited representation on the firing line.

It has been observed from recent Canadian papers that Shillington's name is associated with certain irregularities at the Canadian Hospital at Taplow. Sir George Perley, Overseas Minister of Militia, officially informs the Canadian Press that Colonel Shillington had no connection with this hospital, and was in no way responsible for its administration. The Canadian Press is also informed on authority of various cables from London professing to give the findings of the Baptie enquiry into Canadian hospital administration are purely conjectural.

"Two Cities" in French.

Many years ago a French publisher was consumed with a desire to give Paris the opportunity of reading "A Tale of Two Cities" in French, says the Christian Science Monitor. He consequently caused a French translation to be made. Years later an enterprising English translator, who it is to be hoped knew more about the French language than he did about Dickens, was seized with the desire to translate so splendid a story into English. Not only did he do this, but he actually offered it for publication. It is to be suspected that the ancient proverb about the parent not knowing its own child, would have received a remarkable illustration if the great novelist had come across the final English version.

Crossing the Struma.

The British troops have crossed the Struma (ancient Strymon) at the very spot where the great host of Xerxes crossed in the reverse direction when invading Greece 2,400 years ago. Herodotus tells of the elaborate construction of bridges for the invasion, and how the magician priests sacrificed white horses and threw them into the stream. Xerxes was not content with that. Upon arriving, he found that the place where Amphipolis was afterward founded, and which to-day is represented by our crossing point, Neo Hori, was then called Ennea Hodoi (Nine Roads), and the accordingly sacrificed nine native youths and nine maidens there.—London Chronicle.

400 Eligible Men In Peterborough Did Not Sign Service Cards

Prominently displayed in another column is a statement made by Col. Ackerman to-day to the effect that he does not purpose to solicit the 13 men referred to by Major Campbell on Tuesday night. He gave as his reason that there were some four hundred eligible men in the city who had refused to sign or had otherwise avoided the National Service Cards. While these men have done nothing to offer themselves for enlistment it would be unfair to those who registered for National Service to embarass them while the slackers were overlooked. It was believed when the cards were collected here that practically all the local men had responded to the Government's appeal, but four hundred eligibles, who turned a deaf ear shatters that pleasant belief. These are the men who will receive the immediate attention of the 247th recruiters. Apparently Col. Ackerman has made his attitude as clear to Major Campbell as this announcement will strike the citizens, especially those who require no dragooning to respond to the call of duty.

Dispute Action of Order of Canadian Home Circles

OLD MEMBERS CLAIM ORDER OF HOME CIRCLES NOT ACTING PROPERLY

TORONTO, March 2.—Whether the Order of Canadian Home Circles has the power to use the interest on $900,000 which was set apart by the Select Committee of the Ontario Legislature in March, 1915, for distribution among about ten thousand members of the Order is the question which Mr. Justice Latchford, in the Non-Jury Assize Court, was asked to decide when Margaret Rushbrook on behalf of herself and others, asked that the court order an accounting, showing interest, which the recipients are entitled to be paid.

Mr. J. E. Agnew is counsel for the plaintiff members, and Mr. Norman Sommerville is acting for the order. When the court adjourned for lunch His Lordship had pinned the defence down to prove that by using the interest for other purposes of the order they were acting in a manner consonant with their undertaking to the Government.

In 1892 the order created a life expectancy fund, with ten per cent. assessment on each member, and in 1905 the fund had reached $200,000. Then it was decided to stop. The plaintiffs state that instead of paying out cash to those entitled to share in the allocation of the fund, the order issued paid-up certificates, and on collection discount of five per cent. is made. This and the using of the interest for other purposes they contend is contrary to the undertaking given to the Legislature.

The defence is that since 1905 the claims for these life expectancy benefits have amounted to $300,000 and instead of paying these out of the reserve fund accumulated for the purpose they have been mad out of assesment levied on members of the order since 1905.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Hamilton Hopes To Overcome 247th Battalion's Lead of Six

The Hamilton Herald says:

Can Hamilton Hockey club overcome that six-goal lead secured by the 247th battalion in Peterborough?

That's the burning question. Even some of the most rabid supporters of the red and white are doubtful, but the players give several reasons why they expect to overhaul the invaders and go into the final round with Kitchener. They point to the fact that they shot at least 25 times on goalkeeper Legros in the opening period, and that their shots came twice as often as those of the soldiers in every session. Had Legros not been in his best form of the season a goodly number of them would have found their way in the net, and instead of defeat victory would have crowned the efforts of the locals. They hope to give Mr. Legros another busy time of it to-morrow night, and are hoping that he will not be so much of a stone wall as on his own ice.

Armstrong, the Peterborough centre ice player, will be missing, and this will weaken the soldiers a lot. The H.H.C. officials regret this very much. They are quite confident of winning, and they would much rather win when the opposition is at top strength. As announced yesterday, Armstrong has been sent to a hospital to have his injured arm operated on. He played during the entire game in Peterborough in great agony, and was unable to shine as usual.

Otherwise the Petes will line up the same as in the game on Tuesday night. They have become quite chesty since they handed the H.H.C. a 9-3 drubbing on Peterborough ice, and firmly believed that they can win here as well.

It is extremely doubtful if Grant McEwen will be in the game. His injured head is bothering him considerably, and he stated to Manager Frank Wright last night that he did not feel well enough to take the chance. Alex Murray is ready to fill in the breach if needed.

Dr. Jerry Laflamme, coach and defence player of the Dentals, will handle the game. H.H.C. absolutely refused to stand for Oscar Bernhardt again, and Secretary Hewitt stated this morning that he had decided on Laflamme. Jerry is quite satisfactory to the locals.

Grocers Win From Printers

Last night at the Water street alleys the Grocers and Printers hooked up in a post-season game, and to show that they could beat the champions, the Grocers took two out of three games, but the Printers were ahead in total pins by 51.

The alleys were crowded with spectators, who witnessed some good bowling. In the second game the Grocers spilled the pins for an 876 count. Difficult spares were pulled off by Outram, Routley and Ross, of the Grocers, and by Moore and Henderson of the Printers. Myland was high count for the night with a total of 545, having single score of 217 in the last game. Routley had high total for the Grocers with 496, while Outram had high single with 203.

The game was well contested and the best of feeling prevailed on both sides. The Printers had a new captain in the last game, in the person of Chas E. Kinakey, of Buffalo, and it was mainly due to his coaching that the Printers succeeded in annexing the last game and total pinnage. Another game may be played in the near future.

Mr. Solomon has arranged for the scores of the Hamilton-247th game to be given out to-night every few minutes, as the game progresses, so the hockey fans may follow the game at the Water street alleys.

The Scores.

Last night's scores were as follows:

HYDRO ELECTRIC FOR NORWOOD

NORWOOD, March 2.— One of the Hydro-Electric Commission's engineers was in Norwood a few days ago, and in an interview with Reeve Squire stated that a power line from Healy Falls to Peterborough was to be constructed in the near future as soon as conditions would permit, and that if Norwood and other local municipalities were desirous of using "hydro" their requirements would be met. From what can be learned it seems quite probable that the line will be constructed within the next eighteen months. The question of adoption of "hydro" will, of course, have to come before the electors as it will involve the taking over of the local electric light plant by the municipality.

PANAMA CANAL IS IN DANGER

Gatun Dam Could Be Destroyed By Modern Warship Without Having Even Paint Scatched.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Rex Beach, the author, who has spent weeks in a study of conditions at the Panama Canal, states in an article in the New York Tribune that the canal could be easily destroyed by an enemy, and that a hostile warship, without scratching her paint or risking the life of a single man, could destroy the locks and dam of the canal and increase the steaming distance from New York to San Francisco nearly 9,500 miles. Misdirected energy, shortsightedness and great waste characterized the building of the canal, says Rex Beach, resulting in inefficient protective measures, defective inadequacy and absolute unpreparedness for war conditions.

Gatun Dam a Target.

Gatun Dam, a tremendous structure, 1½ miles cutting tens of millions of dollars and the toil of tens of thousands of men for a period of ten years, could be destroyed by a modern warship lying west of the mouth of the Chagres and beyond the reach of the guns at Toro Point. Rex Beach also points out that an enemy fleet in the Pacific could inflict disaster on the Pacific terminus of the canal and the United States fleet coming through it in a single line; that the vital organs of the canal are protected by defences that would permit an enemy to come within rifle shot of the which would mean the certain ka and destruction of the canal; that the canal zone garrison is inadequate, that it is without the proper artillery, and that it has no roads at its command for quick mobilization in time of danger; that there are neither anti-aircraft guns nor airplanes to protect the canal from attack from the air; that the unknown, uncharted and unguarded country surrounding the canal is a constant menace to its safety; that it would be impossible to reinforce the canal's defenders if and after war comes.

Germans Prepared.

Germany has been quite busy in the West Indies, and large docks, coal yards and supply headquarters are maintained at St. Thomas by the Hamburg American Company. German agents negotiated a loan for Hayti of $2,000,000 in return for the control of several custom houses and a commercial coaling station at Mole-Saint-Nicholas. A splendid naval base directly on the Windward Passage, the high road to Panama, and there have been many evidences of German interests in this locality.

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Re the Grenfell Mission, your issue last night querys the "falling down" of the churches in that connection, that is to say the people. No sir! No. Perish the thought. Look at the overflowing ranks of the 247th Battalion. Look at the magnificent attendance of gallant lads to hear the singer last Monday. Look at the thousand courageous males shouting themselves hoarse at the puck-chasing last Tuesday. Then to print about us falling down. The heroic work of Grenfell, the backing up of our heroes in France, what is that to us? Some one else must "see to it." Nero fiddled while Rome burned. Why should we stop fiddling because a struggle for liberty is on in Europe? No doubt the men at the front should be backed up, and the fathers of them should now come forward and get into khaki, age not to count. Now is the time, it may soon be too late. Many of us over fifty and willing are worth a lot of conscripts.

Yours,
A Soldier's Father.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—As farmers are about making arrangements for their seed for the coming spring I would suggest that they accept no seed sent from any dealer that is not put in bags with the grade and government standard branded on it. They may have to pay for the bag, but the bag is worth the money. Now, I am not in any way interested in this line of seed, but in the past week I have found good reasons for making this suggestion. I have found seed orders taken and delivered at the house for less money than the lowest grades are quoted, F.O.B., Toronto, by the most reliable seedsman. The seed was recommended as No. 1. It may be Government standard, but I am suspicious of it being Government standard No. 1. For the benefit of the farmer I would say the gradings of one of the reliable firms doing business in Canada are:

XXX high grade, government standard; No. 1. Ordinary Government Standard; No. 2 High Grade, Government Standard; No. 2, Ordinary Government Standard; No. 3, Ordinary Government Standard.

Another firm's gradings are: Lion Brand, high grade, etc.

And other firms have corresponding grades. The Government just protects the farmer to the extent of the grade that is stamped on the bag that the seed is delivered in. The XXX and Lion Brand and corresponding brands of other firms are the best and are the cheapest at any time. When the germination and purity test is considered I find, in many cases, there is nothing higher than No. 2 offered, I feel satisfied that the man who offers nothing but the high-grade and discards everything else will soon get the business or at least the best of it, and that is the business to cater to. My experience is that the progressive farmer wants quality and is quite willing to pay for it. When it comes to the matter of seed I would suggest that Mr. H. B. Cowan and Mr. Drury, who seem very much interested in the farmers, would spend some time among the farmers at their Club meetings, in educating the farmers to Government grading and selection of seed. Many a farmer thinks that when seed is Government standard that covers everyhing. A Farmers' Club is an important factor in any community, providing it stands for quality and is educational. Alas, too often low grade stuff finds its way through this medium, and the Club becomes a public detriment.

Thanking you for the space and wishing to be somewhat of a benefactor, I remain,

Yours truly,
W. H. MERRILL.

Toronto Airman Served in Many Parts of Europe

ST. JOHN, N.B., February 28.—Preparation such as never before was made in the history of any empire, is now in progress in England for a grand offensive during the spring of 1917. Such was the statement of Lieut. Sifton, nephew of Sir Clifford Sifton, who arrived in the city to-day from the Old Country, with a military party.

The English people themselves hardly realize the immensity of the preparations they are making, and when the storm breaks on the Western front it will be a hurricane compared with any previous efforts made," he said.

He flew all over Europe in order to secure seven days leave in Toronto, did Sub-Flight Lieut. Mills of Toronto, who has had perhaps the most remarkable career of any Canadian aviator who has entered the service since the war began. Flight Lieut. Mills had never been in an aeroplane until the war began, and soon after offered his services to the Royal Naval Air Squadron. He was picked with nine others to go to Rumania to assist in the campaign there. All over the Roumanian front he flew and when the Roumanians were defeated he was ordered to report to Petrograd. Again he was sent on a mission, this time to the Struma front where the assisted the Russians in their efforts to buck the German lines. Another time he was detailed to go to Greece and there gave his services to the Allies.

While on the eastern front, Lieut. Mills had a good opportunity to follow closely the activities of the Russian troops. The poor equipment of the Russians has been the cause of a great many of their defeats at the hands of the Austro-German forces, he says.

While in Odessa Lieut. Mills had the privilege of dining with Grand Duke Cyril, whom he describes as a silent, studious man, a brilliant soldier and a leader beloved by his people.

Lieut. Mills has seen action on nearly every front in Europe except the western, and when he goes back he will be sent to France to get a taste of the fighting there. He has seven days' leave in his home city.

Some men want to make hay in February and cut ice in August.

BOY OF TEN KILLS SELF.

Ronald, the 10-yer-old son of J. W. Chittick, Calgary, shot himself through the heart with his father's revolver. The boys in the neighbourhood had been playing soldier and a brother had enlisted in the navy. The boy left a will reading as follows: "I leave my sword to Harvey (a brother) and my money to my mother, 'which' she had, and dad had some, too. Good by." Underneath a skull and crossbones was drawn. An inquest is unlikely.

HELPED DRAW UP ACT.

In the public accounts of Ontario just issued under the heading, "Enforcing the Liquor License Act," is an item for $500 for James Haverson, for legal services. When asked what this $500 is for Mr. Haverson made it clear that it was for advice given by him, as when the Ontario Temperance Act was being drawn up he was called in by the government as it was thought that his previous experience with liquor legislation would be of value. For many years Mr. Haverson has been the solicitor for the Ontario Licensed Victuallers' Association and the fact that his name appeared for the enforcing of the act drew forth many comments.

Peterboro' On A Proposed Loop Road From Belleville

Peterborough was largely represented yesterday in the big deputation that pressed upon the Legislature the needs of good roads in Eastern Ontario. Mayor Duffus and Alderman McIntyre were there from the Council, but were joined by other citizens who were in Toronto on other business. Among the speakers were the Mayors of Cornwall, Kingston, Whitby and Prescott, who were directly interested in a trunk road from Toronto through Kingston, known as the Kingston Road, which they asked the Government to assume. Mayor Duffus made a strong speech in support of the movement, stating that though Peterborough was not on the Lake Shore Road this city would welcome the Government's initiative in this project.

The Mayor afterwards lead a deputation which interviewed Deputy Minister McLean of the Department of Public Works and Highways, who stated that if the Counties of Peterborough, Northumberland and Durham would immediately adopt the County Roads system the Government would pay 20 per cent. of the expense of temporary repairs and 40 per cent. of permanent work on a road from Belleville through Sterling, Campbellford, Hastings, Norwood, Peterborough and Port Hope.

A few drops of oil of lavender poured into a glass of very hot water will purify the air of a room almost instantly from cooking odors, and is especially refreshing in a sick-room.

EARLE—WOOD.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Wood of Cavan, when their eldest daughter Alma Emmaretta, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Richard Earle of Cavan, the Rev. Mr. Clarke of Cavanville officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of cream crepe de chene trimmed with lace and pearls and carrying a bouquet of white carnations and maiden fern, and was attended by her youngest sister, Rosella, also carrying a bouquet of flowers. Mr. Russel Earle, brother of the groom, was best man. Miss Quenie Matchett of Otonabee played the wedding march. Miss Mary Southam rendered a very pleasing solo. After dinner Mr. and Mrs. Earle left for Toronto, St. Catharines and other points. The bride wore a brown suit of Gabardine and a pretty white hat. A number of guests were present, some from Peterborough, Toronto, New Brunswick, Lindsay, and other points.

The presents were numerous and included a very pretty mantel clock from the Sunday School which the bride attended, showing the high esteem in which the bride was held. Mr. and Mrs. Earle will reside in Cavan.

Lord Kitchener Was The Man Who Saved France

Touching Tribute to Great Soldier by French High Officer —The French Army Was in Serious Danger of Running Short of Supplies—How the Situation Was Solved.

RENDERED INVALUABLE SERVICE

A fragment of the secret history of the war, disclosing the part played by Lord Kitchener at a moment of crisis for France, is one of the tributes offer in the "Lord Kitchener Memorial Book," the new memorial volume, edited by Sir Hedley le Bas.

The Marquis de Chasseloup Laubat, who had charge of missions to England on technical matters, tells the story as follows:

One morning in the winter of 1914-15 I was suddenly called to Lord Kitchener's room in the War Office, where I learnt alarming facts which can now be disclosed, as there is no longer the slightest chance of their recurrence.

Through the failure of certain things upon which the French authorities had during some time built great hopes, the French army was seriously in danger of running short of certain materials and finished products which were absolutely necessary to beat back any new German onslaught; and our Commander-in-Chief himself had sent to the Secretary of State for War a distinguished British colonel (now a general) in order to explain his pressing need and his earnest quest that England should help us out of our most dangerous difficulties.

A MEMORABLE SCENE.

Kitchener practically put everything aside, and I passed nearly the whole day with him and with the British officials, whose duty it was to provide the War Office with the things that we were asking for. At the end of the afternoon of the very same day he was able to make up his mind as to what he could and could not do. Then took place a scene which I shall never forget.

The day is falling and the large room is in semi-darkness. The Secretary of State for War dismisses everybody except the British colonel of whom I have already spoken and myself. Then he orders me to sit down at the right-hand corner of his desk and carefully note what he has decided to do for the French; I obey.

Kitchener then slowly dictates the (alas too short!) list of the things he can give Joffre. Another pause and another deep silence.

Kitchener again tells me to write: I note the extraordinary and unprecedented facilities and powers with which he entrusts me in order to render every possible help to the army of my people defending their native soil. Kitchener takes off his spectacles. A third pause and deep silence.

A TOUCHING SCENE.

The Secretary of State for War leans back in his chair and remains motionless, as if buried in his thoughts. Then suddenly, in a deep and half-strangled voice, as if he were suffering agonies of pain, he slowly addresses the British officer with these following words and short sentences, which still ring in my ears, and between which were great silence, as if he were gasping for breath: "Tell Joffre . . . tell my friend Joffre . . . that I am very sorry . . . so very sorry that I can do no more."

As I have finished writing down what he dictated I turn round and gaze at him, and, to my intense astonishment, I see that Field-Marshal Earl Kitchener actually has tears in his eyes because he is "so very sorry that he can do no more."

The Marquis de Chasseloup Loubat tells, also how Lord Kitchener helped him when he decided to arrange for enough supplies of materials for high explosives to last for the duration of the war. He would have failed but for the French Ambassador and Lord Kitchener. He says:

Lord Kitchener studied a most intricate and delicate question with which he had never dealt before, he mastered it, saw what was to be done, and, in spite of many difficulties and much opposition, took, and alone took, the full responsibility of doing in solving these problems concerning therein took responsibilities which he alone dared to take, and signed documents which he alone dared to sign.

The invaluable services which he thus rendered our coalition would alone be sufficient to save the name of any man from oblivion.

FREDERICK VIII CAME BACK INTO HALIFAX

VITAL PART OF WIRELESS SYSTEM LEFT THERE.

HALIFAX, N.S., March 3. — The Danish steamer Frederik VIII., with Count Bernstorff and party on board, after having sailed for Copenhagen, put back to this port on account of a vital part of her wireless equipment having been left in the hands of the British admiralty during her stay here. The part was not missed until the ship was well off the coast. An examination ship wirelessed the predicament of the Frederik VIII. to the Admiralty and the part was rushed to the outer harbor by a naval launch.

An official statement was given out and was posted on the ship "for information." It briefly stated the fact of her arrival, of her being placed under an armed guard and of the examination of the effects of the 900 persons on board. The results of the search are not mentioned.

German "Home Army" Being Mobilized

COPENHAGEN, March 3. — According to the German papers, the compulsory mobilization of Germany's "home army" is imminent. The appeal for volunteers, though answered by large numbers, has not yet produced enough workers to satisfy the actual requirements. Large numbers of men are needed at once to replace those being employed behind the front, to work in the munition factories which are now being completed, and for the all important farm work.

The papers say that the government is prepared for the compulsory enrollment in the early days of March of all persons between 17 and 60, so that the recruits can be put to work from April 1.

DOCTORS ADVISE IRON FOR THE BLOOD

Anaemia, pale faces, nervousness, stomach troubles, watery blood, etc., are sure signs of thin blood. Dr. Mainprise says he can take any of these cases and cure any one of them in ten days by giving Iron for the blood, and Phosphorus for the nerves, "called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron." I have found that 99 per cent. of all stomach, liver, kidney, bowel, nerve, etc., troubles are traced right back to the blood. Just as soon as Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is given it is almost immediately absorbed by the system the blood taking the iron while the nerves are soothed by the phosphorus, making you eat better, feel better, look better, digest better, and finally you will be made 100 per cent. stronger. Do not be taking all sorts of patent medicines and laxatives which only ruin your system; go to the root of the trouble and start taking Iron and strengthen your blood, restore your nerves, and your digestion and will recharge your whole system with new life. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. C. Weber dispenses it for Peterboro

DYING MAN'S PLAN TO AID THE BELGIANS

BROCKVILLE, March 3. — Edward N. Mortimer, a G.T.R. engineer who died here this week, created a precedent for his funeral that caused much favourable comment. A few days before his death Mr. Mortimer informed the members of his family that he would like people inclined to spend money on flowers not to do so but to lay the money on his coffin, and when the body was removed from the house the money should be given to the Belgian Relief Fund. When friends arrived for the service they found the casket covered with bills and were unable to fathom the mystery until they were told of the dying man's wish.

United Farmers Forecast A New Civilization

"Co-Operation" to Be Open-Sesame to H. W. Wood's Trade and Commerce Idea—Present System Causes Conflict

"SPLENDID BARBARISM"

TORONTO, March 3.—The dream of a new civilization built up through a great system of co-operation in trade and commerce was yesterday afternoon laid before the convention of the United Farmers of Ontario by H. W. Wood, president of the United Farmers of Alberta.

"SPLENDID BARBARISM."

"To-day we have reached the highest degree of splendid barbarism that the world has ever known," he exclaimed, "and if we can change this system of trade and commerce to serve humanity we shall have changed barbarism to civilization. The European conflict is the result of the present system of trade and commerce controlling civilization to-day. If we cannot change it it will go from bad to worse, nation competing against nation, until we find it breaking out every now and again into revolution as it has done to-day in Germany."

He began by declaring that trade and commerce was the great, dominant ruling influence in civilization. He traced its development from the first trader back in the twilight of history, until the present.

"Trade and commerce," he continued, "controls absolutely our system of Government. The men who control our trade and commerce control our laws and those of every other country.

"Competition has been the law of trade. Competitive advancement has been along the lines of individualism. At the beginning of the last century we saw something enter into the affairs of man which has made radical changes in those affairs. In the last century there was more advancement in our system of trade and commerce than in the preceding 5,000 years.

"Then began a system of co-operative, of class co-operation, first, of classes which had the most money the fewest men. It went down through all the classes until at last it reached the great basic class of mankind, the farmers, who only 40 years ago began to co-operate as a class. The elements of a giant are in us, but we're only in our infancy.

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO?

"What are we going to do with our organized strength? I believe that we are now making a great evolutionary advancement in the affairs of men. We'll have to be unselfish with the other classes, because it is to our interest to be so. Individualism has passed away. Socialism must come. Competition has not passed away. The whole commercial family of classes have combined to shift their burdens down, down, down. And we, the last of the classes, have fallen heir to all the combined burdens of all the classes.

"When we are organized we will stop this shifting of burdens to our shoulders. We will demand a square deal, but we cannot shift our burdens to others, for we are the lowest class, the class nearest the soil.

"Are we going to destroy the railways, the manufacturers, the great wholesale departments? We cannot get along without them. We cannot destroy any class necessary to carrying on trade and commerce, but we can reorganize so that every man in the system will be getting out of it just what he deserves—and no more.

"Looking towards the future, we can't escape the fact that the next development is going to be a higher one than class co-operation for interclass competition. It will be class mobilization for the purpose of serving the great system of trade and commerce and the people of the world.

EACH COUNTRY TO BE STRONG.

"We've got to co-operate with the nations of the earth so that each country will be throwing up the products of the soil. Our great transporting system will have to bring these things to every man of every country, so that he will get them every time. Anyone that hinders this transportation is an enemy to mankind, and that is what a protective tariff does. This is one of the things that will have to be solved by the great co-operative system. We've got to look out in the future, class working with class, nation with nation, so that finally all the peoples of the world will be carrying out the Golden Rule. That will be built on co-operation, not on a system of competition.

"Considerable pressure has been brought on our organization to launch out on a third party," said C. Rice-Jones, of the Alberta Farmers' Co-operative Company. "We have only one opinion of this in Alberta, and that is if we do this we will fall to pieces. Such would only end in disaster. At present the politicians do not know which party we belong to and we want them to remain in that state of ignorance.

"If we are not going to form a third party, how are we going to get what we desire?" he asked. He alleged that the present members of Parliament were tied hand and foot to their party. The only information the people had was from the reports of the party press.

"It is up to us," he continued, "to support the papers that are as little tied up to politics as possible, the papers which represent the people. Let us support the man who will do the right thing, no matter what party he belongs to.

"Politicians are wondering what combined strength Western organizations are going to have at the next election. It's up to us to show them that we are organized to obtain legislation on behalf of the people of this country, not to benefit a few."

Recruits Wanted for Production

Just as surely as lack of food is strangling Germany day by day, so plenty of food is winning the victory for the allies. The French armies, for instance, were never better fed than now, for France cannot forget the awful lesson of 1870—the failure of her food supply. To this she attributed the loss of that war.

To feed the French soldiers around Verdun, more than 25,500,000 pounds of food a week were required. This gives a faint idea of the colossal task of feeding an army. Canada and Britain have a huge army of fighting heroes on the line; every man MUST have plenty of food, in spite of a world shortage. Upon Canada's food production all principally rely.

The Farmers of Ontario Urgently Need Help

The Department of Agriculture appeals to men and boys to enlist in the farm help campaign. The Department appeals to men unfit for military service, or who find it impossible to enlist in the army. Do your "bit" by helping to increase production of foodstuffs. This is your hour of opportunity.

The farmers of Ontario need the help of retired farmers, of men following no occupation (retired), of business men who can spare a portion of their time. We appeal to all who can so arrange their ordinary affairs to plan to help some farmer friend, particularly in seed time and harvest.

OUR SERIAL STORY

THE RED PAPER

By C. HOTCHKISS

Wentworth instantly saw the belligerent attitude of the man and that there was no chance for him here. He had been about to unbosom himself but the captain's tone and bearing sealed his lips so far as his errand was concerned, for the time. It was not his move.

"I did not sneak aboard this vessel, sir. I came openly."

"You came openly, hey? Did you engage your passage and register as others do?"

"I did not!"

"You did not! And why not, sir?"

"I refuse to be catechised," returned Wentworth. "I went to the purser and paid my way—paid it in full. There is no law—"

"Don't talk to me of law, young fellow," interrupted the other, hotly. "I know your kind! You came on board for the purpose of importuning and pestering a lady—a friend of mine, and under my protection while aboard my vessel. You have followed her for weeks, sir! I know you! She wishes to be rid of you and of your sort."

Wentworth was taken aback at this explosion. In the turn of affairs he saw the name of Bagshot written large but he did not then lose his temper.

"You have been misinformed, Captain Shearpole," he returned. "I followed a criminal on board of this vessel. I was awaiting a warrant, and was carried off by accident."

"You lie, sir! It was no accident. You were warned ashore—my officer told me so. Do you think I don't know what has been going on aboard my own ship?"

"Call it intention, then, sir, but certainly not premeditated. I stated I was following a criminal, and felt I was about to lose him."

"Ay? A criminal? And who?" The white eyebrows were raised as if in wonder.

"Simeon Bagshot, Captain Shearpole. He's a thief and worse."

"I dare say—from your point of view. I am not surprised at you! Are you an officer of the law?"

"No, sir, but—"

"Damn your buts! You are a fraud—a liar, sir!" shouted the choleric old fellow, bringing his fist down on the desk with a bang. "Your story is poppycock! I know your history, and the base of your insulting charge. I know all about it. Bagshot a criminal—a thief! I have known him for thirty years!"

Wentworth was outraged, and his blood leaped to the boiling point in an instant.

"Then I have learned him better in thirty hours!" he retorted with heat. "You have twice called me a liar without provocation—you shall answer for that. You also say that Miss Merridale complains of my importunity—that I have followed her for weeks—I have known her for less than nine days. I say you speak a falsehood. Does this look like the result of importunity? Read this and be fair."

He pulled out the note that he had just received and held it toward the captain.

"Curse you and your letters!" returned the old man, purple with rage as with one hand he hammered on the gong on his desk and with the other waved off the proffered paper. He had been defied on board of his own ship; he had been told that he lied; having called another a liar did not excuse this lese majesty. He would show this upstart landsman what it meant to combat a sea captain on his own vessel.

Before Wentworth could say more, the call of the bell was answered by a man in the dress of a sailor though that he was a petty official or subofficer of some kind, was indicated by the design on his sleeve. Shearpole pointed at Wentworth, and his washed out blue eyes were blazing as he shouted: "Take that fellow out of here. Take him to his stateroom and see that he does not leave it without a guard." Then, turning to his victim, he said: "You will not put foot on shore, sir, until we get back to New York. I'll show you, sir! I'll teach you to talk back to me. You need a trimming, and you'll get it."

Wentworth almost smiled as he saw how the man had let his anger blind him to the law; but he drew himself up and squarely faced the enraged official.

"Captain Shearpole," he said, "I demand a boat in order to leave this vessel. You give the privilege to others; it is mine as well. It is my right. You cannot hold me a prisoner; and you cannot return me to New York without it costing your company more than it would care to pay, and costing you your position. I think the latter will now occur in any event."

Shearpole bounded to his feet.

"Do ye dare face me down! Off with ye, before I order ye ironed!"

The man who had come in touched John on the shoulder.

"Better come along. It will cost ye less in the end."

Wentworth was boiling but he turned and left the cabin, afraid to remain lest he lose complete control of himself. He was more angry than he had ever been in his life, not alone because he had been thwarted, but because he hated injustice. That the captain was entrenched behind the law which made him king on his own vessel, he knew well enough, and that there was no immediate appeal from Shearpole's order made him all the more desperate.

But whatever else had been accomplished he had not been tamed. When he reached his own room, his cheeks tingling from excitement, he found the sailor close behind him. "What are you going to do?" he asked.

"Goin' to obey orders," was the uncompromising return. "Advise you not to cut up rough. Won't do the least good. Perhaps in the mornin' the old man'll feel different, but he's pretty mad now."

"Suppose I refuse to go into my room?"

"Then I'll call help to put ye there. Can't say I want to handle you alone! Better take it easy, sir. Less harm will come of it."

With a glance Wentworth sized up the man. Undoubtedly he could handle him if it came to a fight but there seemed little to be gained in that save to make another enemy. He turned and entered his room, barely crossing the threshold when the door was closed and the key turned in the lock. He looked behind the curtains. Van Buskirk was gone, as he had hoped and expected.

And he had told the purser that he was going in the boat. It looked to be a vain boast now. He sat on the edge of the bunk and tried to calm himself, though every now and then his wrath blazed up against the high-handed proceedings of Captain Shearpole. He determined that once back in New York he would bring that individual to book for the outrage that had been put upon him, even if it took every dollar that he possessed. Angry men are apt to build the castle of revenge high and without regard to cost; but Wentworth meant it though he did not dream how far Shearpole's act would sink into insignificance in the future.

But just then it was a dominating influence. To Wentworth it was now clear that his detention in the cabin was a prearranged plan to prevent his being on deck and protesting when Bagshot went ashore. Justice had not entered into the matter and the animus was plain: Bagshot was afraid of him and had enlisted the captain in his behalf, the latter trumping up a lame excuse to hold him; doubtless he would be free as soon as the boat left the ship.

But then it would be too late! Was there no way out? There must be! A fire must be met with fire when all other modes of protection are gone. Wentworth sat himself down to dispassionate thought.

And presently he hit upon an idea of escape—an escape which might allow him to carry out his original intention, though he rather quailed at the necessity it involved. It came to him like a flash; it would be his only and his last chance. If Bagshot went ashore without him he might just as well throw up his hands, and John Wentworth for all his debonair nature, was not one to admit defeat until it was unquestionable.

He looked at his watch. It was but a few minutes after nine o'clock and he had loads of time to spare for his purpose; the boat would not go until eleven. He sat about making his preparations silently, and when these were completed calmly sat down on the bunk.

At a quarter past ten he got up, relighted his lamp and began furthering his plan by knocking on the locked door. The immediate answer from the man outside showed that the guards' vigilance had not relaxed.

"What do you want, sir," was the respectful inquiry.

"I wish something to drink. It is h—— in here! Get anything you can."

"Can't think of it, sir."

"Why not? Am I ordered to be famished? I'll pay you well."

"An' you won't break out if I go for ye?"

"What would be the use?" returned Wentworth. "No; I won't break out, nor try to. I'll swear to be here when you come back. Unlock the door and I'll give you the money."

The man outside mumbled but the temptation was too great. The door was unlocked and through the little opening made a bill was passed out; then the door was locked again. Wentworth's pulse began to rise as he heard the man go down the passage; he breathed a sigh of relief; he had feared absolute refusal.

Presently the guard appeared bringing with him a bottle of champagne and a glass on a tray. He entered, locking the door after him but leaving the key in its place, then he sat the tray on the locker.

"Glad to see you be calmin' down, sir," he said. "I make no doubt that the old man will let up on you after a night's sleep."

"Like as not," returned Wentworth—his parole was over; he might have run out then, and with honour, but the hue and cry which would arise after him made such a proceeding foolhardy. "Keep the change, my lad," he said to the man who was fingering a handful of silver. "I find you a chap who obeys orders—obeys them strictly. One cannot be blamed for looking after their own interests, can they?"

"No, sir. That's what! Now I couldn't ha' blamed you if you had cut up rought."

"I'm glad to hear you say that," said the young man, taking a deep breath. "Pull that cork for me, will you? And you will join me?"

"Sure, sir!" said the man, with alacrity taking up the bottle.

"And I kept my promise to you, sir, you see! I am here!"

"Thank you sir. Yes, sir."

"Well, I am going now. Good-night."

He stepped toward the door. As he made the latter move, the guard, his hands trammeled by the bottle, sprang for him, but as this was just what the young man looked for, he was prepared. Turning in time to meet him, he landed a straight shoulder blow squarely between the man's eyes, and the fellow went down without a sound.

Then Wentworth hurried. Locking the door, he made a gag of a towel, and stuffed it into the mouth of the fallen man, binding it in place with another towel. He quickly followed this up by tying his victim's hands and feet with the sheet he had torn into strips, and being sure that the sailor was secure he walked out of the room, locking the door behind him, and putting the key in his pocket. In a moment he was on deck, concealed by a deep shadow.

Therefore, when you take Wincarnis you derive new strength—and at the same time new rich blood—and at the same time new nerve force—and at the same time new vitality. Thus the whole system is invigorated, and re-vitalised, and becomes surcharged with a feeling of new life. That is why over 10,000 Doctors recommend Wincarnis.

A very important feature about Wincarnis is that you derive a definite amount of good from even the first dose. And every additional dose gives you more strength than you had before—more rich red blood than you had before—stronger nerves than you had before—and more vitality than you had before. Thus Wincarnis is not a luxury, but a positive necessity to all who are Weak, Anæmic, Nervous, Run-down—to martyrs to Indigestion—to all enfeebled by Old Age—and to Invalids striving to regain strength after an exhausting illness. Remember that the health Wincarnis creates is lasting health—not a mere "flash-in-the-pan"—not a temporary "whipping-up" of the vitality—but real vigorous health that makes you feel it is good to be alive. Take advantage of the new and lasting health Wincarnis offers you. Don't suffer needlessly. Remember that Wincarnis has an unrivalled reputation of 30 years' standing. Don't accept substitutes.

BANNED IN PARIS, EVENING GOWNS FLOURISH IN NEW YORK

The Graceful Turkish Effect is Highly Fashionable—Lingerie Blouses For Spring

New York, March 3.—More fortunate than the Parisienne, who is not allowed to wear evening gowns since the French Government has put a ban on them, the women of New York have had countless occasions to revel in evening gowns this season. Aside from the opera and theatres, there have been balls and dances without number, many of them given in the name of charity.

The glitter of gold and the brightness of silver in the rich tissue cloths and metallic laces have been very conspicuous at evening gatherings. Sparkling sequins and gorgeous brocaded silks have also added to the general effect of splendor which the ballroom of to-day presents.

It is interesting to note the diversity of styles, colour and materials seen. Diaphanous tulles, nets and chiffons, lustrous chiffon velvets and supple satin and silks are accorded equal favour. Bright colours have been brought more into prominence this season than ever before, though white and the pastel shades are much in use, offering a decided contrast to the bright gold, deep rose, ruby red, bright green and Chinese blue in favour.

EVENING DRESS IN HAREM STYLE.

Of the many and diverse styles in evening gowns one of the most popular savors strongly of the Turkish harems. The sketch illustrates this mode. The soft, full skirt is puffed under gracefully and caught to the lower edge of a foundation, the effect resembling the Turkish trousers worn by the beauties of the harems. The bodice is little more than a band of cloth held up by straps over the shoulders. The material of the dress is rose taffeta with gold metallic flowers. Many gowns are seen in this style developed in plain silk or satin, entirely free of trimming, the richness of the material making decoration unnecessary. The harem tunic legthened by a deep frill of lace is another form in which the Turkish influence is apparent. In this style the puff generally comes below the knees.

The evening dresses of young girls are very frequent in the popular one-piece chemise style, as are those of the really grown-ups. It is only in the length of the dress that there is any difference at all, and that, only this season, when women's dresses are worn a little longer. Last winter, when women wore their dresses as short as the sixteen-year-old, one could hardly tell the difference.

A dress of extreme simplicity and excellent style is made of crepe de Chine lengthened by a deep flounce of lace. The loose sleeves of lace have tassels of silk hanging at the ends. This model is illustrated here on a young girl, but the same design has been seen in ladies' gowns.

At the thes dansants, which have been strongly patronized in fashionable circles, smart suits of silk, satin or velvet, with dainty blouses of net or Georgette to match, have been much in evidence. The blouses are mostly in Russian effect, with long peplums falling over the skirt. One-piece dresses of velvet or Georgette, worn with fur coats or capes, are also worn at these afternoon dances. And speaking of furs, such are the inconsistencies of fashion, that furs and straw hats are often seen together!

LINGERIE BLOUSES.

The lingerie blouse of fine white voile and handkerchief linen begins to make its appearance. This is one of the signs that spring is on its way. The blouses this season are trimmed with deep filet lace or fine Irish crochet. Others have very fine tucks or drawn work. The drawn work edges collars and cuffs, or else outlines motifs in the front of the waist, and hand embroidery is often introduced along with it. The filet is sometimes inserted with embroidery in over-and-over stitch along the edges. Filet lace bids fair to be very popular. It is combined with embroidered net in dainty white collars and fichus to wear with afternoon dresses.

WILL ETON EFFECTS BE POPULAR?

There is an indication that bolero and Eton effects will come in again with warmer weather. A smart costume for the South was made in this style. It had a jacket of deep blue, soft velour. The collar was high and the closing at the side. White silk braid about one inch wide outlined the jacket, and rows of it made the deep girdle which topped the white silk skirt worn with it.

Economy

Many women think they are saving money by buying cheap tea, forgetting that it is not the cost per pound but the cost per cup that determines a tea's economy.

You may pay 5 or 10 cents more per pound for Red Rose Tea than for common tea. But because Red Rose Tea is a blend of Indian-Assam teas with Ceylons, consisting of the choice tender shoots and buds—the parts of the tea plant that yield the largest amount of liquor and the finest flavor—one-third less is required in the pot to make the same number of cups.

The cost per cup between Red Rose Tea and common tea is then practically the same. But the flavor—what a difference!

And this distinctive and delightful flavor and rich strength is protected by the Red Rose sealed package. No air, odors or dust can get in to injure Red Rose Tea's splendid quality and economy.

Order a package from your grocer.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

DO IT NOW. — Prompt action prevents serious illness in many cases, therefore I see no reason why we should not adopt the popular slogan, and "Do it now!"

Have you been out in the rain or snow and slush? Are your shoes and stockings wet? The bottom of your trousers or skirt saturated with water? If so, I would advise you not to sit down in a cold place if it is at all possible to avoid it. Keep moving, be active, keep up sufficient circulation so that the increased heat of the body will overcome the dampness of your clothing. If you can get into a well-heated room, you will be wise to remove the wet clothing, dry the skin and dry the clothing and shoes before again putting them on. Most all of you know the importance of these things and the why and the wherefore but so many do not act upon the knowledge.

It is especially important to observe these things in caring for school children. I can well remember my own school days when the new red-top boots that would not "leak" created an irresistible desire to wade out just a little farther than any of the other boys dared to go, and how there was always an unexpected "deep hole" which let the icy water in at the top. Then the run for home and mother. How thankful I am now when I remember how prompt she was to get those wet boots and stockings off, and my feet up close to the stove. She had five boys and five girls to look after and I presume that she knew by experience that prompt action and a little trouble at the right time, saved her from much trouble at the wrong time.

A few days ago I walked by the school yard where my four youngsters attend school, and I saw many children doing just what I did, wading in water and broken ice, little girls walking an their heels and boys walking on their toes (a peculiar characteristic of men and women also, watch them cross a muddy street.) One little girl was in over her shoe tops.

The next day two of my boys did the same thing. One of them came home and although he made no complaint his mother's quick perception saved him from further suffering. The other boy continued at play until dinner time, and of course his condition was not noticed. After dinner he went to choir practice and came home complaining of being cold. Next day he was sent from school with a severe chill and when I got home his temperature was 103 degrees.

Prompt action saved him from pneumonia, but he was a very sick boy for several days. Do it now. Here is what his mother did; you can save your little boy or girl in the same way.

First, a good big dose of mineral or castor oil. Second, a thorough hot bath. Third, a thorough inunction over the throat, chest and all along the spine with the simple herb remedy, Grandmother's Ointment. Fourth, a cold compress to the throat. Fifth, covered up well in bed with plenty of fresh air in the room. Sixth every half hour the cell salts or tissue foods Ferrum Phos., and Natrum Mur., alternating every 15 minutes, until perspiration started and the fever was reduced to a safe degree.

Act promptly when the right time comes to act and save suffering and life.

Ignorance and a Riot. — Very recently a riot was staged by 500 Mexican women because they were requested to take a bath. There now, don't laugh until you hear the whole story. Typhus is carried from place to place and from unclean people to clean people through body lice. The most dangerous foe along the battle lines of many European fields have been the louse. He recognizes no rules of warfare and as willingly attacks the ambulance corps, the doctor and the nurse as the general or the caretaker of mules. All he asks is to be allowed to live in filth. If he could express his wants in words he would most likely say: "Please don't take a bath, and don't change your underclothes very often."

The poor Mexican laborer and servant are not noted for frequent bathing or cleanliness in their clothing, but they are noted for their hospitality towards the louse. They seem to be inseparable.

There was a threatened epidemic of typhus in El Paso, Texas, and the U. S. Health Service found it necessary to suspend the importation of lice. Many of the servants employed in El Paso are Mexican women, who live in Juarez, Mex. They go home at night on the street car and return in the morning. They were not allowed to cross the border without taking a bath, and the bath must be in gasoline. While taking a bath their clothing would be fumigated or disinfected so there would be no live lice to infect the people with whom these women might come in contact.

These poor, ignorant women have good memories regarding disastrous and dangers. They recalled how, about a year previously, 25 men when compelled to take such a bath in the jail, had been burned to death. They got out of the street car and walked back to Juarez, about 50 of them. The word was quickly passed around that the soldiers, the gringo soldiers, were stripping the Mexican women, soaking them in gasoline and setting them on fire. The mob of 500 quickly assembled and their methods of preventing the street cars from running were very effective for they simply laid down on the track.

It's hard to understand why people, human beings having reasoning powers will live in filth when it is so well known that disease and dirt go hand in hand. One cannot blame the ignorant peon for objecting to take a bath in gasoline, however. I think I should object just as vigorously unless I could have absolute assurance that there was neither fire nor matches within a block of the place. There are other means of disinfecting that are just as effective but possibly more troublesome and requiring a little more time.

Now a word about the carriers of disease. The louse is not the cause of Typhus any more than Typhoid Mary was the cause of Typhoid Fever. They are carriers, nothing more. There are people who carry Diphtheria, colds and other diseases and like many of the so-called disease germs they spread it, but they are not the disease. In order to contract any disease, however, there must be first the suitable soil, the right condition for the disease in your own body.

Keep your resisting powers up to the normal and you will not receive a disease. The Home Health Club tells you how.

When ready to use, add three even teaspoonfuls baking soda dissolved in a small portion of hot water. Leave a small portion in the jar as a starter for the next day, mixing in the fresh material.

St. Vitus' Dance Affects Many Children

This Trouble Can Be Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

St. Vitus Dance is much more common than is generally imagined. The trouble is often mistaken for mere nervousness, or awkardness. It usually attacks young children, most often between the ages of six and fourteen—though older persons may be affected with it. The most common symptoms is twitching of the muscles of the face and limbs. As the disease progresses this twitching takes the form of spasms in which the jerking motion may be confined to the head, or all the limbs may be affected. The patient is frequently unable to hold anything in the hands or walk steadily, and in severe cases the speech may be affected. The disease is due to impoverished nerves, owing to the blood being out of condition and can be cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which enrich the blood, strengthen the nerves, and in this way restore the sufferer to good health. Any symptom of nerve trouble in young children should be promptly treated as it is almost sure to lead to St. Vitus Dance. The following is proof of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to cure this trouble. Miss Hattie Cummings, R.R No. 3 Peterboro', Ont., says:—"I was attacked with what the doctor said was St. Vitus Dance. Both my hands trembled so as to be practically useless. Then the trouble went to my left side, and from that to my right leg, and left me in such a condition that I was not able to go out of the house. I took the doctor's medicine without getting any benefit. Then I tried another remedy with the same poor results. At this stage I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and did so, with the result that they fully restored me to health, and I have not had the slightest symptoms of nervous trouble since. I can recommend these pills to anyone who is suffering from nervous trouble, and hope they will profit by my experience."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any drug dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LADY'S FOUR GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The choice of the right style of skirt to wear with a favorite blouse will often give the effect of an attractive costume that one may wear to a matinee or lunch party with a sense of relief that she is following the mode. In the illustration is shown a garment that may grace such occasion if developed in one of the fashionable materials of the season.

If you like their dressy effect you will add the side peplums to the skirt; with them one may even transform a last year's model, but the style stays though they be omitted. The garment is cut in four gores, has left side front closing and full length panel front and back. To show Fashion's fancy, the skirt may be trimmed with braid, beading or fringe. The lower edge in size 24 waist measure requires 3¾ yards.

Serge is good for wear with a wash silk waist for practical wear; duvetyn with a voile waist, broadcloth with a net or crepe de Chine blouse, and there may be considered also for developing this design gabardine, satin, mohair and tweed. The illustrated instructions are so clear that you may be sure of an exact duplicate and you will have a smart looking and stylish skirt at a very small cost by being your own seamstress.

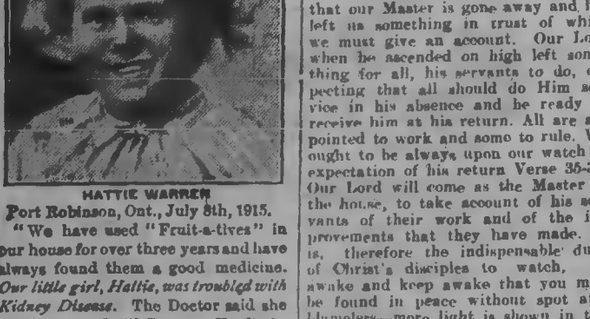
Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

The Second coming of Christ.

Christ pointed out the duty of the disciples to watch and pray. The time of his coming is kept a secret that we may be engaged always to stand upon our guard, this Christ illustrates at the close by a parable which teaches that our Master is gone away and has left us something in trust of which we must give an account. Our Lord when he ascended on high left something for all, his servants to do, expecting that all should do Him service in his absence and be ready to receive him at his return. All are appointed to work and some to rule. We ought to be always upon our watch in expectation of his return Verse 35-37. Our Lord will come as the Master of the house, to take account of his servants of their work and of the improvements that they have made. It is, therefore the indispensable duty of Christ's disciples to watch, be awake and keep awake that you may be found in peace without spot and blameless—more light is shown in the fulfillment of Christ's prophecy by referring to St. Luke's Gospel 21st Chapter. We have details and particulars of the destruction of the temple, city and nation with what curiosity those about Christ inquire concerning the time when those events should take place. Verse 7. It is natural for us to know future things and the time of them. Christ answers their inquiries with clearness and fulness, as far as was necessary to direct them in their duty, for all knowledge is desirable as far as it is in order to practice, Verse 8—many shall come in his name usurping the title and character of the Messiah—many pretend to be the deliverers of the Jewish church and nation from the Romans, by which, multitudes were drawn to their ruin. Christ gives a needful caution as to this—take heed that ye be not deceived. Jesus is the Christ and his doctrine in the gospel of God. They must expect to hear of great commotions among the nations and many terrible judgments on the Jews and others. They shall be fearful sights and great signs from Heaven uncommon appearances. As to the fearful sights, let them not be fearful to you who look above the visible Heaven to the throne of grace and mercy as to the famine and pestilence, you fall into the hand of God who has promised to those who are his, that in the days of famine they shall be satisfied and that he will keep them from the noisome pestilence. Their being persecuted would be a sign of the approach of the destruction of the city and temple which Christ had now foretold. Before God's judgments are brought upon the Jews, they shall fill up the measure of their inquiry, by laying their hands on you, the ruin of people always follows their sins. Christ tells them what hard things they should suffer for his names' sake, much the same as he told them when he first called them Matt. 10 Ch. The rulers of the Jews knew that if the gospel was fully proclaimed among them, that their usurped power would be at an end, raised all their force to oppose it, filled peoples' minds with prejudice against it, and made the preachers and professors hateful to the people. Christ encourages them to bear up under their trials, and to go on in their work. Notwithstanding the opposition they would meet with, your sufferings will be a testimony that you believe what you preach and that you are supported by Divine power and that the spirit of God and his glory rests upon you. God will stand by you, and own you, and assist you. I will give you a mouth and wisdom, a mouth and wisdom together, completely fit a man both for services and suffering; this was fulfilled after the pouring out of the spirit. When the Apostles were brought before the council and the Sanhedrim and answered them so as to make them ashamed. Verse 18—There shall not a hair of your head perish. He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it. In your patience possess your souls, get and keep possession of your souls. We may view the prophecy before us, very much in the nature of those Old Testament prophecies, which together with their great object, embrace or occasionally glance at some lesser object of immediate importance to the church. Having given an idea of the times for about thirty-eight years next ensuing, Christ shows them what all those things would issue in namely the destruction of Jerusalem and the utter dispersion of the Jewish nation, which would be a type and figure of Christ's second coming. He tells them that they should see Jerusalem besieged, encompassed with armies, Verse 20—and when they saw that they might conclude that the desolation of the city was nigh. He warns them upon this to shift for their own safety abandon a city which God has forsaken and given up to ruin—come out of her my people—Rev. 18-4. These are the days of vengeance spoken of by the Old Testament prophets, the blood of the Old Testament martyrs must now be required after days of patience long abused, there will come days of vengeance, wrath upon the people the wrath of God. There shall be great distress in the land; none will know what course to take to help themselves. He describes the issue of the struggle between the Jews and the Romans: Multitudes of them shall fall by the edge of the sword, the rest shall be led away captive into all nations, the city shall be trodden down by the Gentiles. He describes the great terror that people would be in, there shall be many signs and prodigies in the Heavens, men's hearts shall fall them for fear, Verse 26—the powers of Heaven shall be shaken—2 Pet. 3-10-12. The destruction of Jerusalem was in a particular manner, an act of Christ's judgment—the judgment committed to the Son of Man. This was an evidence of the first coming of the Messiah. He says when you see these things begin to come to pass, look up look heavenward in faith, hope and prayer, and life up your heads with cheerfulness for your redemption draweth nigh, Verse 24. Look further on than the destruction of the Jewish nation, and is it not easily understood that Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. Some understand it of what is past, so Hammond. The Gentiles who have conquered Jerusalem shall keep possession of it, and shall be purely Gentile till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled; till a great part of the Gentile world is become Christian. Others understand it, of what is yet to come; so Whitby. A brief detail of the miseries endured by the Jews is given by Josephus, the Jewish historian, he says the Jws were goaded to revolt by the oppressions of the Roman Governor and openly rebelled but wars and rumors of war were not confined to Judea in Alexandria 50,000 Jews were slaughtered at one time. Italy was so convulsed that four Emperors were put to death in two years. Famines, earthquakes also prevailed—Josephus says the constitution of nature was confounded—there were signs and fearful sights in the Heavens, Christians were persecuted in the most cruel manner; but the gospel was preached throughout the known world. They love testimony to their faith, even in death during these persecutions, but in the judgments against Jerusalem, not a Christian perished. The idolatrous ensigns of the Romans were seen round Jerusalem, but the armies withdrew for a time. The Christians fled to Pella in the mountains of Gilead beyond Jordan, but a large number of Jews going up to the Passover and others fleeing for security crowded within the walls of Jerusalem. The robbers who had banded together during the preceeding commotions also hastened into the city, joined the mob and ruled within the walls. Plunder, murder and destruction abounded thousands were slain in the contests of different factions and the provisions for the siege were pillaged and burned the extremities suffered by famine were dreadful. The Romans built a wall round the city and five hundred prisoners were crucified daily till materials and room for crosses could not be found. Gold having been discovered in one of these bodies, two thousand deserters were cut up in one night in search of treasure, that they might have swallowed. One hundred and fifteen thousand dead bodies were carried out at one gate during the seige eleven hundred thousand in all perished, every place in the city was covered with dead when the city was taken. Titus desired to save the temple, but it was set on fire by a soldier and six thousand perished among the burning ruins. The city was destroyed razed from the foundation, thousands were sold as slaves, till the slave market was glutted—on one occasion 11,000 captives were left destitute of food and perished, so fully did the divine judgments come upon the Jews and their city is set as an example before us, to show us that iniquity will not pass unpunished and that the judgments of the Lord will be executed. This finishes the exposition of the prophecy of Christ concerning his second coming and the comments of Matthew, Mark and St. Luke. We will take up the signs of the times in which we are living, Christ coming to take up his saints and his return to earth (D.V.).

Yours sincerely,
JAMES SUTHERLAND



Will Their Standard of Living Change?

HARRY:—"New car Bert? How do you like it?"

BERT:—"Fine. The wife thinks it great. She'd hate to be without one now."

HARRY:—"I suppose you carry sufficient insurance to enable the wife to live as comfortably as you are now doing should anything happen to you."

BERT:—"Well hardly, you know insurance costs money."

HARRY:—"You've the wrong idea Bert. Insurance conserves wealth. Another thing you've overlooked is that adequate life insurance enables you to enjoy the pleasures of life. It relieves you of anxiety regarding the future of your dependents. Furthermore the longer you carry a policy the more it increases in value."

BERT:—"Jump in Harry, and on our way down town we will call at the office of The Manufacturers Life and get full particulars of their Monthly Income Policy. I am going to make certain the standard of living for my family after I'm gone."

READ THIS and See if it does not look GOOD TO YOU

FOR some time we have been advertising the need of Life Insurance in general. NOW we propose to show you WHY you should place your insurance with the Sun Life of Canada.

Fifteen years ago a parent in this City placed a ten pay 15 year Endowment Policy (No. 200916) in the Sun Life of Canada, on his son who was then 11 years of age.

On the 1st of February, inst. he was offered any of the following Options:—

First, a fully paid up Policy of $4045.00 payable at death.

Where can a man take $89.30 per year for 10 years and invest it in ANY OTHER WAY and produce an immediate estate of $4045.00 in case of death?

Or he could withdraw $905.55 which you will notice is more than he paid in, ALL TOLD, and still retain a FREE paid up participating policy of $1000.00, payable at death; thus his dollars did two things at the same time,—carried the risk, and gave a FREE POLICY and he saved his money for himself too.

Or he could have drawn $1266.80 in cash, which was $373.80 more than he paid in, or a return of over $141 for every hundred he paid, besides having had free protection for the past fifteen years.

HONESTLY NOW does not that look pretty good to you.

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CATTLE MARKET.

The feature of the market this week has been the continued light receipts, a sure indication that supplies in the country are really short, in spite of opinions held in some quarters to the contrary. The railway situation has distinctly improved, and more cars have been available than for some weeks, yet the cattle have not been coming forward. The demand for all classes of cattle is active and keen. Prices therefore are high, and prospects are that they will hold so for some time to come. The quality of this week's receipts has not averaged high. The average, in fact, is very poor. A few broken lots of choice finished cattle have sold strong around $11.00 to $11.25, one small bunch fetching $11.50. Good loads of handy butcher have held very firm around $10.00 to $10.50. Butcher cows have held very firm and are wanted. Thin young cows are in good demand for grazing. There is a good active market for stockers and feeders of quality. Good heavy bulls are firm, and have sold higher than at any time this season.

Supplies of sheep and lambs have been very light. The choice selections have sold strong and high but the rough barnyard lambs are hard to dispose of.

Hogs are again very strong, the closing week-end prices being the highest of a season of high records.

CATTLE RECEIPTS.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts for the week, 327 cars, with 3,446 cattle, 561 calves, 10,452 hogs, 324 sheep and lambs, and 208 horses.

City Cattle Market—51 cars, with 502 cattle, 205 sheep and lambs, 484 hogs, and 47 calves.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Episode of a Halloween Party

By BARBARA PHIPPS

Myrtle wrote me to spend a week with her at their country place in October. It is said that we women put the most important part of a letter in a postscript, and Myrtle certainly did so in this case, for in a space where she had scarcely room to write them were the words, "Jimmie Atherton will be with us."

Myrtle devoted three pages of her letter in suggesting different costumes from which I might choose one to wear at a fancy dress Halloween party she proposed to give for her guests. She advised me to bring my costume with me, for I could not get one in the country.

I arrived three days before the party and was disappointed to find that Mr. Atherton would not be with us till Halloween. I could scarcely wait for him. He had telephoned me that he expected to meet me at Myrtle's house party and had given me to understand that all would be settled between us during our visit. Of course no one else than I could make out his meaning, though I can't help but consider his saying anything over a phone to convey such a meaning evidence of the impatience of lovers.

The three days I spent waiting for the arrival of my lover, and especially what I expected to hear from him, were the longest of my life. I fear I presented a bad appearance to the other guests moping by myself and, if I joined in their sports, showing plainly that my mind, indeed, my heart—was somewhere else. At any rate, Myrtle knew where my heart was if the others did not.

During the day before the party we were all busy preparing our costumes, some of which must be constructed impromptu. The men were very remiss about this. What women love to do in a matter of dress is a bore to a man, and several of Myrtle's men guests had come either without a fancy dress or with a simple domino and mask. Myrtle insisted on every one representing some historical character.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon Myrtle received a telegram from Jimmie—my Jimmie—that he could not get away in time for the Halloween party, but he would do the best he could. When Myrtle told me this my heart sank within me like lead. I dreaded joining in the evening's festivities with such a disappointment upon me. But what could I do? I must make the best of it and not render myself obnoxious by pining among a troup of merrymakers. I succeeded so poorly that Myrtle felt obliged to come to my rescue. About 10 o'clock, when the merrymaking was at its height, she said to me:

"Gwen, go out into the grounds with a hand mirror and see if the man you are to marry does not look over your shoulder."

I was glad of an excuse to get away by myself. I didn't care for a hand glass, but Myrtle had provided a number of them for the occasion and thrust one into my hand. Several of the girls had already gone forth on on errand similar to mine, each having taken a mirror.

I strolled out, not into the darkness, for the moon was near the full, taking my way down the driveway that led from the house to the gate. Presently I stopped and raised the glass. I did this without being conscious of the act, for I knew already the man I would marry and had no idea of seeing his face in the glass. I moved the mirror to take in different places behind me and at last saw something I was not prepared for.

One of our house party—as was evident from her costume—was sitting on a bench in a recess among shrubbery, and beside her sat a man in ordinary business apparel. As I looked he suddenly drew her toward him and gave her a bear hug. During this episode a cloud was passing over the moon, but as soon as it had rolled away there was light enough for me to see that the man in the case was my Jimmie Atherton.

I moved noiselessly away and back to the house and on reaching it went to my room, where I spent half an hour getting myself in a condition to go downstairs. When I descended I found Mr. Atherton, who had not long before come in, having arrived by a late train. He came up to me smiling, but I bowed to him ceremoniously and passed on.

I nerved myself to show great gayety for the rest of the evening, especially before Mr. Atherton, and was glad when the festivities were over and I could hide my anguish in my room. When all was quiet Myrtle, who had observed that something was wrong with me, came in and asked what it was. When I told her a smile came to her lips, and she asked me what costume the girl Jimmie had hugged wore. I replied that I could not see it distinctly, but it was crimson. At this she burst into a laugh and said:

"That girl was Johnny Webster. He makes up admirably as a woman. He had gone out to spy on the girls who were consulting their mirrors, hoping to look over some girl's shoulder, and while doing so Jimmie Atherton came up from the station. Johnny hailed him, and the two sat down on a bench for a few moments' chat before coming to the house."

The next morning I was as good as pie to Jimmie. He tried hard to find out why I had treated him so coolly the evening before, but I kept the secret. When we left Myrtle's home we were engaged.

Whooping Cough

"The disease I most dread is Whooping Cough, for children are often permanently injured by the awful straining of the cough. You should never neglect it, and treatment should be started at the first symptom. You cannot mistake the symptoms: protracted coughing, worse at night; peculiar whoop; labored expectoration of mucus; apparent suffocation after coughing.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

is a positive remedy for this disease—repeat the dose frequently, for if given freely it liquifies the tough mucus, makes it easy to expectorate and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. There is no danger whatever from Whooping Cough when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given."

Show Your Practical Sympathy with Slave-Raided Belgium

If ever Belgium needed sympathy—OUR sympathy—she needs it now! To the ravages of fire, sword and a savage, brutish soldiery, Germany has added deliberate, cold-blooded slave-raiding.

Over 100,000 Belgian workmen have already been snatched from their homes and taken into slavery in unknown places. The mothers, wives and children who beg for their release are driven back by the Huns in utter despair. Neutral protests have failed to change Germany's inhuman purpose, nor can the Allies free Belgian manhood until the Teutons are crushed.

But we can save the women and children through the neutral Belgian Relief Commission, which is feeding three million of them. We can express our indignation, and our sympathy with our Ally's wrongs, in a practical way, by giving more liberally than ever to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Make this a personal matter! Decide what you can afford to give, and send your subscriptions weekly, monthly or in one lump sum to Local or Provincial Committees, or Horses in Battle.

The return during a battle of riderless horses to camp is an almost certain sign of a rout that amounts almost to annihilation. A horse may lose its trooper, but unless it is wounded it will nearly always keep on with the rest.

If the battle is lost and the army is driven from the field in confusion the ownerless horses will return to camp or remain on the field, often galloping about in military formation, but avoiding the wounded.

An army horse knows the trumpet call as well as its rider, and when a squadron forms up to charge it will strain at the bit, anxious to be off, but it does not like waiting, doing nothing, especially if exposed to fire.

Many attempts have been made to extend the Geneva convention to animals. The proposal has received sympathy everywhere, but nothing definite has yet been done, though every soldier does his best for his steed so far as in him lies.—Pearson's Weekly.

Crude Cannon.

During the insurrectionary war carried on in Cuba against the rule of Spain the insurgents, being in need of artillery, constructed a cannon of wood. A piece of tree, five feet in length and one foot in diameter, was placed on trestles and a bore burned in it by means of white hot iron pipes. This weapon was bound around with ox hides cut into long strips. It was fired over 100 times before it burst, the projectiles used being fragments of iron, stones and fire hardened clay balls.

Paper cannons have been used by the Chinese in warfare. The cannons were made of paper, hardened and toughened by means of litharge, wax, tallow and white lead and fashioned in the shape of a long tube. A steel core was then inserted, the exterior being bound with wire and rope and steel bands added for extra strength.

China's Sweet Potatoes.

Sweet potatoes may be said to be the staple crop of China. There is no section which does not raise them, and they are a substantial part of the diet of a greater part of the Chinese people.

Nothing of the Kind.

Peel four hot cooked beets, cut into thin slices, and toss about for three or four minutes in a saucepan, which contains three tablespoonfuls of butter, to which has been added one tablespoonful of vinegar, or a few drops of tarragon, two cloves and one tablespoonful of sugar.

Peterboro's Horticultural Society Suggested for Leadership in Movement To Secure Greater Production of Garden Produce This Year

If Concerted Action is to be Undertaken Efficient Organization is Essential to Success in the Planting of Home Gardens. Vacant Lots Present an Additional Opportunity and for the Necessary Direction the Horticultural Society is a Logical Choice.

WINTER is waning and a new Spring, with all its potentialities, creeps in with petty but persistent pace. The stringent needs of the present seem to relax under the glowing promise of to-morrow. The season's change bears all the ordinary accompaniments, the lengthening days, the rekindling heat of the sun, and the vague stirrings of Nature straining at its bonds. In a few short weeks the seasonal transition will be complete and the usual prospects reduced to realities. And rarely in this country has the promise of Spring been awaited so anxiously.

Legislators, supported by the press and the pulpit, are directing the attentions of the people to a preparedness for production that sets a new value on the available, arable land. It is not merely a national activity. The preliminary efforts that are gathering force in Canada seem but part of a world movement. But for us it becomes a local problem, realized in the almost unprecedented scarcity of certain foodstuffs, emphasized by the warnings and urgings of the Legislature, and resounded by recent expressions here at home. Opinion is necessarily unanimous that this year's production must be undertaken upon a larger scale than we have ever contemplated, and the advice of those who are appointed to direct the people must be regarded not only as a personal appeal but should be recognized as a public duty. Hence the problem can be presented tersely but in its full import: Peterborough must avail itself of its every oppotrunity of production this year.

The following passage from a Government pamphlet states the case clearly: "The British Empire will need all the food that can be made available in 1917. Everyone in cities and towns with vacant land can produce some food if he will. By growing vegetables for your household you will release food for someone else, that would have been sold to you. By growing vegetables for your own use, you will also save most of the money that you would otherwise have paid for them, which you can give to the many needy war funds should you care to do so.

Peterborough has the desire to increase its production this year, and it has the land, but it needs direction. Citizens who ordinarily plant their gardens would probably obtain greater results from the assistance of those who have studied gardening from the standpoint of heaviest output. The incentive of competition might have the effect of intensifying the efforts of these citizens. This is one phase of the problem.

It is known that there is considerable vacant land in the city. At the conference of citizens last week, called together upon the invitation of Mayor Duffus, the possibilities of working Victoria Heights was mentioned as an example. Here again is there need of direction, and furthermore of organization.

Harking back to the spring of 1915, when the City Council undertook a campaign to utilize vacant land for planting, it will be remembered that a number of lots were secured, but the unemployed men, and they were numerous that year, balked at the work. Hence, if vacant lots are available, there are the subsequent perplexities of labour, seed, tools and management.

Many citizens without gardens of their own would doubtless respond to an organized movement to utilize vacant lots, and the practice successfully employed in other cities suggests the enlistment of the services of the school children.

In brief, there is the extreme necessity of greater production, there is available land, there are workers, but there is no co-operation, no organization, no directing force for this work.

It might be a proper suggestion that one of the first activities of the newly formed Peterborough Industrial Association should be the general assumption of this responsibility, for it is a responsibility seeking some shoulders to rest upon. Supported by the public's desire to assist in advancing the welfare of the city, the executive of the Industrial Association might approach the Horticultural Society and ask that body, already organized and practically experts in gardening, to co-ordinate and direct the city's efforts towards a greater production this year.

The Horticultural Society has a fine record of achievement in public service, particularly on the aesthetic side. They have not overlooked, however, the humbler utilitarian phase of their interests as the special prizes their members have offered for home gardens attest. But if a comprehensive scheme is to be put into action this year to secure greater production, the Horticultural Society seems to be the logical choice to lead the way.

It may be but a Utopian fantasy that the Peterborough Industrial Association could be regarded by the citizens as the pivot of such public enterprises. The Association surely has the sanction of the people and can feel assured of their united support. Is it not practicable, therefore, that when general problems arise for the solution of which strong and capable leadership is required that the Industrial Association assume them in a general way, and while keeping a close touch upon them, transfer the immediate supervision to associations already organized, that could handle them with the wisdom acquired in their particular experience?

Home gardening is such an example. The Peterborough Industrial Association would first undertake the work in a broad, general way. Then they could call into conference representatives of the Horticultural Association, the Teachers' Association, Trades and Labour Council, and request these organizations to undertake particular details.

Another example is suggested. On the occasion of the visit of the Duke of Devonshire, the Council's reception committee could be supported by the Industrial Association, and in turn by the reception committee of the Motor League. However, the idea is a digression, perhaps an excusable one, from the main subject of the need of immediate, united action toward co-operation in local gardening production this year. And it may be repeated that this presents a new opportunity to the Horticultural Society to serve the city it has already beautified. Some organization is immediately required if the greatest production is to be obtained this summer. The Horticultural Society is already organized.

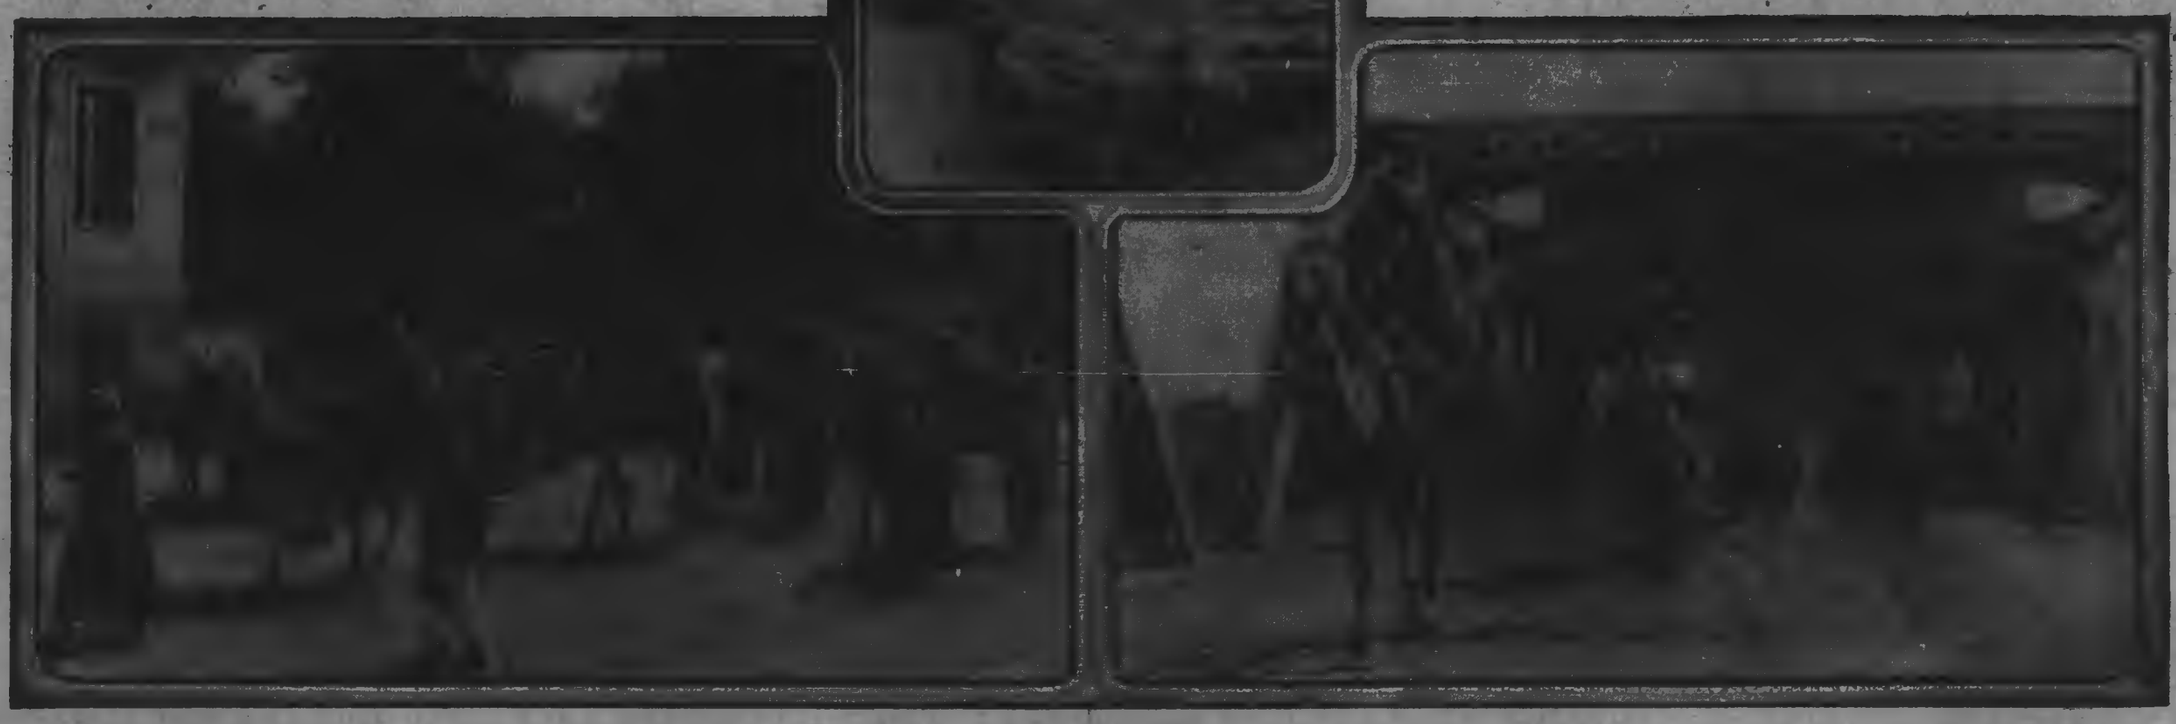
Egypt, Germany's Lost Desire - Who Gets Constantinople?

The Nile at Cairo, the apex of the great Nile Delta. It runs through Egypt, a Bible land, and from the earliest ages it has always been prominent in historic things. This river is practically the only source of dilration to Egypt. Under the British rule many improvements have been made, the greatest being the great Nile dam. Not far from the scene of this picture stand the Pyramids of Gizeh, and in this vicinity Napoleon fought the battle of the Pyramids on July 21st, 1798. Near the mouth of the river Nelson fought and won the battle of the Nile in the same year.

Cairo is a truly Eastern city. It has minarets, mosques and citadels. The great citadel of Cairo faces the southeastern approach to the city. It was built by Saladin in 1166 from brick and stone taken from the huge ruins of ancient Memphis across the Nile. Saladin also enclosed the entire town as well as the citadel, by a wall. It is one of the places where Western civilization matches Eastern ignorance, where the natives still cling to ancient customs though the surroundings be truly modern.



Cairo's chief thoroughfare, the Musk, which extends the entire length of the city. It has largely lost its Oriental character, being traversed by trim cars and lined with modern shops and residences. But the ever-present camel trains flow through it as they did the days of the Crusades

The great Sphinx, next to the pyramids themselves, is the most notable monument of ancient Egypt. Seated on his horse at the base of the Sphinx, Napoleon made his famous address to his army, beginning, "Soldiers, forty centuries look down on you." (Insert.)

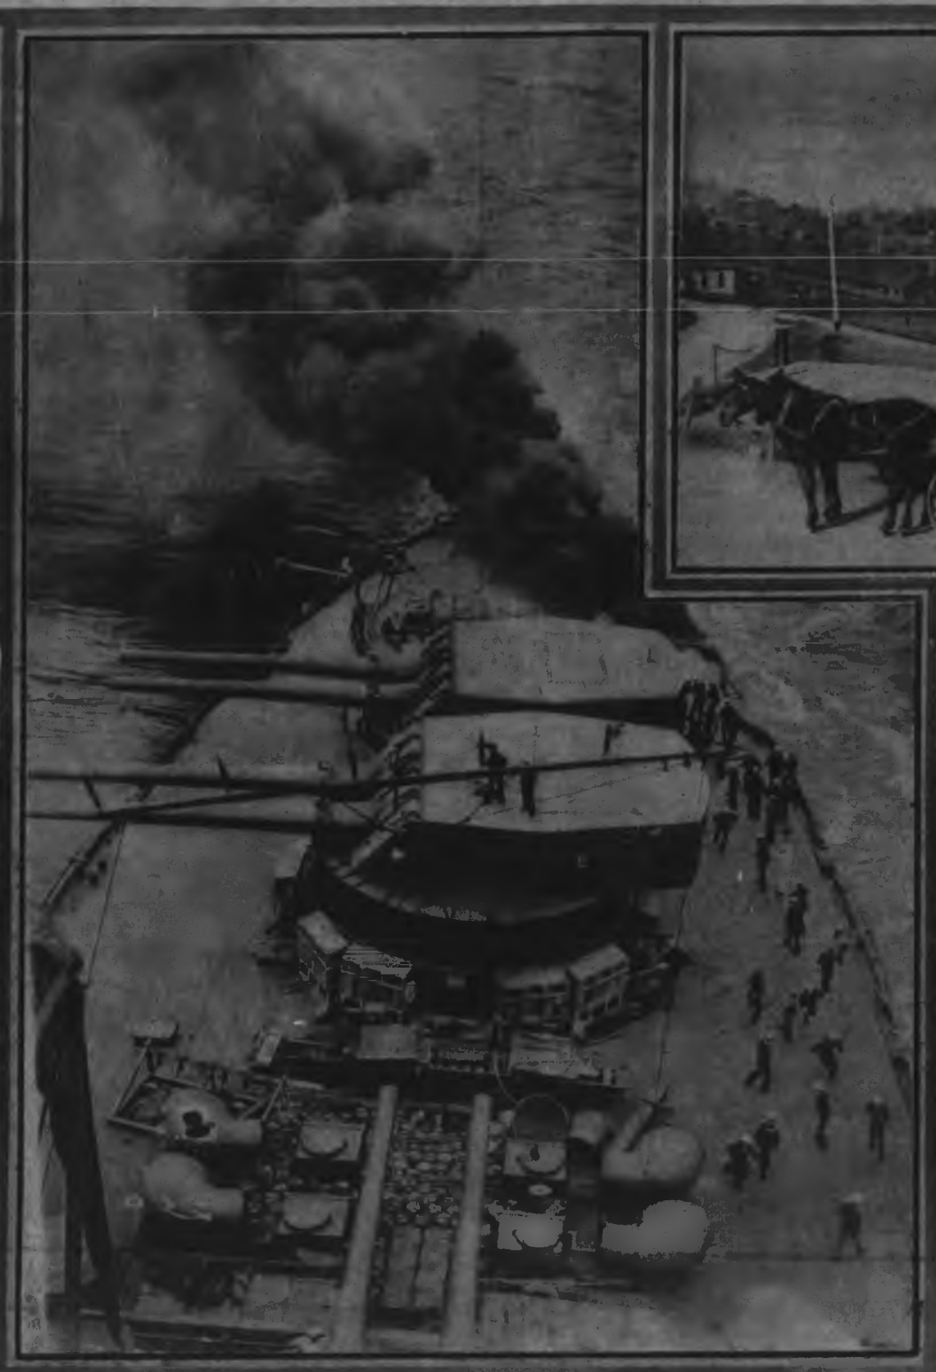
The great Nile bridge connecting the western environs of Cairo with the island of Gesireh presents a never-ending panorama of mingled European and Oriental color. It is not an uncommon sight to see camel trains, carriages, donkey carts, street cars, and automobiles on the bridge at once.

A Russian transport from Vladivostok loaded with reinforcements for the Saloniki front passing through the Suez Canal. The photograph was taken from the deck of the S. S. Cleveland during her round-the-world cruise.

One of the hardest problems to be solved after the war is, "Who gets Constantinople?" The allies favor Russia, who has kept a close watch on this important point for many years. The other aspirant is Turkey, but Turkey's sun is setting and past events have proved she is unable to govern herself, much less any added territory.

Here, There and Everywhere -- People We Hear About

Dr. Paul Ritter, Swiss Minister in Washington, who will take up the task of conducting negotiations between United States and Germany, for the Berlin Government. He has not figured much in press despatches, but from now on it is expected he will live a rather busy life, and be heard from quite frequently.



The harbor of Halifax, which cable despatches say is to be the new port of call, instead of Kirkwall, thus avoiding the proscribed sea area north of the British Isles. Closely following this news there was renewed activity at the docks of many of the steamships in New York City. It was evident many of the freighters, and the liners, too, were preparing to clear as soon as possible.

Lord Richard Nevill, who is a member of the staff of the Duke of Devonshire, Governor-General of Canada, and is Commander of the Royal Victoria Order, Companion of the St. Michael, and Lieut.-Comptroller of the Household.

A blaze on board the U.S.S. Wyoming at sea was quickly extinguished by the perfectly trained crew. Each man rushed to an arranged station. Water compartments were closed. Preparations were made to flood the magazine if necessary, and every possible contingency was guarded against. A fire has but little chance aboard a modern naval craft, because of the perfect system maintained.

Senator William J. Stone, of Missouri, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, whose position ranks him as one of the country's leading statesmen. A new and unpublished photograph.

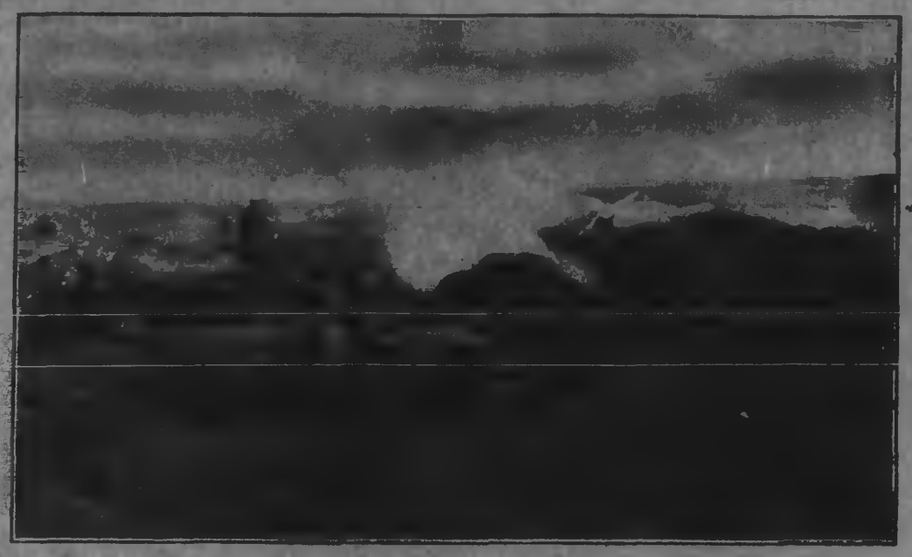
American sculptress commissioned by Canadian Government to carve marble statue of Edith Cavell. Canada has commissioned Miss Florence Wyle to execute a marble statue of the late Edith Cavell, martyred nurse. Miss Wyle has a studio in Toronto, but recently left it to make her home in Southern California, while completing this task.

St. Peter's and St. Peter's Square at Rome, Italy, seen from an aeroplane flying over the city. This is perhaps the first time that such an unusually clear and expansive view has been made of the centre of the Roman Catholic world. To the left are shown the Vatican gardens, the Pope's only outdoor promenade.

: The Varied Interests of War, Each Claim the Photographer's Attention :

A scene in a motorboat plant in the United States, which has completed a large number of fast, powerful motorboats to be used as submarine chasers by the British Government. They have a cruising radius of 700 miles at 22 miles an hour and 1,500 miles at 14 miles an hour. They mount 3-inch rapid fire guns and are equipped with 500 h.p. engines. They are said to be practically immune from submarine attack.

France mobilising its women workers. These women are answering morning roll call at a Paris barracks. They are given work which frees men for military service, even if it be the strenuous life of shipbuilding.



A French battery behind the lines in the Somme keeping up a steady fire, directed against a German position in the distance. This gives us a graphic illustration of the words we read of often in our daily newspapers "Our artillery kept up an active fire."

Every Precaution.

M.O.—Now, sergeant, I should like to hear what precautions you take against infected water.

Sergeant—Well, sir, first we boil it—

M.O.—Good!

Sergeant—Then we filter it—

M.O.—Excellent!

Sergeant—And then we drink beer.

"SHOWED MENTAL DELUSIONS UNDER WHICH GERMANY IS NOW LABOURING"

Japanese Minister Characterizes German Plot as a "Mental Delusion"— "Absurd to Suppose That Japan Would Desert Her Allies and Join With Germany."

MEXICAN STATEMENT

Examiner Special:

TOKIO, March 3.— Declaring that Japan had received no such proposal as that bared in German Foreign Secretary Zimmerman's letter to the German minister at Mexico city, Viscount Motono to-day asserted that the whole plot "showed the mental delusions under which Germany is now labouring. "The entire scheme is absurd," he declared. "First, it was absurd to suppose that Japan would desert her Allies and join with Germany. Secondly, it was absurd to imagine that Mexico could induce Japan to follow such a course." No proposals of any kind have been received from Mexico.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, March 3.— "Mexico has not received any proposition of an alliance from Germany," Foreign Minister Aguilar said to-day.

This is the first official word from the Mexican government indicating that the German proposition failed to reach First Chief Carranza or his Ministers.

BERLIN ADMISSION.

BERLIN, March 3.—Admission was made by Germany to-day that instructions had been sent to the German Minister in Mexico City as to the possibilities of Mexico's part in hostilities against the United States.

AMERICAN MILITARY ATTACHE KILLED

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, March 3.—The death of Major Elvin R. Heiberg, U.S.A. Military Attache to the Rome Embassy, was announced to-day, as the result of an accident at the Carso front. Major Heiberg had been granted an attache permit to view the fighting and was riding a horse on Thursday, somewhere along the line. The animal became frightened at a cannonade and reared, throwing his rider. King Victor and General Cadorna telegraphed their condolence to Ambassador Page here to-day. The latter ordered a special train to bring the body back to Rome from the front and despatched the American naval attache to the Carso to take charge of the remains. Major Elvin R. Heiberg was appointed as military attache at Rome about a year ago. He was forty-two years old, and served in the Boxer uprising in China.

It Is Expected China Will Sever Diplomatic Relations

LONDON, March 3.—Berlin despatches in the Rheinsche West Falische Zeitung state that in circles in touch with the Chinese legation in Berlin, it is expected China will give notice of a rupture of diplomatic relations unless Germany changes her blockade policy, says the Exchange Telegraph correspondent at The Hague. The German Foreign Office it is added, has been warned to that effect by the German Minister at Pekin.

APPARATUS TO DESTROY SUBS.

Wonderful Claims Are Made For a Pittsburg Man's Discovery

NEW YORK, March 3.—A special despatch to The World from Pittsburg, Pa., says:

Theodore Eichholz, a young engineer and architect of this city, has invented a wireless device that may be used to destroy submarines by causing an explosion of gases that are always present in submersibles. For several years the inventor was connected with the United States Corps of Engineers.

Mr. Eichholz stated that a few days ago a small experimental apparatus in his home on Neville Island sunk a small "dummy" submarine in the Ohio River five miles away. The destroyed model was built of steel and had been submerged to a depth of ten feet.

NORMAL PRICES LOOKED FOR

No Serious Shortage of Potatoes in Canada—Scarcity Due to Tie-up of Transportation

OTTAWA, March 3.—Members of the Cabinet declare that there is no truth in the story to the effect that the Government would put an embargo on the export of potatoes. The question has not yet been considered by the Government. Officials of the Department of Agriculture state that there is no serious shortage of potatoes in Canada. The present scarcity is local rather than general, and is attributed to the transportation tie-up of last month. In a few weeks, as soon as available supplies in western Canada and in the Maritime Provinces can be moved by freight, it is predicted that the famine at some points in central Canada will be relieved, and prices will drop to something like normal.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR PATRIOTIC FUND

The Amount Will Keep the Fund Going Until the City Issues Debentures

At a meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council, held yesterday afternoon, it was decided to recommend that a cheque be issued for ten thousand dollars in favour of the Patriotic Fund. This amount will keep the fund going until such time as the debentures are issued for sixty thousand dollars, covering the amount of the city's grant to the fund.

Board of Education.

The March instalment of the appropriation for the Board of Education was authorized at the same meeting. The full amount required by the Board is being withheld in order to give the Council an opportunity of giving the School Board's estimates a once over, despite the fact that the Council has no authority to reduce them.

A cheque for seventy-five dollars will be made out in favour of the Peterborough Poultry Association. This represents the amount of the city's grant to the Association.

Amount Reduced.

Dr. Rogers, analytical chemist of Toronto, will be paid the sum of twenty-five dollars for services rendered in connection with an analysis for rat poison, arising out of the death of Howard Clark. Dr. Rogers rendered a bill for fifty dollars, which the city protested. Dr. Rogers replied to the letter of protest, stating that the regular fee for such work was fifty dollars, and advised the city to proceed in future cases through the Attorney-General's Department. He agreed to accept twenty-five or fifty dollars, as the city saw fit. A copy of the letter will be sent to Coroner Dr. Greer.

CONGRESS MAY TAKE DEFINITE STAND TO-DAY

First News of the Berlin Admission of Conspiracy to Align Japan and Mexico For Invasion of United States Was Conveyed to the Senate To-day.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By Carl Groat.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The second session of the sixty-fourth Congress will adjourn sine die at noon to-morrow. The adjournment actually may come several hours after noon Sunday, but to-night the Congress clocks will be stopped and set right again only after the present Congress passes into history. There will be no extra session until June at the earliest, unless International possibilities make it essential that the Senate and House meet sooner.

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Germany's unabashed acknowledgement of conspiracy to align Japan and Mexico for an invasion of United States appears to have removed the last vestige of opposition in the Senate to the armed neutrality bill. First news of the Berlin admission was conveyed to the Senate in United Press despatches read in to the record at the request of Senator Brandegee.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Congress is expected to-day to take final steps towards giving President Wilson authority to arm American merchant ships for defence against submarines, and the Navy Department was ready with guns and gunners in all its yards at a dozen points to carry out the President's orders.

A number of senators declared they believe that the arming of merchant ships would lead to war, but said they were willing to accept such a result. The President is prepared even to convey vessels when mere arming proves an insufficient protection for American lives and property on the seas.

The Irish Question

Debate on This All Important Matter Will Open Next Week in the House of Commons—The Line of Cleavage—A Feeling of Growing Concern as to the Result

LAND REFORMERS

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, March 3.—The torpedoing of the Laconia, and the consequent loss of American lives, has, naturally, brought to an acute stage throughout England the feeling of anxiety as to the attitude America will take. There is a determination evident, however, to avoid even a suggestion of an attempt on the part of the British press to influence American opinion upon the outrage. Every responsible paper in the kingdom maintains an unbroken reticence about it, not a single article appearing that pretends to tell what the United States should do under the circumstances. What appears consists only of cabled reports from the British correspondents in America, and they give only the news, without colour.

There is a feeling, however, that sooner or later Germany will provoke the United States to armed intervention in the war, since she is determined to maintain her campaign of ruthlessness upon the seas.

IRISH QUESTION.

In England we are more concerned at the moment in the important debate on the Irish question, which will open next week in the House of Commons. Everybody feels a growing concern as to the result, because it certainly means a parting of the ways for more parties and more personalities than for a long time. It is generally recognized that the condition of Ireland is growing worse, and that it will continue to grow worse until some strong plan of statesmanship that can check the deterioration, is developed.

All the party leaders, including Mr. Asquith, who has returned from Brighton, after a short visit made to recover from a severe cold, are consulting their followers as to the best method to pursue. Redmond is still out of action because of a severe attack of influenza but it is expected that he will return ready for work in a few days. Lloyd George, immersed in the problem of the war, is also out of the Irish picture. The situation is peculiarly critical for him, since if he has no bold plan to propose he will come into direct hostility not only with the Irish party, but with the Liberals as well, while, on the other hand, he has great difficulties with some of the members of his own cabinet. The preliminary reconnaissance that took place this week in the debate on the arrest of Sinn Feiners, was remarkable for the fact that though Dillon Devlin and other Irish speakers did not mince their words of denunciation of the policy of the present ministry, the ministerial answers were conciliatory in tone. In one, Chief Secretary Duke, who is known to be keenly desirous of settling the Irish question, gave a very vigorous hint that to the reactionaries of his own party by declaring that a settlement had been too long delayed. Bonar Law, who is regarded as less friendly to the Irish question, also declared that it was his own desire, and that of every British party that a settlement should be arrived at soon.

IMMENSE DIFFICULTIES.

There are immense difficulties in the way, and the failure of previous attempts do not encourage confidence but it is certain that the universal sentiment throughout England is that a settlement be effected. Commons will find no opposition to definite action looking to this result except from a infinitesimal group of die-hards, and what before the war would have been considered revolutionary methods would now be accepted in ten minutes if advocated by Lloyd George.

As the names of railway stations are illegible when the express train flies past them, so it is very hard to keep count—it is sometimes even difficult to notice—the extraordinary transfor-

SALARIES FOR 1917 BRIGADE.

Ten 1st Class Men	9000 00
Ten 2nd Class Men	4800 00
Total Salaries	$15,400 00

TOTAL APPROPRIATION $19,000

WHAT THE FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COMMITTEE DID.

Raised Chief Howard's salary from $1400 to $1600.

Provided an aggregate increase of $1629 for the firemen.

Cut out $200 for the annual attendance of Chief and Chairman at Fire Chiefs' convention.

Established system of rewards for efficiency of firemen.

Postponed appointment of Deputy Chief.

New salaries become effective on March 1, 1917.

Total appropriation for Department, $19,600.

Salary increases for the Chief and men of the Fire Department were provided by the Fire, Water and Light committee last night. Chief Howard gets a raise of $200, making his salary $1600, and the firemen receive practically an increase of ten per cent. On May 1 last year the firemen received a ten per cent. increase which, with last night's advance, makes a total increase during one year of approximately twenty per cent.

This was the most important feature of the meeting, although the inauguration of efficiency rewards should bring about the desired object of retaining the most desirable men and thereby giving permanency to the brigade. After eight years of continuous service a fireman will receive an increase of ten cents a day, and when he has completed fifteen years he receives another ten cent increase.

Ald. Dobbin presided, with the following members present: Aldermen Smith, McIntyre, Duncan, Worth, Weir, Taylor and Stratton and Mayor Duffus.

The appropriations for the general expenses of the Department were first considered. They suffered practically no reduction beyond the figures decided upon at the last meeting of the committe.

Purchase of Uniforms.

It was assumed that the brigade would consist this year of sixteen men and the Chief. The item of uniforms received some attention. It was stated that there are over forty uniforms in the fire hall, moth proof lockers, most of them in good, serviceable condition. Under the customary plan a new uniform is bought annually for each member of the staff, but in view of the needs of economy it was decided that Ald. Dobbin should authorize the purchase of new suits when they are needed. Under this plan the first class men, those of three years years' service or more, will get new suits. There are six of this class of men on the staff, and Chief Howard expects the higher salaries to bring back four other experienced men who have been engaged at other work in the city. Chief Howard said he believed that the outfits for the new men could be obtained from the firehall wardrobe.

Mayor Duffus stated that it was the Council's desire to have the firemen properly dressed. There was no intention of stinting the men. He moved, seconded by Ald. Worth, that the chairman be given power to act in the purchase of new uniforms when required.

Asked as to what became of the old suits, Chief Howard replied that the

HEAVY FINE FOR AMERICAN

Broke Contract With Swedish Firm and is Liable to 119,000 Crowns Fine

MALMOE, Sweden, March 3.—Joseph Westerberg, American Consular Agent here, has been adjudged by the Municipal Court liable for a penalty of 119,000 crowns in a civil action brought by the Forenede Dampskibs-Selskab of Copenhagen to recover double damages under a contract. Mr. Westerberg imported a quantity of American pork last September through the plaintiffs and signed an undertaking not to re-export it to any country at war with Great Britain, and to require a similar undertaking from his agents under penalty of forfeiting twice the value of the pork. The plaintiffs allege breach of the undertaking and the court decided the allegation had been substantiated.

LIEUT. BRITTAIN WILL GIVE AN ADDRESS TO-MORROW

His Subject Will be the "Second Battle of Ypres"— Y. M. C. A. Notes

Lieut. A. E. Brittain will address the Y.M.C.A. meeting on Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. Subject: "The Second Battle of Ypres." This is the second address Lieut. Brittain has favoured the Y.M.C.A. with this year. The largest attendance of the season was reported on Mr. Brittain's last appearance. We trust that another record crowd will be present to hear the Lieutenant on Sunday. It is also expected that John James of the 247th Band will be present to furnish special music on the saxaphone.

The meeting of the Senior Collegiate Club which was to have been held last evening with Mr. Wearing as speaker was postponed one week on account of the entertainment in the Collegiate Hall.

A number of new cues and other billiard equipment have been ordered for our game room which, it is expected, will increase the interest in the social department.

The young men of the gymnasium classes are hard at work preparing for the exhibition to be given the second week in April. This will be one of the greatest events put on by our Physical Department in recent years and should be attended by every friend of the young men.

The friends of the soldiers are requested to send magazines to the Y. M.C.A. previous to March 10th, as a shipment for overseas will be made on that date. These magazines are for general circulation, no packages to individuals being accepted.

MATCHES A GRAVE DANGER TO HOMES

Chief Howard Advises Citizens to Keep Them in Tin Containers

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you permit me to sound a note of warning through the public press in an endeavour to safeguard the homes of our city from a fire danger that is very prevalent at the present time. The Fire Department have been called upon to attend fires in several homes of late, the origin of which is an explosion or ignition of matches. There is a certain match manufactured that is positively dangerous and which has been known to cause explosion of a slight character, and incidently start incipient fires. I am not permitted to give the name of the manufacturer of this particular type of match, because such action on my part, as a city official, would in all probability entangle the Corporation of the City of Peterborough in a lawsuit.

This matter is being dealt with by the Ontario Government, and we hope some action will be taken in the near future to prevent the manufacture of matches that are dangerous. In the meantime, I would advise that every person having matches in their homes or places of business would have them stored in a tin box, as a safeguard from fire.

Your obedient servant,
W. A. HOWARD,
Chief Fire Department.
Peterborough, March 3rd, 1917.

THE HOME GARDEN.

As an indication of the extent to which the home garden idea is taking, may be mentioned the proposal of a citizen. He has a beautiful front lawn in which he takes so much pride that he is a competitor, and winner, too, in the annual lawn competition. He says that he will break up his lawn, leaving a ribbon of award around the plot and plant the middle to early potatoes. When the crop is harvested he will level and seed his lawn, which he can have in beautiful shape for next summer. A spirit like this—a public and patriotic or self-helping spirit like this—should be the spirit of us all. In the case mentioned a sacrifice is made of a beautiful lawn, a prize lawn. Others to follow his example in production, don't have to make any sacrifice—only clean up their back yards and plant them to a crop of useful vegetables, instead of noxious weeds. If this is done generally—if every vacant lot is brought under cultivation, the result will be the production of fresh tasty vegetables worth tens of thousands of dollars.

CAUTION OF COWARDICE?

It seems perfectly useless to speculate upon the possibility or otherwise of the United States entering into war with Germany. President Wilson becomes more enigmatical every day, and "queers" the dictionary to the extent of exercising the lexicographic license of a college professor to read new meanings into words that his distinguished countryman, Noah Webster, did not give. President Wilson put a chip on Uncle Sam's shoulder, labelled "overt act," and dared Germany to knock it off at his peril. The president has not noticed anything like an "overt act" since he issued his ultimatum. What is an "overt act"? Webster's dictionary defines it as "an outward act done in pursuance and manifestation of intent or design—the main interest or design not being punishable without such act." Germany pursuing her submarine campaign contrary to President Wilson's stipulation, sinking unarmed ships without warning, murdering United States citizens in cold blood, and many other trifling pleasantries, would seem to be something that would appeal to the Chief Magistrate of a red-blooded nation of a hundred millions of free men. What more can President Wilson want? Germany has thrown down the gauntlet, and it lies neglected. The citizens of the United States if President Wilson keeps up his "watchful waiting" and armed neutrality, cannot complain if the world of nations come to regard caution and cowardice as synonymous words.

A MANLY COURSE.

Calling the righteous and not sinners to repentance, seems so far to be one effect of the National Service cards. These cards, it will be remembered, divided the population required to sign them into classes. The first class was "unmarried men from 18 to 30 years of age." Ninety-three names of signatories of National Service cards of this class were sent by the Commision to Col. Ackerman, C. O. of the 247th Battalion, as a basis of appeal for recruiting. Col. Ackerman has discovered that the material supplied was not very productive of recruiting results. It was found that most if not all of the ninety and three had either offered for service and been rejected as medically unfit, or were in positions of responsibility where their continued presence was more or less directly in the interests of the country, or were doing their bit in some definite if indirect way. Col. Ackerman took the manly and fair view of the situation that it was not the right thing to do to bring under immediate pressure young men who had manfully signed their cards and sent them in, and had, besides, done their duty by offering for enlistment, or done their part in other ways: especially when there were and are in Peterborough four hundred eligible young men who have not been reached by the National Service Commission. They have not even filled in and signed the cards sent them; and their very evasion of this primary duty relieved them from the form of pressure which the ninety-three had by the signing of the cards expressed a willingness to face.

It would be natural that Colonel Ackerman having exhausted all other possible resources, should feel, as he warrantably might do, that the government and not he should assume the responsibility arising from the circumstances. He has been supplied with names that he cannot expect results from for the reasons stated, and the government has failed to get the names of some four hundred Peterborough young men who have not done their duty, have not even taken the initial steps of signing the service cards, or assumed the slightest risk of interference with, to use the mildest word, their indifference. It is regrettable that the National Service card system has so far as the tabulation has proceeded, not reached the very class it is desirable to reach.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

Daylight saving has a special appeal at a time when there is so much waste, among other things, of daylight—too much tendency to employ or monopolize the hours of darkness in every form of dissipation, harmless, —except its unprofitable nature — and harmful. Putting forward the clock to make the day for work, or the ordinary activities of life longer, has been tried in some places in Canada; but the experiment was, of course, a failure because other parts of the country kept the usual hours, and there was necessarily great confusion. But now, that it is proposed to adopt it generally in the United States and Canada, the objectionable features of different times in different places, affecting movements of trains and clashing of time tables and other conflict, would be removed.

Daylight saving when the bright days of spring, and the sweet serenity of summer, are at hand, has a far greater appeal; and if there are in the summing up no great net results in material gains, there is a biz gain of enjoyment—of the joy of living. Half of the world never sees the better half of the world, the glorious early morning hours of wakening spring and riper summer. Half of us are snoring in our beds, while the cream of the day is rising with the ascending sun and the sparkling dewiness and grateful and refreshing coolness of the morning hours bring elysian conditions. We do not enjoy these things, this paraidse portion of the day. We are so much the slaves of custom and of the clock that we can't break away from old habits except by the force of another custom, which the daylight saving plan generally adopted would create. By rising an hour or so earlier, we should have the most delightful hours of the day in summer, added to our lives. If for no other reason than this, the daylight saving plan is worth while.

WHY?

Sir Robert Borden is in England as Canada's first minister. Hon. J. D. Hazen is with him, as Canada's First Lord of the Admiralty, and Hon. Robert Rogers is with him as Minister of Public Works, though really on suspended sentence as minister of private works, judicially declared hostile to public interests. One can understand why Mr. Hazen was taken with Mr. Borden; as the commander in chief of the Canadian navy his presence may have been regarded as a moral influence—it represents nothing else—in securing a safe passage across the ocean.

But nobody can understand why he took Hon. Bob Rogers with him. Robert represents the seamy side of Canadian politics; he is a political ticket-of-leave man. Sir Robert and Sir. J. D. Hazen represent at least, political respectability—if political incapability—and their personal characteristics are above reproach. Hon. Robert Rogers has neither the quality of political or official respectability to justify parading him as an example of Canadian statesmanship, "wearing the white flower of a blameless life." Hon. Robert Rogers has had an unbrageous career and has compiled a shady record as winner of elections, without regard to the free and independent, uninfluenced, popular exercise of the franchise. He has been declared by a judge of his own appointment—and prejudicially associated with his own political party—of voluntarily increasing the price of a tender for a public work in Manitoba in order that the contractor should be enabled to contribute more largely to Conservative election funds as it was proven he did do. This is a recent offence; yet Sir Robert Borden takes to England as a mentor and adviser, as a personal companion, a man guilty of what a High Court judge, after patient investigation found—Judge Galt declared in four distinct instances, that he could not and did not believe what Hon. Robert Rogers had stated on oath.

What "hold" has Rogers on Borden? He must have some uncanny influence. Of all his trusty colleagues, Hon. Robert Rogers is the one selected to lead the House in his absence—deputy Prime Minister. And now he takes him to England as one of the best representatives of his cabinet. Why does Sir Robert make a pet of Hon. Robert? It is hinted that Hon. Robert Rogers is to be made Canadian High Commissioner—an unbelievable thing, if we did not know of Sir Robert's partiality to his "wicked pardner." Think of Hon. Robert Rogers filling the shoes of such really great and unimpeached, uncondemned and politically and personally pure and stainless men like Sir Charles Tupper and Lord Strathcona, or an honourable Canadian, though born an alien, like Sir George Perley! These are man to be proud of, men a credit to Canada and to the high ideals of character and conduct that would make a Canadian persona grata at the court of St. James. We don't want a Canadian High Commissioner that for political reasons has to be tolerated, instead of welcomed, in a country of the high standards of Great Britain—and in danger any moment of being sent to Coventry.

PRUSSIA'S ENEMIES ARE FIGHTING FOR GERMANY'S POPULAR FREEDOM

An eminent clergyman of London, confesses that at one time in his life he shared with Carlyle, Matthew Arnold and other Englishmen an ardent admiration for Prussia. Events and fuller knowledge have modified that, but for the German people he still retains his warm regard. A Europe without a great and influential German people is inconceivable to him as it must be to most men who give the matter dispassionate thought. But he realizes that the Germany of to-morrow will be enfranchised, liberated, self-governing, and that the Prussian state which has so long disquieted Europe will be shorn of its power.

Twice have the German people made heroic efforts to throw off Prussian rule. In 1848 they tried to deliver themselves alike from Prussian militarism and Austrian imperialism but were crushed. Again in 1866 they tried it, but the Prussian militarists were perfectly organized while the German states were not and were in addition hampered by the dishonest leadership of Austria. Once more the liberty lovers failed and the unification of Germany which followed was really Prussia's conquest and dominance of the German race.

A result of these ineffectual fights for freedom of much importance to the world was that great numbers of the most highly developed Germans forsook their country and carried to other lands, our own included, their passion to be free. In their new homes they showed themselves as tenacious of their rights and as resistant of interference with them as any people of earth. Memories of their birth land or hearthside traditions invest it with glamour naturally enough. But most of them who revisit their ancestral land feel cramped by the governmental system and discover that they are Americans whose heart home is here.

The Germans who did not emigrate were more amenable to discipline, and under Prussian control the empire grew rich and powerful and prospered enormously up to the outbreak of the war. Their material progress reconciled the people to a system of government in which the King of Prussia and the bundesrat or imperial senate under his control have all the political power there is. But this war which is bankrupting the empire has dealt Prussian prestige a heavy blow; and it is now the innermost purpose and the avowed intention of the entente Allies to make it, possible, an end of Prussianism and set the German people free.

The speaker of the British House of Commons is not a member of the government, but is probably the official of the empire who is more than any other in a position to speak for all the people. Great Britain will never negotiate with the present government of Germany, he says, and this is also the temper of the other Allies. They could make peace now if they would for Prussia wants nothing else so much but they are resolved to fight on no matter what the sacrifices, until the German people have a government of their own which keeps its treaties and commands the confidence of the world. For the Germans the Allies have no hatred. A year ago the British soldier had only the one name, "Hun," for the man in the opposing trench. Now he speaks of him kindly as "Fritz" and says "he is not a bad sort." For he has found that the German soldier is usually a gallant fellow and a clean fighter who does under orders of his high commanders such atrocities as he commits.—Rochester Post-Express.

The Ford Is Economical

THE average man can easily afford a Ford car. It is the most inexpensive car to drive.

20 to 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline is an every day occurrence. 33 miles is frequently reported by Ford owners. Yearly repair expenses of less than one dollar are not unusual. The car is light in weight, and tires give more mileage on a Ford than on any other car.

You can buy a Ford for yourself and one for your wife for the price of one car at $1000. You can run both Fords at about the same expense as for one larger, heavier car.

You can always sell a "used" Ford at a good price. You have to accept a big reduction for a "used" larger car.

You need one for business. Your wife and children need one for pleasure and health.

Wearing Rubbers during the Spring Months of Slush and Wet Saves more than their Cost and Protects the Health as well

It is only recently that the high retail prices of most commodities are being felt. The higher cost of living as a result of the war, is now manifesting itself in EVERY walk of life.

Shoe dealers throughout Canada must get more for our rubbers than during the past few years. The cost of production has been steadily increasing and the dealer's expense of doing business is greater.

To-day crude rubber is fully one-third higher than before the war, and doubled freights, abnormal insurance and the war tax have made it more expensive laid down at our factories. Other materials, including cottons, cashmerettes, jersey, linings, dyes and chemicals cost on an average 75% more. Labor, too, is away up, and so scarce that there is difficulty in keeping up a normal production.

The increased prices of our rubbers—small indeed compared with other articles of wearing apparel and of food—have been made imperative by the steadily growing cost of manufacturing.

As the quality and reputation of our brands of rubbers must be maintained at all costs, we have been compelled to advance our prices. So when your dealer asks you a little more, it does not mean that either he or the manufacturer is taking advantage of war time, but rather that both are reluctantly yielding to necessity.

In proportion to the cost of other necessities, the prices of our brands of rubbers are reasonable—and more economical when compared with the far greater increases in shoe prices. The regular use of rubbers saves many times their slightly increased cost, and protects the health as well.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—More than twenty years ago, when a controversy was raging in England as to the Board versus Church School systems of Education, the Rev. F. W. Hamett (a prominent pioneer of Science and Art classes for sons of mechanics who were apprenticed at the age of 14, and, therefore, could only attend evening sessions), sounded a warning against purely secular education, codemning the idea of banishing the Bible study from any Public Schools. At that time German industrial efficiency was making itself felt in Britain, by the increasing competition of German manufacturers, (greatly aided by free trade policy in Britain), as well as in other spheres of life. In May, 1890, I had occasion to visit an organ works in Hanley, Staffordshire, and in the evening Mr. Stringer, the manager, introduced me to the Club, where I remarked the number of Germans quite at home there. To my astonishment I learned that about two hundred young Germans were employed as foreign correspondents in the different firms throughout the whole pottery district.

In the course of a most interesting address Mr. Harnett quoted from a book entitled "The Ring of Amases" edited by Robert Bulwer Lytton, compiled from the papers of a German physician. An 1863 edition was placed in the Peterborough Mechanics Library in 1868, and is to be found in the Public Library at the present time. In view of the awful war now raging owing to the German machinations, the following opinions of a German doctor, in 1860, on British and German schools, are in the highest degree, interesting:

"I have no personal experience of your English public schools; but I have always regarded them as the great reservoirs of the English character. What seems to me the main defect of our German system of Education is that it is too exclusively confined to intellectual development. The motive power of man does not exist in the intellectual, but in the moral qualities. The 'quantula sapientia', that governs mankind has been a subject of continual wonder to the contemplative portion of the human community. But the explanation of this apparent phenomenon is probably to be found in a fact too commoly ignored, and yet hardly to be disputed, viz., that the governing qualities are moral, rather than intellectual. Our lives and our influence upon the lives of others, are much less dependent upon intellectual superiority than is generally supposed. It is a common saying that knowledge is power. Perhaps it would be more generally true to say, power is knowledge. It cannot in any case be asserted that book-learning is power. The chief object of education should not be the accumulation of information, but the formation of character; and I know of no system by which this system of education is so well attained as that of the English Public schools.

"It is not so much acuteness of the dialetic faculty, high culture, or extended range of contemplation, that governs mankind, but rather energy, sympathy, perseverence, conciliation, enthusiasm. And in all the practical affairs of life, even men of the highest intellect must probably rely rather upon the exercise of (what you would call) their second-rate than of their first rate qualities. As regards the education of youth I doubt if there can be any better principle than that embodied in the well-known maxim of the Spartan king; for, after all, it is not of the highest importance that boys should become scholars, but it is of the highest importance that they should become MEN. And this conviction leads me to express an opinion with regard to the theory of government, as having reference to the general education of man, to which opinion I have been brought by a consideration of the principles of representative government as practiced in England. It appears to me that the relative merits of representative, and arbitrary or bureaucratic government are generally discussed (especially on the continent,) within far too narrow a limit. The great question in which the world should be interested is not what is the completest and strongest form of government, but what is the completest and grandest form of a people. No efficiency in the mechanism of an irresponsible government can compensate for the absence of that active power which is only to be found in the public life of a responsible people. The slumsiest motion of a living body is preferable to the best directed gesticulations of a galvanized corpse. The English system of government begins almost at the cradle of an Englishman, and the English system of education continues to his grave. In this, I think, exists the paramount excellence of both. In England, the public school, the household, the vestry room, the bench of magistrates, are seats of self-government; the polling booth, the hustings, the House of Commons, the Press, the Bar, are schools for self-education. In Germany, all this is wanting. Here education stops at the university, and the intellect of the nation is either absorbed into the pedantry of a bureaucracy, or remains in a state of political childhood."

The passage of sixty years since these opinions were published, does not show conditions greatly altered. The German Parliament to-day is stunted, possesses no sovereign power, and the whole system is permeated with brutal Prussianism now so tragically being exemplified on sea and land. At the present hour, Britain is the special obstacle in the way of galvanised German tyrants. Canada has done, and is doing, splendidly, but more and more men are needed. Come forward, young men, to join our brave soldiers in this mighty struggle, and let us not court the curse of Meros, whose men were found wanting in their country's need, and the very site of their city is blotted out.

LILY LAKE RED CROSS IS DOING GOOD WORK

Contributions of the Lily Lake Red Cross Auxiliary which were sent in to the Peterborough Public Library for the month of February, consisted of the following articles: 24 suits of pyjamas, 9 pairs of socks and 42 long-tailed bandages.

The Lily Lake Red Cross has received the following acknowledgment from Private Dorsett in France

Somewhere in France, Jan. 11.

To the Lily Lake Red Cross:

Dear Friends,—Just a few lines to thank you all for your thoughtfulness and kindness for sending me those boxes, which I received in good time for Christmas, and I wish to thank you all very much, for I was sure glad to receive those kind of things over in this country, for we can't get what we like over here, so therefore we are sure glad to get a box from dear old Canada. We are having very bad weather over here at present, but I hope it will soon change. Hoping these few lines will find you all in the best of health, as it leaves me at present. Wishing you all every success in your Red Cross work, I remain,

Yours sincerely.

COST OF TREATING INDIGENT PATIENTS FOR LAST YEAR

Cost of Treating Free Patients at the Local Hospitals Takes a Big Drop

During the past year, forty-four indigent patients were treated at Nicholls Hospital at a total cost to the city of $1,126.

Thirty-four free patients were treated at St. Joseph's Hospital at a cost to the city of $750. The total cost of caring for the indigent patients at both hospitals during the year was $1,888. The previous year it cost the city $3,166 to treat the indigent patients at the two hospitals, or a difference of $1,277 in favour of the city for last year.

"Careful and efficient supervision on the part of Mr. F. W. Miller, whose duty it is to investigate all indigent cases that go to the hospitals," was the reason Ald. Stratton gave for last year's favourable showing.

The above report was made to the Finance Committee by Mr. Miller.

Colds or Cough SHOULD NEVER BE NEGLECTED

If They Are, Some Serious Lung Trouble Are Sure To Follow

A cold or cough, if neglected, will sooner or later develop into some sort of lung trouble, so we would advise that you get rid of it before it becomes settled. For this purpose we know of nothing to equal Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This preparation has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and has always given universal satisfaction.

Mr. Erwell Bolton, Wilton, Ont., writes: "Last winter I was caught in a storm and had to stay in a barn all night. I caught a severe cold which several medicines failed to cure. I went to some of the best doctors but these failed to do me any good. A friend advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I used three bottles and they gave me instant relief."

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get the genuine, put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and bearing the name of The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 35c and 50c.

Stupendous Selling of New Costume Fabrics For Spring

The immediate response to our announcement of the Opening Display of New Costume Fabrics was tremendous. The many who came to look at the new fabrics were immediately converted into buyers. The beautiful, new fabrics were simply irresistible at the low prices we have them marked. Of course the low prices would be impossible under ordinary conditions but then we placed our orders for these goods months and months ago from the best makers in England and it is altogether likely this will be the last shipment of these fabrics we will have to offer for some time to come.

If you have not been to see the exhibit and are in need of the material for a new Costume, Suit, Skirt, Dress, Coat or Waist you should not loss any time to acquaint yourself with these splendid New Fabrics and the prices too, so as to save yourself the annoyance and vexation of not being able to secure such splendid values later on.

Send-Off To Cobourg Battery

The 6th Overseas Draft of the Cobourg Heavy Battery under Lieut. R. E. Davidson, have moved East, followed by the good wishes of the citizens of Cobourg. The Citizens' Band, as usual, turned out to make the outgoing a success.

The following Peterborough boys are included in the draft: Gunners J. Kemp, L. J. Lafferty, W. C. Thornton

The Women's Patriotic Corps kindly supplied the sixth overseas draft with a bountiful supply of fruit, sandwiches, etc., which was much appreciated by the boys who left last week for the east.

Brig.-General Hemming, G.O.C., 3rd Division, with Capt. Kidd, A.D.C., inspected the outgoing overseas draft on Friday last. The General gave the men some good advice in regard to the strenuous work ahead of them, and said that he felt sure they would live up to the splendid record of the men previously sent forward from Cobourg. The men gave the General three hearty cheers at the conclusion of the inspection.

mations of opinion which are shaping themselves and the burning crucible of the war. Many of these movements are going on unseen altogether; many of them are seen and written about and read extensively, and yet are but dimly realised. While we, at this present stage between war and peace, note down the present notice and future investigation some of these transformations.

First of all I take the land question. There was no subject, as your readers well know, of which opinion was so strongly and so passionately divided in the pre-war period. Mr. Lloyd George on the one hand was raising shouts of violent hatred against some of the most prominent figures in the world—of the squirearchy and of the landlords of town properties. While on the other hand the representatives of the squirearchy were pouring upon the head of the loquent tribune all the vials of their wrath and scorn. I never will forget a scene in the House of Commons which though it lasted only about 15 minutes was perhaps one of the most passionate I ever observed. It was the Land question. Man after man from the Tory benches poured hot shot on Mr. Lloyd George, but it was not until he got up to reply and return with hotter shot still that the whole House seemed to lose its head—all, of course, except the Irish members who looked calmly on at the repetition in England of the struggle for the land which they had already successfully carried through. Men literally rocked in their seats grew hoarse with shouts of rage and insult, and language was heard which made one almost imagine that he was in the midst of a row between drunken and eloquent sailors instead of the August House of Commons.

LAND QUESTION

Of course, the Land question in England has always been very much complicated by the fact that Land, as distinct from all other form of property gives a great social and political position as well as a gigantic return.

The House of Lords is mainly a House of land owners. County society, which is considered the best in the land, belongs mainly to the land owners. If a man in the old days who had made a fortune in business and wished to advance in the social scale, bought a large landed estate, and if he did not succeed in entering the highest circle of the county families, his sons and daughters did. Curiously enough, the first break in this great tradition was made by the newspaper. Literally it may be said to-day that the ownership of a newspaper is a far surer guide to power and social distinction in England than any other form of investment. That, however, is by the way.

QUITE HOPELESS

It looked then as if it were quite hopeless to make any real reform in the admittedly bad land system of England, so bound up was the whole question with the deepest political problems and passions. As in the twinkling of an eye, all this has disappeared. The German submarine is the great apostle of this new reformation. The strain on the Empire of the food question has compelled on the attention of everybody the necessity of liberating from idle pleasure grounds or too extensive pasturage all the great spaces of the English soil. Everybody is about seeking or offering even the smallest patch of land for food production. Bits of public parks, golf courses, even the patches by the side of railway lines or railway stations; the Government have taken compulsory powers, and the omnipotence of the old owner of the soil has gone without a murmur. It is clear that the land question will never be the same again.

LINE OF CLEAVAGE.

The main line of cleavage between Socialist proposals and general middle class opinion in England has disappeared in the same miraculous and almost unobserved way. The Socialist ideal of the acquisition and working of most forms of production has already taken shape in the control of railways, of mines and, as has been said, of the land. It is more than doubtful if the railways will ever get back again to the uncontrolled government of their directors and shareholders. The control of the mines will certainly remain, so far as such necessary factors in national defence as smokeless coal is concerned, under the control of the Government.

A further more remarkable change is in the whole attitude of the national England mind towards the relations between Capital and Labour. Even the agricultural labourer, with a wife and a large family and an unhealthy cottage has disappeared in the trenches. There is now talk which would sound strange in any other conditions of a minimum wage for working people, going up to 24 or 25 shillings a week; for the agricultural labourer double what he used to get in pre-war time in some of the most backward counties. Co-partnership is very unpopular with working men, largely because of the feeling, well or ill founded, that it has in many cases been worked for the exploitation of the working people. Whatever the solution may ultimately be, it is quite clear that there will be a far more open ear to the question of a larger share for labour to the combined production of labour and capital to anything which existed in pre-war days.

LEVELLING CONDITIONS.

Finally, on top of all these levelling conditions, is come perhaps the greatest leveller of all, namely, the gigantic taxation which the war has involved. It is clear that capital which has been halted so heavily during the war will continue to be drawn upon freely after the war when the big war bill has to be footed. It looks to me as if after the war England will for ever have ceased to be a country of such wide divergencies of fortune, and the very rich and the very poor will no longer confront each other in the old passionate class hatred of the pre-war period, for there will be fewer very rich and fewer very poor.

LAND REFORMERS

In Ireland there has been similar transformation of feeling. Nationalist writers are recalling the days forty or fifty years ago when the whole tendency of British legislation was to substitute the side stretches of pasture lands with cattle and sheep for the crowding cottages full of men and women tilling small patches. The land reformers have of course made the old eviction system impossible, and the roofless house which was so conspicuous a feature of the Irish landscape is disappearing; but the large grazing tracks, familiarly called in Irish political vernacular, the ranches, still largely persist. For years an agitation has been carried on for the purpose of breaking up these ranches and distributing them amongst the small peasant proprietors. The agitation, however, had comparatively small success, as the grazing interest is powerful both in Ireland and England. Now comes the war to utter the final word, and the Government itself is lending its countenance to the break-up of the pasture into tillage lands. What a reflection on the statesmanship of the past that it has to be reversed when five millions have disappeared from the Irish soil, the valour of whose men and the labour of whose men and women have become to-day so crying a necessity of the British Empire in its hour of deadliest peril.

How You May Reduce Your Weight

Overfatness is a very unwelcome condition, especially in the present day when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you should happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, do not try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orthine in capsule form, and take one with each meal.

Oil of orthine increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fat in tissues, in many cases at nearly the rate of one pound a day. Be sure to get oil of orthine in capsule form. It is sold only in the original sealed packages. Any good druggist can supply it or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00, by money order, or registered letter. Goods will be sent in plain wrapper. Address E. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1000, Montreal, Canada.

No Convention Expenses.

The item of $200 covering the convention expenses of the Chief and Chairman of the Committee drew a short discussion.

Ald. Duncan said he favoured the idea of conventions but this year was an exceptional one. He moved that this item be struck out of the appropriations. Ald. Stratton seconded the motion.

The vote was as follows: Ayes—Aldermen Stratton, Duncan, Weir and Mayor Duffus; nays—Aldermen Taylor, Smith, Worth and McIntyre.

The tie vote being presented to Ald Dobbin, he settled the question by remarking that he would vote against the appropriation and the motion carried.

Continue Fire Alarm Boxes.

The item for new fire alarm boxes was also cut out, but Mayor Duffus urged that at least one new box be installed this year. If the extension of the fire alarm system were discontinued for one year it might create a precedent that would be followed next year. A new box will be installed costing $126.

Appropriation $19,000.

When the committee had applied a ten per cent. increase to the salaries for a total of over $15,000 and had added to that sum the approximately $3,400 for the upkeep of the fire hall it was manifest that the total appropriation for the Department would be about $19,000.

"Where are the opinions that we could get along on $15,000," asked the Mayor, and Ald. Weir, chairman of the Board of Works, remarked that he should have held his meeting before Ald. Dobbin's committee.

Mayor Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. Smith that the appropriations for the Fire Department be $19,000. The motion was carried unanimously.

Ald. Duncan—Men have got to get decent wages to live these days.

Ald. Smith—We're paying common deck hands $2.75 a day and can't get them at that.

Increases Granted.

Ald. Worth moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that the wages of the firemen be as follows:

1st class men—$900 a year.
2nd class men—$800 a year.
3rd class men—$700 a year.

This motion carried without a question. The discussion had been previously completed. The Chief's increase was included in the motion.

At Chief Howard's suggestion, Mayor Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that the third class schedule be suspended until further notice. The motion carried. This means that until the Council feels that conditions warrant a change, the firemen will be regarded as first and second class men as an additional inducement for desirable men to join the brigade.

Thus a new man receives second class pay unless he is one of the experienced men Chief Howard hopes to bring back to the firehall.

Ald. Worth remarked that the man who used to earn $9 a week is now receiving $15.

Finance Minister Stratton merely observed that he wondered where the money was to come from.

Reward For Efficiency.

In his inaugural address this year Mayor Duffus suggested the system at the fire hall of giving the men badges and extra pay for efficiency and long service. He moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre that a fireman with eight years' continuous service receive the badge and ten cents a day thereafter, and for fifteen years' continuous service an additional ten cents. The motion carried unanimously. It was pointed out that if future Councils desire to further reward these men for longer service they would be free to do so.

Long Service Men.

Chief Howard's report indicated the men who will shortly qualify for this reward. Their names are given with the dates on which they joined the brigade:

G. B. Jamieson—April 14, 1910.
Jas. Ward—March 16, 1911.
Albert Tennyson—June 24, 1911.
Archie Macdonald—Aug. 10, 1911.
Herb. Johnston—June 6, 1911.
Herb. Meahan—Aug. 13, 1913.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns soft corns or any kind of corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.

TEETHING TIME A TIME OF WORRY

When baby is teething is a time of worry to most mothers. Baby's little gums become swollen and tender; he becomes cross; does not sleep well; is greatly troubled with constipation; colic or diarrhoea and sometimes even convulsions seize him. During this period nothing can equal the use of Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach and make the teething so easy that the mother scarcely realizes baby is getting his teeth. Concerning the Tablets Mrs. Arthur Archibald, New Town, N. S., writes: "I used Baby's Own Tablets when baby was getting his teeth and I found them an excellent medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Government Breach Of Faith Charged By Organized Labour

The news given by Major Campbell and Lt.-Col. Ackerman this week with regard to recruiting measures for the 247th Battalion is the hardest slap organized labour has had for years from the Government, and that is saying a great deal. The Government, through Sir Robert Borden, gave its pledge that the National Registration cards would not be used for military purposes. Labour was not satisfied with the spoken pledge —they have had so many!—and demanded it in writing. This Sir Robert Borden ultimately acceded to and forwarded the letter to the Dominion Trades Congress. Now it seems as if it was only another "scrap of paper."

It makes no difference whether the information that was forwarded to Lt.-Col. Ackerman respecting local men was of any use to him or not, or whether he had the information beforehand from another source. The fact remains that the Government is taking from the Registration cards information for military purposes, and using this information, if not for conscription, at any rate in an endeavour to coerce men into joining the ranks. This is a plain, distinct violation of the pledge given to the Dominion Trades Congress of Canada.

If the pledge had not been given by the Government, organized labour throughout the Dominion would have refused to sign the cards, but with the pledge given, the Trades Congress advised every union man to sign his card, and used its best endeavours to help the government.

Is Sir Robert Borden cognizant of what is being done, or is it being done behind his back? — Official Scribe, Trades and Labour Council.

LOCAL EMPLOYERS ARE ASKED FOR INFORMATION

R. B. Bennett M.P., Director-General Sends Forms to be Filled in Regarding Both Sexes—Is an After War Affair

Local employers of labor have received from Mr. R. B. Bennett, M.P., blank forms to be filled out for the purposes of the new activity of the National Service Board described as an "occupational survey."

As in the case of the National Service cards distributed at the first of the year, there is little or no mention of recruiting or of military service of any kind.

It is stated that the enquiry is being made for national services only, and is specially designed, not merely for present day problems, but also for after the war problems.

Enthusiasts who think winning the war is the first job requiring attention may be disappointed, not only in the avowed purpose of the enquiry, but in the list of questions themselves. Two forms are sent out, one for male employes and one for women employes.

QUESTIONS TO MALE EMPLOYES

Here are the fourteen questions asked, in connection with male employes:

1. Classify in detail occupation of your male employes, including office staff.
2. Number of each class employed? (a) Before the war? (b) Now?
3. How many workers of each class could you now employ?
4. How long would such employment last?
5. Your closest estimate of number of workers required in each class within six months after end of war
6. What classes are skilled, semi-skilled or unskilled? (Please write the proper word in each case.)
7. Present average weekly wage or earning of workers? (each class.)
8. Would the following physical defects interfere with employment in your establishment? (Yes or no.)
   Loss of one leg?
   Loss of one arm?
   Loss of one eye?
   Defective hearing?
9. State number of workers temporarily laid off in normal year? (state for each class.)
   How many?
   In what month?
   How many weeks in each month?
10. Number of women workers now employed in each class where men were employed before the war?
11. Do you expect to substitute returned soldiers for present woman workers after the war? If so, how many in each class?
12. How many employes in each class have enlisted since the war began?
13. Number of men workers whose places might be taken by women if necessary or desirable? Each class?
14. Would you now advance all or part of railway fares to prospective workers?

(Please answer—no, all, or part.)

QUESTIONS FOR WOMEN EMPLOYES

On the form for women employes, questions 8, 10, 11 and 12 are omitted. Every employer, public or private, with the exception of the smaller retailers, brokers, professions, and farmers, will be asked to make this return. Other means will be taken to deal with the farmers.

Evidence that the National Service Board is directing its attention chiefly to after the war problems, is contained in the memorandum of instructions printed on the back of the blank forms. In this, it is stated that question five, which asks for an estimate of number of workers required within six months after the end of the war, is perhaps, the most important question asked, and employers are invited to give it the most careful attention. The problem of demobilisation is also being grappled with before the war is won, by question 11. It is stated that this question is asked purely for statistical purposes.

Accompanying the forms is an article entitled National Organisation for War, by Stephen Leacock, reprinted for the National Service Board of Canada.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE CONCERT WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Mr. J. H. Burnham M.P., Presented the Institute With a Number of Souvenirs

The Collegiate Assembly Hall was crowded last night for the concert given in aid of the memorial photograph fun, by the pupils.

Mr. J. Crane, chairman of the evening, in the absence of Mr. Eastwood, said that it was the pupils' idea to assist in placing photographs of those of the twenty-seven ex-pupils who have made the supreme sacrifice, whose familes were for some reason unable to do so, and that they have taken this way of raising the necessary funds. Three photographs of students who have been decorated, will also be added by the families of the heroes.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., spoke of the great and solemn honour it was to all to be present and assist in placing memorials to those whose memory will never fade. He took the occasion to present to the Collegiate two souvenirs he has carried since his visit to the trenches—a portion of the walls from the ramparts of Ypres, and a cartridge picked up near a trench mortar in the foremost lines at Vimy.

The main feature of the evening, a farce "An Obstinate Family," was very cleverly presented, and showed great talent in those taking part. The "Camp Fire Scene," an original idea of the boys, with its realistic scenery, funny stories, and catchy songs, was also very enjoyable.

Miss Dorothy Allan, whose beautiful voice is always an acquisition to a concert, rendered a most enjoyable vocal selection, and Dr. Park, with a violin selection, also added to the success of the evening.

Internal Bathing's Rapid Growth

It is but natural to expect that a relief from Constipation and the many ills which it causes, which is so effectual and so natural as Internal Bathing, should quickly make many converts.

But its general use has increased so tremendously in the past few years as to suggest other reasons, and these are found in the statement of users that they feel as if "made over" the morning after an Internal Bath.

The elimination of the pernicious ad poisonous waste which is ever present in the Lower Intestine gives Nature a chance to work unhampered. And one rises in the morning clear headed, able, bright, confident and eager for the day's duties.

Mr. F. E. Smith writes:

"Dear Doctor,—Your Cascade' made a new man of me at the age of 49. I persuaded my wife to use the treatment also, and to-day she has better health than ever before. Since the use of the 'Cascade' she sleeps better and can walk for hours without fatigue. Fainting spells have become a condition of the past: can eat anything on the bill of fare and drink all beverages. Does not take cold when exposed: hot weather does not cause oppression."

The "J.B.L. Cascade," the most efficient device for Internal Bathing, is fully known and explained in detail by the Warne Drug Company, Peterborough. Ask for free booklet, "Why Man of To-day Is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient." If you prefer, write to Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell, 163 College Street, Toronto, for same.

The Funeral of the Late Mrs. John Hodge, Otonabee

The funeral of the late Mrs. John Hodge took place from the family residence, East River Road, Otonabee, this afternoon (Saturday, March 3rd, 1917), at 2 o'clock, and the high respect and esteem in which she was deservedly held, was testified to by the large attendance, which included many from her native township, the township of Clarke, where she was born 65 years ago. She was a daughter of the late John Cooper. Forty years ago she was united in marriage with Mr. John Hodge. They resided in Clarke township till February 1906, when they removed to North Monaghan, on the boundary west of Jackson Park, and five years ago removed to their present residence, Lot 25, Con. 14, Otonabee.

Mrs. Hodge has been in delicate health the past two years, but about two months ago her condition became more serious and ended in her death on Thursday, March 1st.

The late Mrs. Hodge was a most estimable lady in every relation of life, an industrious and thrifty home maker. Endowed with a loving disposition, she was noted for her neighbourly kindness, which found expression as often as opportunity offered, or health permitted. She will long be held in tender and loving memory by many in the several places she has resided.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a faithful and affectionate wife and loving mother, her husband and one daughter, Miss Alda Hodge. She is also survived by three brothers and four sisters, all living in Clarke township, except Mrs. Hancock, 345 Dublin street, city. Mrs. Hodge was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and the services at her funeral to-day were conducted at the house by her pastor, Rev. Robert Pogue, interment taking place in Little Lake cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs W. M. Thackeray and Robert H. Carr, Peterborough; Ernest Devell and Wm. Reid, Otonabee; Mr. Clifford Hancock and Mr. Fallis.

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong---According to Dr. Lewis

Guaranteed to Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent. In One Week's Time in Many Instances

A FREE PRESCRIPTION YOU CAN HAVE FILLED AND USE AT HOME.

Philadelphia, Pa. Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription, and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not use to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they would feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the flattering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses now can discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and the expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefitted by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little bit it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or minor glasses. I can highly recommend it in cases of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision, or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent. in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by the Warne Drug Co., and other druggists.

Miss Jean Harstone on The Firing Line in France

Has Full Charge as Chauffeur, Conductor and First Aid of a Field Motor Ambulance

Mr. Robert Harstone, this morning received a cable from his daughter, Miss Jean Harstone, stating that she was leaving London to-day for France where she will be engaged in most important work. Miss Harstone, "Canadian Overseas," whose piquant and readable letters have been appearing in The Examiner for about a year, has taken and completed a special course in first aid work and motor ambulance management, and in France her post will be close to the danger zone. She will have full charge of a motor ambulance, both of its mechanical management and its work in conveying wounded soldiers from the field to the dressing stations, and it seems that there will be a spice of danger which will appeal to her strong nature; and those in Peterborough who have the good fortune to know Miss Harstone are sure that she will discharge her thrilling duties with all her well-known capability of character.

In a letter to her parent written a fortnight ago, she details much of the life and activities in London interesting to Canadians. To take one interesting paragraph:

Yesterday I was at a nice function. Lady Byng and her friend, Lady Greville, are giving a series of entertainments for Canadian officers and their wives, and they asked me to assist in the arrangements. Of course their staff of servants do the rest. It was in Lady Greville's home which is simply gorgeous—vistas if rooms packed with treasures. * * * They had tea and music in the ball room after. They had Hiwaiian singers, so the music was lovely. In the midst of it Queen Mary came in and was most affable and pleasant. At court functions they say she is more unbending; but she likes these soldier affairs. She went all over shaking hands and talking to everyone. I was the only female in uniform, so she questioned me about my work and about my past and present, so I made it as lurid as I could for her. She is a very large woman—in height, breadth and circumference. I had always seen her sitting, so I was quite surprised. I saw heaps of Canadians, and one family in particular amused me. * * * * They have lived in London for years and have cast off all Canadian connections—but it is amusing to see how anxious they are to be known as Canadians now. Mrs. Cassels and I yesterday morning went to St. Pauls * * * and right nert to us were Mr. and Mrs. Asquith, so I had a good look at them. It is so strange meeting and seeing all these people who hitherto have only been figures in history to me.

Last Night Saw City Fathers in Good Form

It's a long moon since the City Father appeared to better advantage than last night when the Fire, Water and Light Committee drew up its estimates for the present year. At the conclusion of the meeting Alderman Dobbin, chairman, thanked the members for the manner in which they had considered and dealt with business before them. And citizens disposed to criticizing the methods of their representatives would have found little or no ground for complaint last night. There was a stray quip or two, but they were mere passing pleasantries.

The pruning knife was tightly sheathed, nor was it once mentioned. The uses of adversity have not been overlooked by the Council. December 11, 1916, will not soon be forgotten, and there may have been the additional influence of pointed but kindly observations at the recent dinners. The cost of mere existing these days also moved the Committee who are fully aware of the fact that labour holds the whip valor has fashioned. Whatever the causes it is a pleasure to refer to meetings such as last night's characterized by a close attention to detail, an appreciation of real values, and a desire to improve the Fire Department without extravagance and without extreme economy. Harmony and unity of purpose with a deep sense of duty carried the Committee through an evening that should be productive of good results in Chief Howard's department.

Believes She Was Saved From Stroke of Paralysis

All One Side Was Cold and Powerless, when She Began Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

A dead nerve cell can never be replaced. In this way it is different to other cells of the human body. But feeble, wasted nerve cells may be restored, and herein lies hope.

In this fact is also a warning to take note of such symptoms as sleeplessness and loss of energy and ambition, and restore the vitality to the nervous system before some form of helplessness results.

Nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis are the natural results of neglecting to keep the nerves in healthful condition. The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when you suspect there is something wrong, will soon restore vitality to the nervous system, and thereby prevent serious developments.

Mrs. Merrit Nichols, R. R. No. 3, Dundalk, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing to tell you the great benefit I have derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was so nervous I could not sleep, and found it hard to get my work done at all, but, having no help at the time, had to do the best I could. Finally my left arm became powerless and cold, and this continued to get worse until my whole side was affected, head and all. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the first box helped me so much that I used several, and believe that this treatment saved me from having a paralytic stroke. It has built me up wonderfully, and I can recommend it most heartily, believing that if more Nerve Food were used there would be much less sickness."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures in nature's way by nourishing the feeble, wasted nerves back to health and vigour. Fifty cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Other Departments Were Not Consulted

Another Issue in the Matter of Changing the City's Bank Account

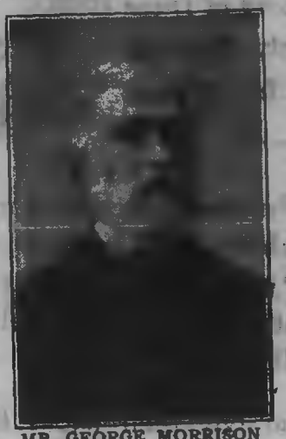
The Finance committee of the City Council has decided to invite the Utilities Commission, the City Trust Commission and the Board of Education to join with the city in transferring their bank accounts from the Bank of Montreal to the Bank of Toronto. The matter was brought up at yesterday's meeting of the Finance committee. Ald. McIntyre who was a factor in the "turn-over" uttered a few platitudes about co-operation and the desirability of the other municipal bodies following in the footsteps of the Council. Ald. Stratton gave a dissertation concerning the Council and its position as "the representative body of the city." He failed to see why the other bodies should not follow suit.

Mayor Duffus moved that the whole matter be considered. The Mayor did not see why the other departments of the city should be asked to change their bank account when they were not consulted when the change was first proposed.

It was finally decided to address a "letter of request" to each of the bodies and ask them to transfer their account to the Bank of Toronto.

Potatoes Sold At 70c On Market To-Day

Saskatchewan potatoes were sold on the market this morning at $3.60 a bag. Farmers from nearby townships apparently have some surplus of seed potatoes. One lot offered this morning was at 70 cents a peck. As soon as the weather moderates and the danger of freezing passes there will likely be some supplies offered. The potatoes sold this morning were either for table or seed uses as the consumer desired.



MR. GEORGE MORRISON

Mr. George Morrison, 281 Park street, will in the near future celebrate another birthday which will bring him close to being an octogenarian.

Mr. Morrison, who was born in Cavan Township, has lived about Peterborough county for the past ninety-six years, and has many interesting memories of the early settlers. He can tell interesting anecdotes about most of the industries about here, and how they started. He saw the first printing press that ever came to Peterborough unloaded from a boat which brought it up from Port Hope. Although nearing the hundred mark he still goes about and is a familiar figure on the street. He takes an active interest in the current events, and follows the news of the day through the press ardently. He resides at the home of his only son, Mr. John Morrison.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

247th Overwhelmed In Last Period of Hamilton Game

Lost by 8-1 and Eliminated From Round by 11 to 10 -Defense Stood Off Continuous Attack Until Break Came—Winning Goal Scored With Only Few Seconds to Play

DISORGANIZED WITHOUT ARMSTRONG

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

HAMILTON, March 3.— With Bobby Armstrong, their star centre man and chief goal getter, watching the game from the penalty box, the 247th Battalion team were eliminated from the O.H.A. race here last night. The score was 8 to 1 in favour of Hamilton, the red and white team scoring the winning goal with only twenty seconds left to play, and winning the round by 11 to 10. It was a huge surprise to the Peterborough team, but the Hamilton victory was not a fluke—it was well earned and decisive and the better team won. The Hams had ten shots to the Petes' one and outplayed them all the way, although, thanks to sensational goal-minding by Legros and clever defence work by Pat Flanagan and Halpin the Soldiers held the homesters to a 1-1 tie in the first period and to a 3 to 1 score at the end of the second. It looked until well on into the third session that the 247th would be able to stave off the fast coming Tigers and hold their lead. Then the break came and Bobby Parkers crew rammed in four goals in eight minutes, leaving the score on the round tied with six minutes to go. The Petes rallied again and held them off until the timers were about to ring the final gong, when Murray grabbed the puck away from Evans near the Soldiers' nets and scooped it past Legros for the goal that won the round, just as the two teams were figuring their chance in a play-off in Toronto. It was a heart-breaking finish for the Petes and a great game for the Hams to win, and naturally the big crowd went wild with delight as the homesters piled up the goals.

Armstrong Greatly Missed.

Without detracting anything from the work of the other players, or from the class shown by the Hamilton team, it is only fair to say that the absence of Bob Armstrong was responsible for the loss of the round. When Hall, of Oshawa, chopped the big fellow down in the game at Peterborough week before last, he did not stop the Petes from winning that battle, but he did make it possible for them to lose the semi-final. His injured shoulder made it impossible for him to get into last night's game, and the team seemed lost without him. There was no punch to the forward line, who were outplayed all the way, and it was just a question of whether the defence would be able to stand off the fierce assault of the Hams. For over two periods it looked as if they might get away with it, but the middle of the last session saw the cave-in, and Peterborough's championship aspirations were extinguished all together in the last five seconds of the game.

Hamilton played much better hockey than in Peterborough. They had a barrel of speed and kept tearing in all night, while in the third period they were like wild men as soon as they saw they had a chance on the round. Reise and Parker rushed repeatedly, and both were dangerous when they broke away. In fact the defence pair started the scoring. On the forward line everybody was good, with Reid and Coir, especially, showing. The latter did most of the goal getting and was a bear cat in the last period. Sloan did not have much to do, but he made several pretty stops of close-in shots.

Legros was the Peterborough star—there was no question of that. The Hams rained shots on him all night and he made save after save in beautiful fashion. His work was phenomenal all the way, and kept the Petes in the hunt in the first two periods. Halpin and Pat Flangan did good work on the defence. On the forward line Al Flanagan played his best game of the season and Harry Thornton, although handicapped by his sprained wrist, worked his head off. Neither Adams or Evans got going in their usual style, although they tried hard and were all in at the finish.

Jerry Laflamme handled the game and had a busy evening.

The teams:

Hamilton		247th
Sloane	Goal	Legros
Parker	R. Defence	P. Flanagan
Reise	L. Defence	Halpin
Coir	Rover	Thornton
Reid	Centre	Evans
Boyd	R. Wing	Adams
Murray	L. Wing	A. Flanagan

Hamilton pressed from the start and Legros made five or six saves of dead-on shots from outside the defence in the first few minutes. The Petes only occasionally got away. Al Flanagan almost scored on one of those occasions, but Sloane made a beautiful stop. Halpin and Coir mixed it and were benched but there was nothing doing in the scoring line when they were off. Legros saved three times in quick succession on shots from scrimmages. Coir was hurt and there was a delay until he resumed. Hamilton were having seventy-five per cent. of the play, but the Petes' defence was holding them out pretty well, and Legros was nailing everything. A Flanagan drew a penalty. Thornton rushed and shot dead on, but Sloane saved cleverly and also nailed the rebound. Finally after fifteen minutes playing, Reise came down alone and shot from outside the defence, his shot catching the top corner of the nets for the first goal.

Halpin and Adams broke inside on a neat combination play, but Sloane came out and mussed up Halpin's shot. Another combination rush carried the play again into Hamilton's territory, and Adams passed out to Al. Flanagan, who scored Peterborough's only counter of the night. The figures remained at 1-1 until the end of the period. Coir and Reid of the Hams drew penalties just before the close of the session.

A disputed goal was the first feature of the second period. After three minutes' play Parker came down and shot from outside the defence. Legros deflected it around the post. The Hamilton umpire raised his hand and the goal was allowed, and the umpire was removed. Murray and Halpin got into a fistic combat which threatened to develop into a free-for-all, and were benched, Murray for six minutes and Halpin for four. Reid scored for Hamilton on a nice play after a rush by Parker and the score was 3 to 1. A little later the new Hamilton goal judge tried to present the Ham with another counter, but Laflamme saw the play and informed the Hamilton management that they would have to dig up another official. There was no further scoring in the period. P. Flanagan, Adams, Coir, and Evans all were penalized, but the score remained unchanged.

Play was fairly even at the beginning of the third period until Coir scored for Hamilton after six minutes' play. Then the Mountaineers came like crazy men and were all over the Petes. A. Flanagan and Thornton drew penalties in quick succession for tripping and Hamilton scored two goals while the two were off, Coir getting both of them. Then Murray got another.

That tied up the round and the next few minutes saw the Petes battling with their backs to the wall, trying to avert defeat. It looked as if a tie was certain, but Coir scored the winning goal just at the finish. The summary:

1st period—
1. Hamilton, Reise, 15 mins.
2. Peterborough, A. Flanagan, 1.45 mins.

2nd period—
3. Hamilton, Parker, 3 mins.
4. Hamilton, Reid, 4 mins.

Facial Effect of Dewart's Nickel Revelations

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, March 3.—An artist a searcher for types of facial expression, should have been in the legislature, while H. H. Dewart was making his revelations in regard to the recent sale of nickel bearing lands to employees of the International Nickel Company through its subsidiary organization, the Canada Copper Company. It was the worst twenty minutes that the government supporters have had for some time, and the consternation on their faces would have been ludicrous if it had not been, for them, so serious.

Here was a case of a Minister who had declared as late as January 4th, 1917, that "not one acre of nickel bearing land has been granted by this government." Then, last week, when Mr. Dewart showed that nickel bearing land had been sold, that Minister, Mr. Ferguson, had said it had been given to a private prospector. Now it turns out that this "private prospector" was an employee of the International Nickel Company, and that another employee also had been given nickel bearing lands.

Hon. I. B. Lucas is still boyish looking enough to show his feelings and, do what he would, he was unable to hide his discomforture under Dewart's attack of the government. The Hon. T. W. McGarry had begun to take notes when Dewart spoke but so serious did the charges become that McGarry forgot even to take notes of them. Hilliard of Dundas had a most childish look on his face as if it was utterly incredible that such a thing should have happened to what he evidently considered a respectable government. Mason of North Victoria, never a very cheery looking gentleman, gave himself over utterly to woebegone dejection. Even George Gooderham broke all precedents by raising his eyes from his newspaper and looking at Dewart. As for the Conservative whip, Charlie McEwen, he looked as if all joy had gone out of his life.

These nickel revelations came on the very day that Z. Mageau, Liberal member for Sturgeon Falls, had exposed the improper expenditure of public money in Northern Ontario for political purposes, and the members of the Government looked like men who felt that the shadow of Manitoba, British Columbia and New Brunswick was fast gathering about them.

Indian Princess and Marquis In Romance of the War Zone

The House of Orleans, last of the Bourbons of France, has sent its greetings to Chief Lo-wan-a-ga, last of the Shoshones' most illustrious line, with the invitation that Lo-wan-a-ga fold his teepee on the reserve and come to the wedding of their youngest scion, the Marquis Emile de Fleury, to a beautiful Indian princess who was wooed and won in the first receiving hospital behind the lines at Verdun.

Chief Lo-wan-a-ga has sent his compliments to the haughty House of Orleans, and has accepted the invitation because the Indian princess is Ma-kata-me, his daughter and Lo-wan-a-ga wants to see what manner of foreign paleface is to be honoured by mating with a daughter of the Shoshones.

Meantime there is much festivity in the reservation of the Shoshones, across the mesa from the little town of Fallon, in Nevada. The princess has returned to visit her people, after many years of absence, and, though she came in the laces and dainty frills of the women of cities, she has put on her leggins and buckskin again and sits cross-legged at the door of Lo-wan alga's little cottage while he relates to the young braves of the tribe the strange things his daughter tells him of the wars in other lands.

"And somewhere in France," some where close to Verdun, the Marquis de Fleury, son of the distinguished scientist, Maurice de Fleury, and relative of the Duc de Orleans, wishes for Frances that the war may end as quickly as possible, and wishes again for himself that the war were over already that he might speed the day on which the princess is to keep the promise made him in the field hospital.

Which is, perhaps, the strangest of all the romances born in the war zone.

REAL BEER WAS TOO MUCH FOR THE AUDIENCE

An illumniting illustration of the shortage in Vienna and of the temperament of the people is given by the "Neues Wiener Journal," which records how the sight of real Pilsener provoked a fierce riot in a theatre:

Rage at seeing an actor on the stage consuming the beloved Pilsener beer, which by its scarcity and high price, is practically unobtainable by the masses of the people, provoked a riot in a Vienna theatre.

The play was Courteline's "Boubouroche," in one act, of which the hero orders "two Pilseners" from the waiter in the tavern in which the scene is laid. The audience were under the impression that no beer would be forthcoming and that coloured water would be supplied instead. To their anger and dismay the waiter duly served two glasses of undoubtedly genuine beer, and these were followed by two more.

When the fortunate stage hero stepped forward, and after holding up the beer to the light and, smiling at the audience, drained glass after glass with evident gust, the exasperation of the people broke all bounds. Amid discordant shouts of abuse, half a dozen men rushed from their seats and clambered to the stage, kicking and otherwise injuring in their passage the conductor of the orchestra and two other musicians.

The offending actor made his escape behind the scenes. Thither the avengers followed, and not finding the man they sought, wreaked their spite on other unfortunate members of the company, whom they attacked in their dressing-room, kicking them into unconsciousness.

Meanwhile, the commotion in the body of the theatre grew indescribable. Men came to blows, women shrieked, and in the course of the tumult two rows of seats collapsed, the backs and legs of the chairs being subsequently used as missiles by the occupants. When, after twenty minutes of fearful din and uproar, four armed policemen entered the house, three seriously injured men lay groaning on the floor and another dozen or more showed the effects of the fray on their bloodstained faces, while two women and a lad were removed in an unconscious state from the wrecked pit.

Aldermen May Decide To Cut Out Street Oil

There is a rumour that some of the aldermen are opposed to expending $6,000 on street oil this year. The item is a large one and many citizens feel that if some streets cannot be oiled, although their resident ratepayers pay their share for the oil the city buys, why not dispense with the entire plan this year. The Board of Works have $6,000 for oil in their estimates, but this is one item the aldermanic pruning knife is said to threaten.

RED CROSS APPEAL

The Red Cross Society, through the Canadian War Contingent Association, is making repeated earnest appeals for socks to be sent to the men in the trenches. It will be only through continued and unceasing work on the part of the knitters that the demand can be met, and the local society accordingly urges all its workers to make an extra effort to add to the sock supply. During the past week the knitting machines in the Red Cross work rooms have been kept busy, with the result that there are now 75 pair of socks to be toed off. The society asks that all ladies who are good darners, will meet Tuesday, March 6th at 2.30 p.m. in the Red Cross rooms, to do this work.

Conditions In Germany

PARIS, March 3. — An American Consul, who returned with ex-Ambassador Gerard from Germany, gave me to-day several interesting details on the situation there. According to my informant a military victory is absolutely necessary to end the war, for since the Allies' reply to Germany's peace offer the German nation is determined to fight to a finish. Before then opinion was somewhat divided as to the best method of ending the war, but now there seems no choice left but to fight.

As to what may happen after the war my informant does not believe a revolution likely, although he thinks a change in government very probable, for the people are more and more convinced that a parliamentary regime must displace the present autocratic rule. One reason for the general confidence in Hindenburg is the confidence that he will not sacrifice men in such wholesale manner as his predecessor, Falkenhayn.

Regarding the internal situation, the reports of food riots, the Consul said, were exaggerated. There were several cases of the populace sacking shops where stores were known to be withheld in order to realize high prices. The police, however, invariably sided with the populace, forcing the shopkeepers to sell and often arresting the latter when they refused.

German efficiency is greatly overrated, the Consul said. An example of this was the truck garden census, which was a farce, as farmers declared whatever they wished. When the result was known there was a panic. The slaughter of 600,000 swine, was promptly ordered, as it was feared it would be impossible to feed them. Only when most had been killed was the truth known. No doubt the Germans still have reserves in provisions.

The Belgian deportations, the Consul said, certainly are the greatest horror of the war, and when the real reason for the deportations is known (which so far is not the case) the whole world will shudder with horror.

PRAISE FOR LOCAL RED CROSS SOCIETY

A recent letter received by Miss Davidson, convenor of the Packing committee, from the "Head Office" of the Canadian Red Cross Society, Toronto, contains the following, "We are so very glad to hear of the whirlwind sewing campaign: Our manager says that everything from Peterborough is always so beautifully sent in and so satisfactory that you cannot be given too high praise. Thank you so much for your additional efforts. We have been hearing a good deal lately of the falling off in work and so to have extra large shipments is a great encouragement to our workers, as well as being a help to the cause itself."

IF KIDNEYS FEEL LIKE LEAD OR YOUR BACK HURTS TAKE SALTS

WE EAT TOO MUCH MEAT WHICH CLOGS KIDNEYS AND THEY NEED A FLUSHING OCCASIONALLY.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores, so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and the poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralise the acids in the urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

KANSAS FARMER WAS CONVERTED BY THE FACTS

The Kansas City Star says:

A western farmer drove into town the other day to get an old-fashioned article—a buggy—and the salesman at the implement store showed him one at $60.

"Talk about the high cost of living," the farmer grumbled. "I can remember that my father bought a buggy exactly like that for $60 twenty years ago."

The salesman remembered the sale too, and he responded quickly:

"Your father turned in 300 bushels of corn to pay for it. Now, I'll do better by you than I did by your father. You bring in your 600 bushels of corn and I'll let you pick out this buggy."

And the salesman wrote down:

One $90 buggy.
One $50 wagon.
One $20 suit of clothes.
One $20 dress.
One $5 baby dress.
One $5 crib.
One $3 box of cigars.
$2 worth of sugar.
$1.50 worth of coffee.
$1 worth of tea.
$40 worth of gasoline.
$2.50 worth of lubricating oil.

The total figured $240, the value of the 300 bushels of corn it had taken to buy a $90 buggy twenty years before. The farmer climbed back into his motor car.

"I guess I haven't got any kick coming on the high cost of living," he said. "Send out that $60 buggy."

Canadian Soldier Escapes From German Prison Camp

Private E. S. Lovell Saw Eleven Men Die in Detention Camp —Lovell and Others Travelled by Night, and Made Good Their Escape.

STORY OF LOVELL'S ESCAPE

After nearly two years' confinemen in German prison camps, Pte. E. S. Lovell of the 3rd Battalion, has escaped to England. Pte. Lovell was employed on the farm of Mrs. John Stewart of Eglinton, prior to his enlistment, and his letter to her, written on his arrival at St. Leonord's-on-Sea, where he is shortly to be married, depicts in striking manner the lot of allied prisoners in Germany. Mrs. Stewart's son, Howard, has been killed in action.

After his capture Pte. Lovell was taken to the town of Giessen, on the outskirts of which was a military camp, holding 10,000 prisoners. The food was very poor and consisted of coffee (made from baked barley) for breakfast, black horse beans and potatoes made into a soup for the midday meal, sometimes a small piece of fish and cooked chestnuts made into soup for supper, the soup being black as ink. Plenty of good drinking water was available, but the diet was of such a nature that many of the prisoners were almost too weak to walk. Half a pound of bread was allowed per day, the same being made of rye and potatoes.

After being at Giessen for some weeks Pte. Lovell was moved to Celle Lager but was there four days only, and was soon sent to a small working camp on a moor with 400 prisoners. The employment here consisted of digging the moorland, and the ground was so soddened that the mud was over the tops of their boots. Work commenced at 6 o'clock in the morning and lasted till 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The accommodation in the camp was fairly good, although there was a shortage of food. The work was hard, as the moors were uncultivated and had to be turned over with a spade and then drained ready for potato planting.

The First Attempt to Escape.

On April 24, 1916, forty of the prisoners were sent to a small potato farm at Schaneburg, where they worked planting potatoes for four days, and on the 29th of that month, after awaiting with with much anxiety and watching very closely the movements of the men set over them as guards, Pte. Lovell, with another prisoner, Pte. V. Adsich (a Montenegrin), decided to try their luck, and escaped through a window and succeeded in getting away, after filing through the barbed-wire entanglements outside and evading the guards on duty. Steering in a northwesterly direction, the two men travelled by night, under cover of the darkness as much as possible, across very rough country, with little to eat, and intended making for Holland. After going 30 miles in four nights they lost themselves in a fog on the banks of a river and were challenged by German patrols, and, seeing it was no use to offer resistance, they allowed themselves to be recaptured and were taken to Papenburge.

They were sent to a camp, where there was no exercise allowed, and were confined in a cell for seven days before being sentenced, the punishment being twenty-one days on half rations, with no exercise. A straw mattress was allowed one night in four, and the other three nights the bare floor was their resting place. After serving the twenty-one days in solitary confinement in a dimly-lighted cell, the prisoners were forced to work from six in the morning till seven o'clock at night, and then had to walk back to their barracks, over two miles distant from their work, which they reached at eight o'clock. If any of the prisoners lagged at all there was either the butt-end of a rifle or a thick stick laid about the body, or the boot was freely used, and many of the men remember only too well the pain they suffered. The chief work here consisted of planting potatoes and hoeing. The food was exceptionally poor, no meat was given, and the soup consisted of potatoes and water. In the barracks were forty English and fifty Russian prisoners, all of whom were put into a small space, the barracks being in a filthy condition and overrun with vermin, which the inmates had no means of keeping down. The Russians did not possess boots but were wooden clogs with straw in the place of the ordinary socks. Their clothing was torn and patched with pieces of sackcloth in the previous year, 1915, a large number of the Russians were taken prisoners, and the food was so poor that they were compelled to cook grass and eat the same. Weakness had so overtaken them that eleven had been known to die in one day through sheer exhaustion.

Strict precautions were taken to prevent escape but with all the vigilance of the guards there were moments of exceptional facility offered for getting away. Counting of the prisoners went on all through the day, and it was only when the rule became a little relaxed that the slightest opportunity was given to evade the ever-watching parols. Finally four men, including Lovell, decided to attempt to regain their liberty, and at 1.30 in the morning, by removing some boards, and cutting a wire screen at the back of some buildings, while the guard was in another quarter of the prison or camp, the occasion was seized upon to make a bid for Holland again.

Travelling by night for nearly a week they reached the River Ems, where they stole two farm gates, and making a raft of them to hold clothes, they plunged into the stream which was running strongly, and were carried nearly a mile out of the course they intended to go. Pushing the raft in front of them, they eventually managed to reach the opposite bank, the width of the river being about 100 yards. After spending the next three days without food, other than raw potatoes and some lettuce, the party deemed it wise to separate for fear of being seen. In the daytime it was found necessary to hide in the fields of tall grain, or under bushes here and there, all towns being avoided, by both night and day. Eventually the party crossed the border, between Germany and Holland, but just before doing so, two of the four, who had gone in an opposite direction for diplomatic reasons, were fired upon, and, as fortune would have it, were not hit, it being dark at the time.

By lying quiet for three hours they managed to crawl for some distance and found themselves in neutral country. Seeing a man on a bicycle, they asked him where they were, and he told them in Holland, and directed them to a house, at which the occupant, a toiler on the land, gave them hospitality, and wished them good luck, directing them to the local police station. Here again they were most kindly treated, more food being given, and subsequently they were taken to the English Consul, who arranged for their transport to the Old Country—England—when they were sent to the base battalion, and reported their adventures and escape.

The distance travelled during the period of escape was about 25 miles. It perhaps would not be wise to explain the method by which the four men were enabled to reach neutral country. One means by which the prisoners are recognized so as to minimize the chances of escape is by painting the their clothing, practically from head to foot, in a distinguishing colour.

MARKET SITUATION FOR THE WEEK

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

Potatoes during the week have been an object of more than unusual interest. They have mounted to such high levels that the consumer apparently has decided to get along without them. Commission men state the demand fell suddenly flat during the first part of the week. With the arrival of western potatoes and Prince Edward Island stocks, it is anticipated there will be a drop in prices in the near future. Consumers in the meantime have turned their attention to rice as a substitute and a heavy demand has already set in for this commodity.

Sugar held steady in price during the week with a firmer tendency in raws on the New York market. Flour was also stationary. Tea has continued in a firm position at high levels reached last week. There is eagerness on the part of importers to find out whether the embargo placed on the export of tea from Great Britain applies to stocks that had previously been purchased. Some package teas have again registered an advance. Lard is higher in pr. E Storage eggs are cleaned up, but new-laids are reaching the market in larger quantities and the price is easier.

Advances in price of other lines include corn, syrup, package cereals, brooms, package soap chips, light weight paper bags, lima beans, tapioca, vegetables, grapefruit. Advances are taking place on many lines put up in tin containers. The great scarcity and high price of tin plates have caused no end of trouble to can manufacturers and prices have gone to unprecedented levels. In cases where solder is used high prices have also to be paid for this metal. The announcement of prohibition of coffee imports into the United Kingdom had the effect of lowering coffee prices at New York.

Hardware and Metal.

Prices of hardware continue to advance, and there is no evidence of weakening in the prices of iron and steel products. Even though the war should cease suddenly, which is not likely, prices would not move downwards for some time.

Stocks of ingot metals in Canada are very high and prices are firm. Tin advanced further in price during the week, owing to submarine activity and increased insurance rates. The pig-iron situation is unchanged, and some furnaces in both United States and Canada have closed down. The demand for iron and steel is as insistent as ever. Wholesalers have experienced great difficulty in securing deliveries of supplies, owing to the freight congestion. One large wholesaler is anxiously awaiting the arrival of four full cars of freight, one of which was shipped in November, two in December and one in January. A new standard auger bit list has been issued, and new set prices are out on some traps.

There has been a general advance of approximately 10 per cent. in the price of all makes of Canadian builders' hardware. There have also been advances on liquid glue, night latches and padlocks, pocket knives, sash weights, sisal halters, steel hoops, sidewalk scrapers, crescent saws, shoe thread, auger bit, knife handle wrenches, hog ringers, sad irons, black sheets, gasoline, bensine, coal oil, hemp and jute sewing twine, old materials. Linseed oil is still in firm position in spite of the fact that some cars of flaxseed have been received by Eastern crushers. The shutting off of exports of oil cake and a decrease in domestic consumption with the coming of spring grass for feed is expected to be a factor that will keep prices firm even should seed decline.

CHECK.

Everything was very quiet. Two or three of the passengers were seated in their chairs enjoying the warm air, the rest being below gathering their belongings to be prepared for an early landing in the morning. Wentworth made his way amidships and took station on the starboard side of the vessel, but well out of sight of the casual passer.

Forward the anchor-light glowed, repeated on every hand from the ships about the Lone Star, but the anchor watch was the only figure he could see, the man moving across the steamer on his walk on the elevated forecastle. From his point of vantage Wentworth marked that the side steps had been shipped into place. He had not waited long when some sailors, directed by an officer, lowered the quarter boat, which was taken to the steps, and two men came up from her, disappearing forward. He waited until they had gone, then lounged carelessly to the side and looked over. He had hoped to find the boat empty, but saw that in it was a negro sailor holding it off from the steamer's side with a boat-hook. He must take some risk; here was his best chance. Going easily down the steps he accosted the negro, speaking low.

"This is the boat that is to take a party ashore, I believe."

"Yaas, sah."

"Well, I wish to go in her."

"I dunno, sah; I'll——"

"Hush! There's a lady going?"

"Yaas, sah, an' two gemmen."

"That's right. Here, take this. It's the lady—you understand."

The negro hesitated as he felt the crispness of the bill that John thrust into his hand. Then he chuckled, his teeth showing white in the starlight.

"Guess I kin fix it, sah! Thankee, sah! Yo' jes' lie low forward an' nobody won't see you. I's de bowman, sah. Hurry, sah; here comes de crew. I fix it. Wish you luck, sah."

Wentworth scrambled forward over the thwarts, wisking off his hat that it might not make him conspicuous, and crouched close to the stem of the commodious craft. Four men came down the steps; for a moment the negro whispered to them, then they took their places, laughing among themselves. A few moments later an officer followed; after that there was a wait.

The passing time seemed hours. Wentworth's undignified position was bearing hard on him, and he recognised how foolish he had been in exposing his hand to Bagshot. If he were discovered now he had little doubt that more than his dignity would suffer; the man in his cabin would be found and that would mean irons and with some show of justice. Why had he not bettered his chances by pretending to fall in with Bagshot's wishes as expressed in his last interview? Why had he not compromised—and bided his time?

The sea heaved softly. The gulf-wind had fallen to less than a breath. A mile away lay the city seemingly afloat on the water. Presently there was the sound of footsteps clearly heard through the otherwise absolute silence, and then the light rustle of a skirt. A few words were spoken, then came footfalls on the stairs, and the frail craft tipped as the passengers came aboard. Then there was a rattling of falling oars, an order a swish of water and the boat left the steamer's side. As it got under way plainly came a voice from the deck;

"Good-night and good luck." It was the voice of Captain Shearpole.

Undoubtedly the negro bowman had explained the situation to his fellows but there was no evidence that the stowaways presence was known as the boat moved rapidly shoreward. When it was well under way from the vessel the prostrate man, half under the forward thwart, breathed freely. He now had little fear for the future and he even raised his head that he might look aft under the arms of the swaying crew. Among the passengers not a word was spoken until the loaded boat had rounded the end of the city and was in the bayou behind it. Then it was that Wentworth heard Bagshot's voice as he spoke to the officer in command.

"Our train does not go until one-thirty, Mr. Pierce. It is now about half past eleven. If you are not pressed for time come up to the hotel with me. I will show you I appreciate the trouble you have taken."

"Don't mention the trouble, sir."

"But I feel it; we all feel it! Did—er—er—the captain tell you what he did with that impudent party?"

"Has him under lock and key, I understand. He narrowely escaped being ironed."

"Ah! Tamed him, hey?"

"I believe so. I heard little. Who is he? What did he do?"

"Excuse me, sir; but it is a delicate subject to mention—before a lady. I will tell you later. You will come with us?"

"Thanks. I don't mind—for half an hour."

A moment after the boat swept to the landing stage with its steps leading to the level above. It took but a few minutes for the passengers to disembark the officer following after telling him men to await his return. As the party got well under way the negro turned and touched Wentworth who had curled into the smallest possible compass for one of his figure.

"Now's yo' chance! Coast all clear! Slick as a whistle, that was! I'd reak it fo' a gal any time!"

He laughed openly his ivories gleaming. Wentworth slipped another into the man's hand. "Many thanks to you. Divide that among the rest," he said, and jumping across the float he ran up the steps.

But the steps were slippery, and in his haste he missed his footing, barely escaping a fall, his coat catching on the staple of an unseen mooring-ring, driven into the sea-wall. Recovering himself he tore loose his coat and ran up in time to see the objects on his chase going across the broad esplanade.

In the comparative desertion of the shipping front it was easy to keep the party in sight, and he followed them among the piles of recently discharged cargoes, and past the now gloomy warehouses, until they came to the hotel and entered.

But Wentworth did not go in after them. He passed on, inquiring his way to the depot. It was not a long walk. At that hour the waiting room was empty and the ticket window closed, but a time table on the wall showed him there was a train bound west at one-thirty. He was satisfied, though he hardly knew why, except that he now had time to do what he wished, and pushing straight to his object he at once hunted up the police headquarters.

The man dosing at his desk in the palace of justice opened wide his eyes as he took in the character of his visitor, and in answer to the question if a telegram relating to the arrest of a criminal from New York had been received, replied that he thought not—he would look up the record. It took him some time to do this with the result that he discovered that no requisition for the arrest of anyone for any crime had been sent from New York.

"Not within a week?" asked Wentworth, a feeling of total defeat stealing over him.

"Not within two months, sir. The crooks give us a wide berth, now-a-days. What's the trouble?"

"And you would make no arrest on my affidavit"?

"Crime committed here?"

"No."

"Then not without a warrant, sir—or unless you are an officer. Don't you see how people with a petty spite might make an instrument of the police, if that were possible? I will do all I can for you, but you had better take your case before a judge to-morrow, or go to the district attorney."

"It will then be too late."

"Is it a personal matter with you? that is, have you had trouble with the er—so-called criminal?"

"Yes."

The official shook his shoulders. "I reckon I can see through a ladder. No, Mister, I don't find I can act. Good-night, sir."

The man picked up a newspaper, and settled himself to read. Wentworth turned away in self-disgust, rather than anger. There would be but little use in explaining the situation; he knew that no steps would be taken on his bare word. He had a weak case. He had depended upon Hunsen, and Hunsen had gone back on him. He must either think of something else, or throw up his hands.

And it did not take him long to decide what he would do. The magnet of desire pulled him strongly. He would follow the girl for her own sake, hoping to see her, to get one more word with her, at least to let her know of his escape and that he would be within call if help were needed. He was up to his neck now; he would plunge in beyond his depth and see what came of it. In short Wentworth made up his mind to follow the party to San Antonio. From there he would write to Harper, and telegraph for money as his finances would be too low to permit of his travelling further—even too low to allow his return to New York. He settled this much in his walk back to the depot, and again there he took his station outside, and at a point from which he could see anyone who entered.

He had not long to wait. He saw the trio drive up in a public hack and saw Bagshot buy the tickets. There was now a sprinkling of waiting passengers but no great throng. The girl and Planet stood on the platform until Bagshot joined them. Wentworth watched the three as they started to go aboard the newly made up train lying on the main track, its locomotive sending a plume of steam far up into the windless air. Then he entered the station by a rear door and went up to the ticket window.

"To San Antonio," he said; "Can I get a sleeper?"

"Obtain sleeping accommodation on the train, sir. There's loads of room," was the answer, as the tickets were pushed out. "Seven fifty, sir."

Wentworth put his hand in his breast pocket but drew it out as if stung. His wallet was gone. In his bewilderment he went over his clothing in the wild way one does under like circumstances only to find that he had not misplaced it.

For a moment he thought he had been robbed, then quickly recollected that he had been near no one who would rob him since he had the wallet in his hand when he bribed the negro to let him enter the boat. But there was the fact; his wallet, with over two hundred dollars in it, was gone. The agent looked at him sharply.

"What's the matter?"

"I have lost or misplaced my pocketbook," said John gathering his wits. "I'm afraid that I will have to wait until to-morrow."

It was a terrific blow. He turned from the window, his heart thumping as he realised that his plans had received a stunning reversal; moreover, that he was two thousand miles from home, a stranger in a strange land, dead broke, and that the man he hated and the girl he loved were even then beyond his reach.

At that moment the cry "All aboard!" sounded from without. Something like desperation seized Wentworth. At all events his next act was without thought. Running from the depot he caught sight of Miss Merridale entering a car, Bagshot and Planet being close behind her and both carrying valises. Dashing past the guard at the gate he ran to the forwrad end of the car and jumped on board, entering and walking down the passage just as the party he dogged were taking seats in the almost empty Pullman.

At that moment the train began to move.

It was plain that neither Miss Merridale nor Planet took any notice of the hurrying man, the latter being engaged in storing baggage while the former was adjusting her hat at a narrow mirror between the windows. But Bagshot saw him. With something like an exclamation the man dropped the bag he was carrying, and sank into the nearest chair, his eyes opening in mingled wonder and horror. He had thought of his prosecutor as safely under lock and key on board the Lone Star, yet here he was in the flesh—if he was flesh. His mental attitude was too plain to be misread.

When Wentworth boarded the train he had but a hasy idea of speaking a word to the girl and hurling defiance at her uncle, but as he saw the effect his mere presence had created on the latter and realized the train was drawing from the station, he changed his tactics. There was no time for words. Without halting he raised his hand and pointed a menacing finger at the fairly frightened Bagshot, but he did not speak to him; the train was gathering speed. He passed on, reaching the rear platform as the negro porter was closing the vestibule, and catching the man by the arm, he dragged him around, pulled open the door, and swung himself to the ground. Then he stood, and looked at the lights of the receding train.

"I think I lied to Thomas," he muttered. "I told him I had Bagshot's ghost, though it now seems he has mine, but if that man don't believe in spirits now he never will."

A slow smile grew on his face as he recalled the look of abject terror on his enemy's countenance, then the smile died. He came back to the present and began to take thought of his immediate necessities.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS' AND SMALL WOMAN'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

8074

The practical application of fashion tendencies makes this a worthy design in a dress for misses and small women. It is more than passingly smart, yet designed after the manner of the gracefully simple frock that has so many followers.

The treatment of the waist fronts—extending in tab effect, crossing and buttoning at the waistline—is new and novel. Because a rather low V neck results from the surplice closing of the waist, a shield or vestee of lace, silk or other material is desirable for filling in below the line of the collar. The button decoration of the waist at this point is noticeably neat. The fulness of a long sleeve is drawn in at the wrist, where a band cuff of material finishes. The collar is of satin and the girdle or belt is of matching material.

The two gore gathered skirt has its attraction in being plaited at centre front with some panel suggestion. The modern maiden or small woman may have a delightfully smart dress made after this pattern in duvetyn, prunella cloth, checked serge or the like trimmed with black satin and at slight cost. Its development is the simplest of tasks.

The pattern of dress, No. 8,074, cuts in sizes 14 to 20 years. To make in size 16 requires 5⅛ yards of 36 inch material, ½ yard of 36 inch satin and ⅝ yard of 12 inch lace for vestee.

To obtain the pattern, send 20 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

HAD INDIGESTION
COULD KEEP NOTHING ON STOMACH

Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitated feeling in it.

After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation; that souring and rising of the food which is so unpleasant and in many cases very painful.

It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion when Burdock Blood Bitters may be so easily obtained. This old and well-known remedy, which is a combination of nature's best roots, herbs, barks and berries will cure indigestion and all stomach troubles.

Mr. Lasare Savoy, Pokemouche, N. B., writes: "About two years ago I was troubled with indigestion that bad I could keep nothing on my stomach. I was sorely disappointed in everything I tried to relieve me. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles and can now eat anything that is set in front of me."

That grand old medicine, B.B.B., has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that it is the best cure for all stomach troubles

WOUNDED DIE IN A WRECK.

LONDON, March. 2 — A train carrying 228 invalided Russian soldiers who were on their way home home from Germany through Sweden went off the track between Gefle and Soderhamn, says an Exchange, Telegraph dispatch from Stockholm. The first car carrying 23 insane Russian soldiers was demolished, and all its passengers were killed. About 25 in the other cars were killed.

The work of rescue was made difficital part of her wireless equipment gers, most of whom were blind, had lost arms or legs, or were otherwise rendered incapable of helping themselves. Their hardships were increased by the fact that the wreck occurred in darkness at a distance from any important town.

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind, is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood, through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head producing violent, throbbing pain and distress called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drank before breakfast for awhile will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache, but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Evalyn's Surrender

A Love Story.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Where Evalyn Lawton met Anthony Young is a matter that does not concern this story, which pertains to the end of a long courtship instead of the beginning. But it is said that she met him at a barn dance.

Judging from the relationship outward between them for the next two years, Evalyn did not reciprocate his partiality for her. He availed himself of every opportunity to be with her, and she permitted him to be with her a good deal, but that was all.

There was another reason why it did not seem that the couple would make a match. Evalyn accepted the attentions of other young men. She was very popular and not displeased at receiving attention promiscuously. What girl is? Now and again some young fellow would appear and do the moth-about-the-candle act, only to fly away with singed wings.

Now, all of this was not to the liking of Evalyn's mother. Mrs. Lawton liked Anthony Young very much, admired him for his sterling qualities, and would have been glad to see her daughter anchored to so worthy a man. But she preferred to let Evalyn go her own gait and work out her matrimonial status herself.

One day while Anthony was with Evalyn, her mother being present, the girl was especially ungracious to the man, who was singularly patient with her. Anthony received all her thrusts with equanimity till at last one stab seemed to wound him more severely than the others. Then he arose and went out.

"Poor Anthony!" sighed Mrs. Lawton.

"Poor Anthony, indeed!" echoed Evalyn loftily. "I don't understand why everybody pities Anthony Young."

"Yes, you do understand, Evalyn," contradicted her mother gently. "You have kept him dangling after you for two years, and that is enough to make any young man an object of pity. If you cared in the least for him—there, that is always the way when I speak of poor Anthony." She watched her pretty daughter's flying form as Evalyn sped down the path out of hearing.

Mrs. Lawton could not see Evalyn's face, pink with emotion, or see her brown eyes blazing with wrath as she sought refuge in a rose covered arbor and sank panting into a seat.

"Were you looking for me?" asked a cool voice close at hand. Anthony Young yawned himself into an upright position and blinked amiably at Evalyn's startled face.

"No, indeed. You're the very last person I want to see," she returned crossly. "I can't go anywhere, Anthony, without stumbling over you!"

"Thanks," he said mildly. "You'd have to expect that around here, you know. I'll send myself a telegram and go away if you want me to."

"Oh, do anything that's spectacular!" retorted Evalyn unpleasantly. "Then everybody will arise in chorus and wail 'Poor Anthony!'"

"Is that what they call me?" he asked curiously.

Evalyn reddened deeply. She felt a strong resentment against the tall, fair, good looking young man who had been the least favored of her suitors for many months. There was a bulldog tenacity about his devotion that excited her secret admiration. One by one the others had dropped off to marry other girls or to dangle after some new beauty, but Anthony Young was always there to dance attendance upon Evalyn Lawton.

When he stayed away, as he did sometimes, she missed him strangely and stooped from her cool reserve to beckon him back. Then she alternately smiled and frowned upon him until some occasion like the present drove him from her side. They were visiting Anthony's sister, Mrs. Pardee, with whom he made his home, and it was hard to evade Anthony on his own ground, although he had kept himself in the background as much as possible. Now her hesitation and the golden sparks in the brown of her eyes warned him that once again she had tired of him. Little electric sparks of blue came into his sleepy blue eyes, and involuntarily his spine stiffened. A man may make a doormat of himself for two years, but the prettiest little feet in the world will wear out the stoutest doormat, and Anthony Young's devotion was badly frayed at this time.

"So they call me 'poor Anthony?'" he repeated, looking at her with a very different expression from his usual warm, friendly gaze. "I wonder why."

"It's your own fault," murmured Evalyn, plaiting the folds of her pink gown. "I've told you and"—

"I know it," he interrupted with unexpected bruskness. "You've told me you couldn't marry me; that you didn't love me. You've refused me four times, and no chap with any self respect would invite further refusals or—er—annoy the—er—object of his—er—unwelcome attentions." He picked up his white linen hat and jammed it down on his head. "I have a feeling that I may be called back to town this evening," he said over his shoulder and left her.

At dinner that night Mrs. Pardee indicated her brother's empty chair with a despairing gesture. "Anthony has been called to town. Isn't it provoking just at the beginning of his vacation?"

"Anthony's rather a grind at business," observed her husband, "but it doesn't do to cut out the vacation end. A fellow with his weak heart needs all the rest he can get."

"Dear me, I didn't know Anthony was ill," said Mrs. Lawton anxiously. "I thought he looked pale and out of sorts, but every one does this hot weather."

"Every one except Miss Lawton," said Mr. Pardee gallantly. "But poor old Tony will go kerflop some day, I expect."

Mrs. Pardee changed the subject then, and they all talked of other matters, but Evalyn Lawton was silent.

Anthony Young was not to be pitied, for he was far from the hot tunneled streets of the city. Down on the Jersey shore there was a sea worn cottage where he camped alone and throve mightily on daily sea baths, fishing trips and lazy afternoons and moonlit nights on the beach.

Every day he took on added flesh, and a deeper bronze hue covered his skin. His eyes looked bluer and the electric sparks snapped brighter whenever he thought of Evalyn Lawton. When his self enforced exile was over he returned to his office with his mind adjusted to business, and he waited several weeks before he ventured to call at the Lawton home.

Evalyn seemed glad to see him. He thought her looking rather fagged, but she was a slight little thing and easily affected by the heat of an unusual summer. When she asked him about business, with her bright face sobered to an anxiety he did not understand, he was enthusiastic.

"I've been offered the management of the Paris house," he told her. "Of course there's no end of responsibility attached to the job, but it means a lot to me if I make good."

"Then you are going to accept?" asked Evalyn, spilling tea from the funny little Japanese caddy.

"Of course," his eyes widening with surprise. "I've never been in doubt about that part of it."

"When will you go?" Was there a tremor in her voice?

"The first of the year. You know Harriet and her husband are to spend the winter in Paris. That makes it all the better for me."

"It will be lovely," murmured Evalyn, looking into the tea caddy.

"For everybody," remarked Anthony, with a tinge of bitterness. "Now I must run away. Harriet has some sort of a long haired musical affair this afternoon, and I've promised to lend my voice. She said she expected you there."

"We are going," said Evalyn, although she had intended remaining away. But the temptation of hearing Anthony's beautiful tenor voice proved her undoing. That was the most lovable thing about Anthony Young, she thought. When he sang she forgot everything else. Unfortunately for him, he was not aware that he possessed this charm; otherwise he would have sung himself straight into her heart instead of always stopping at the threshold.

Evalyn Lawton had no suitors dangling in her train now. To her mother's secret anxiety the girl had dismissed them all and seemed content to lead a quiet domestic life, with an occasional diversion.

Mrs. Pardee's musicale was a decided success. Strangely enough, Anthony's number was the only thing that Evalyn cared to hear. When it was over she pleaded a headache and went up to the dressing room. She had reached the top of the staircase when a sudden confusion below arrested her attention. Stretched on the polished floor of the hall was Anthony Young, white, with closed eyes.

While the strains of music rose and fell behind the drawing room curtains Evalyn sped down the stairs and knelt beside the prostrate Anthony. Dick Pardee was the only other witness to her surrender.

"Oh, Anthony, dear, dear, Anthony!" she sobbed. "You are dead now, and—oh!"

Mr. Pardee approached and gingerly felt of his brother-in-law's head. Anthony was looking at both of them with dizzy eyes.

"He's all right," announced Mr. Pardee. "Just slipped on the polished floor and bumped his head."

"I thought it was his heart," fluttered Evalyn, trying to withdraw her hands from Anthony's grasp.

"I guess his heart is all right now," grinned Mr. Pardee knowingly, and, although Evalyn understood, she did not seem to care.

Afterward Anthony sought his brother-in-law with a mystified expression, mingled with his blissful smile. "Why did you trip me, Dick?" he demanded.

But Mr. Pardee only smiled.

That was the end of what had seemed to be an interminable courtship. To some who had predicted that Anthony would never win it was a surprise. To others who appreciated the adage, "Faint heart ne'er won fair lady," it was not unexpected. Mr. Lawton was, of course, delighted.

Whether Evalyn's love for Anthony was all this time lying dormant in Evalyn's breast, only to be revealed to her by the accident that befell him, or whether she was enjoying keeping him on the anxious seat no one knows. All that is known is that, having once surrendered, there came a great change in her. It was she who clung to Anthony instead of Anthony clinging to her.

So these things as they may, the couple had so long been the object of remark that their wedding excited a great deal of interest. This being the case, a large number of guests, invited and uninvited, assembled at the church to see them married.

SCOTT'S EMULSION NEVER TAKE SUBSTITUTES

Why Gold Pieces Are "Doctored."

Why don't jewelers melt up $10 and $20 gold pieces in order to use the metal in the manufacture of gold jewelry? Indeed, gold pieces were used some 40 years ago by enterprising jewelers and with success, too—until the practice was stopped in a very novel but effective way. In those days jewelers bought enough $10 and $20 gold pieces for the work in hand. The gold was melted, the necessary alloys were added, and all manner of fine Etruscan work was turned out.

It was not long, however, before the Government began to wonder what was becoming of its gold pieces. The officials knew the people were not hoarding gold, so a quiet investigation took place. It was then discovered that the makers of gold jewelry were to blame. Having found the cause, it was not difficult for the officials to find a cure. They did it by "peppering" the coins with iridium. Resembling black emery in the crude state, iridium requires a heat of 3,542 degrees Fahrenheit to melt it. Gold, on the other hand, can be melted at 1,913 degrees Fahrenheit. It is easy to see, then, how the unsuspecting jeweler, melting up his gold pieces at the temperature required, got a large number of unmelted specks of iridium in his metal when it cooled.

You can imagine his dismay when his analysis and deductions revealed that he had been trapped.

Fortunes in Lace.

Several millionaire families in New York possess immense fortunes in laces alone. The laces owned by the Astor family are valued at $300,000, those of the Vanderbilt at $500,000. It is said that the New York Four Hundred buy more lace than any collectors in the world. No fewer than twenty wealthy women may be mentioned who each owns laces worth $50,000. Lace is the luxury of the rich. No ordinary middle class collector can hope to possess anything but a few choice pieces, if lucky enough to be able to have those. There are several fine collections among the English aristocracy.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged. Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is musssy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

GERMANS MUST EAT MORE BRAN IN FLOUR

BERNE, March 3.—In order to make the available supply of grain last until the next harvest and replace in part such foods as potatoes, now woefully scarce, the German Government has ordered that all grain in the future must be milled out to 94 per cent. instead of 82 per cent., as at present, and 60 per cent. in peace time. The resulting flour, though far coarser, will be somewhat cheaper. The flour supply will also be husbanded by forbidding the baking of cakes from any other than a substitute or foreign flour.

The Government is considering a plan to compel all cities of more than 8,000 population to collect bones systematically and turn them into the fat-extracting plants which for some time have been working successfully, producing 15 per cent. fat from fresh bones and 8 per cent. from cooked bones, besides animal feed from the residue.

The meat situation in Germany in general is now better than it was a few weeks ago, so that workers engaged in strenuous occupations probably will be able to have 300 grams (.66 pound) weekly instead of 200 or 250.

The potato situation, however, is still dubious, with the prospect that the entire empire will soon be put on a three-and-a-half pound ration weekly, already in force in many sections. Potatoes for the next crop are assured, it is declared, though they are extraordinarily expensive.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. S., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We find it never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and—it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

POTATO IS NOT A GOOD FOOD

This Tuber Is Not a Good Food at Present Prices.

Premier Lloyd George announces that the retail price of potatoes is limited to 6 cents a pound, $2.40 a bushel, until March 31st, and $3.90 a bushel until June 30th. In Germany there is possibly two-fifths of a crop. Prices here are rising from $8 a bushel, causing danger that cupidity may market even seed potatoes and thus prolong the shortage.

At such prices the potato is not a good food; it is not at any price one of the best. Civilized humanity existed without it for centuries, rising to its zenith in a potatoless Old World. Habit and convenience in storage have led to overuse.

The potato is three-fourths water and not quite one-fifth starch, which is its chief food substance, an excellent one for outdoor workers in severe climates. It is less valuable for sedentary workers indoors.

Only one-five-hundredth part of the potato is fat; 3 per cent. nitrogen, 2 per cent. sugar. These more valuable substances are so slight that during the famine of 1847 Irish cotters formed the habit of cooking potatoes "with a bone in the middle"—that is, of undercooking them so that they might delay digestion and stave off hunger.

The housekeeper can help save seed potatoes for the next crop and reduce the price for those who need them by ceasing to buy. There are substitutes, of which rice nearly approaches the potato in values and defects. The correct instinct of rice-eaters has mended the latter by the invention of pilaf, in which rice is supplemented by chopped meats or gravies. Why eat potatoes now?—New York World.

POLICEWOMEN

(BY CANADIAN OVERSEAS)

This organisation of women which is not directly connected with the war, has done more good work since its beginning than perhaps any other organisation of Woman's service.

All such innovations in the regular routine of a community, especially in pre-war days, and this is a pre-war movement were looked upon with horror from some quarters, and with ridicule and disdain from others.

The individuals who wear the cloak of ridicule as a covering for their honest fears—lest in some way their hitherto firm position as guardians of their country's highest good might with all justice, be weakened to the extent of collapse—feel that such efforts must be nipped at once.

Their creed is: if the centre of the room is clean, why bother with the corners? One can well afford to smile inwardly at the disturbed state of mind, which seizes them when such a problem as the Woman's Police Service or Woman's Army—other—service pops up as undoubtedly these questions do, and will, from time to time, until even the spirits of old-fashionedness will no longer open their eyes wide at a body of women plunging into problems which not long ago were avoided as unbecoming and quite beyond the limitations of conventional discussion.

The people of the British Isles, world famed for their love of the conventional and the old-fashioned, have stepped beyond this narrow prejudiced view of things and employ the women police service almost everywhere.

Their problems have their settings in the regions bordering on the sordid side of things, in the hustle of factory life; in the great public thoroughfares and in railway stations during the hours for the arrival and departure of trains.

One usually thinks of the word "Police" as anonymous with censure and punishment for not conforming to the dictates of the law. The police woman is an advocate of the moral law, together with the law of common sense. Her standard of judgment is just but must not be too rigid. Her experience teaches her that a transgressor is always suspicious of any one connected with the police service, and out of this knowledge she is tactful in carrying out her principles. It may be in dealing with a great army of factory girls over whom she is placed as inspector and there are many policewomen holding this position through out England. Difficulties are many in these factories, often trifling, but nevertheless require careful study and sympathetic understanding.

But their work is not confined to the factories. At the stations they look after the strangers arriving in town who do not know their way about. This work is especially useful and necessary at the present time. There are scores of mothers, wives and sisters arriving in town to see wounded relatives back from the front. These are very thankful for the help and cheer they receive from the blue uniformed women who go about among the crowds.

But not only strangers in London receive help. The streets are nightly crowded with a small world of unfortunate people who spend their days trying to dispose of useless trinkets or solicit alms from some corner where the winter wind sweeps past. When night comes many of these wretched creatures, half famished with cold, huddle in door-ways.

No one pays any attention to them—in such cases the world is a heartless thing—but the policewoman discovers them and finds out whether there is any room in any part of the town that they call home. If there is they are taken to it. If there is not, there are other homes of which the policewomen know and which will shelter them until morning.

And then there are other wanderers of the night who come under the vigilant and kindly eye.

Pretty girls leaving a litt of laughter behind them as they hurry along and disappear in the darkness.

The policewomen know these girls by sight and have found positions in munition factories for them.

It is a splendid work that these women are accomplishing; so fine it is and so necessary that even their bitterest enemies of former days are now their allies

The New Governor-General.

The Duke of Devonshire is a characteristic Englishman, and we use that phrase with all the positive qualities, as well as limitations, which it connotes. In this changing world the attributes of a great Englishman, for aught we know, suffer some alteration, but we can imagine no stage in the world's history which will not be as much dependent on strength, firmness of will, and robust common sense as we are to-day. The man who represents Great Britain in the Dominions must have one indispensable element, in the absence of which the best graces and adornments inevitably lose their effect. He must have "character," that indefinable amalgam of self-control, patience, reserve of power, quick decision, and a resolute will which unite in what we term "personality." Those who met together in order to wish the Duke of Devonshire a favorable voyage and a happy future in his new home were well aware that the newly-appointed Governor-General possesses character in an eminent degree. "And to what a country he goes forth!" said Lord Curzon. "If in this war there are any of our fellow-subjects who in a superlative degree may be said to have shown the loyalty of the loyal and the bravery of the brave, it is our fellow-subjects from the Dominions across the Seas." We are sure that our gallant Canadian kinsmen will not be long in discovering that sterling mental and moral endowments of a man who comes from an old English stock remarkable for stubborn strength, a slow-moving but powerful intelligence, and a deep sense of responsibility.—London Telegraph.

LITERARY RAMBLES.

(By F. M. DELA FOSSE)

I have heard of men and women who have set themselves to the task of writing an article or an editorial without the faintest idea of what they were going to write about. It used to be a marvel to me how they managed to do it and be enabled to get their thoughts in the right train to accomplish a task which, to outward seeming, requires at least some preparatory labour. To be frank, at this moment I am in the same case, with absolutely nothing thought out and with no idea as to what direction my wayward wits may take me. Yet, I have but to glance at the shelves as I stand at my desk and the whole problem is solved. There mute, yet speaking, stand rows upon rows of books, embodying the thoughts of living and dead. Men and women who were once leaders in intellect and who in their own time helped to fashion the politics and to raise the standard of human life are there represented, as also are those who explored the fields of science or of philosophy. Good and bad are there, but even the best of them would long ago have been forgotten had it not been for the mysterious power of the pripted page. The art of printing has become so much part and parcel of our economic life that we have ceased to think much about it, just as we have ceased to marvel over the wonders of the telephone, the telegraph and the wireless inventions of Marconi. There is just a possibility that we make a mistake in living so much in the present. In the whirl and rush of existence so much time is taken up in devising ways and means of bettering ourselves that we leave little or none for a backward glance at the road along which we have advanced to civilization. If we did so we should find ample cause for a thankfulness that is at present foreign to most of our hearts, and we would look with gratitude and pride on the books that line the shelves of our public libraries. For it is from them we learn what we owe to the generations that have gone before us. But, unfortunately, the books that are most sought out and read in a library are not the books that are the most helpful. Fiction is good to read, but the reading that Bacon said "maketh a full man" is on the shelves that are seldom troubled with, as the flooring alongside them and the covers of the books themselves only too clearly testify.

As I write this there comes to my mind the title of a little book that has reposed on our shelves for over a year, and in that period has only been taken out once. It is entitled "The Past at our Doors." It is written by a master of English, W. W. Skeat, and deals with the story of our food, our costume and our homes. To say that it is interesting is to put it mildly. There are many items of information in it that, whilst they may cause a feeling of humility in the breasts of the haughty carry also their own antidote in thankfulness for present advantages. Take, for instance, in the matter of table manners. In Canute's time there was a law in vogue that allowed the throwing of bones at any unfortunate who sat out of his right place at table. The dinner-fork was not introduced till 1608, and the man who introduced it was held up to execration as offering "an insult to Providence, Who had given us fingers." In ancient days the tablecloth was simply a skin of a wild beast spread on the ground. At Glastonbury, in ancient days, the lord of the manor found his men in food on Christmas Day, but he made the order that "every man shall take with him a plate, mug and napkin, if he wishes to eat off a cloth, and a faggot of brushwood to cook his food, unless he would have it raw." Ploughs at one time were drawn at the horse's tail, and this itself was an improvement on the older fashion of digging up the earth with a piece of pointed wood. If we search further through this very interesting and instructive little book we shall find much to show us how man has progressed and how much he owes to the brains and the labour of his ancestors. In some instances, sad to relate, he seems to have retrograded rather than advanced, but in the main he has made vast strides, and his intellect, not content with pursuing its researches on earth, has mounted to the heavens and explored many of the wonders there.

When we turn to the matter of food, we find, even in the present high cost of living, much to be content with as compared with prices of former days, and a good deal more to be content with in the matter of the ingredients that enter into our food. Tea in 1651 cost ten sovereigns a pound. Treacle was a vile compound, made up of opium, spice, licorice, red roses, sloes and the essence of vipers steeped alive in white vine. Sugar was quite as hard to get in those days in England as it is now, for the price was prohibitive to all but the very wealthy. In its place honey was used for sweetening purposes.

In the chapters on costume there is much to interest us also. It is curious to note how national characteristics come out in the costume, and what changes have taken place not so much in fashions as in the customs of peoples. Tight-lacing is an old habit and is mentioned by Chaucer. High heels are not by any means an innovation of these latter days, for we know that Queen Elizabeth wore them two and a half inches high. If she had lived two hundred years later she would have been liable to incur the deadliest animosity of her subjects, for in 1770 there was a law passed forbidding the use of scents, paints, cosmetics, high-heeled shoes, false hair and even artificial teeth, under the penalty of the "laws against witchcraft, sorcery and of such-like misdemeanours," and it was provided further that if any of His Majesty's male subjects were "betrayed" into marriage by any such arts as these, the marriage, in the case of a conviction, should be void.

It will be news to many that in the good days of old, somewhere about the year 1306, a man was put to death for burning sea-coal in London, the belief being that in so doing, he caused danger to others by suffocation. The general use of coal, in fact, only dates from the reign of William the Third.

Surely there is interesting matter enough in literature of this sort, not to speak of the romantic stories of travel and adventure, the descriptions of scientific discoveries, and the lives of those who have been instrumental in making them to offer a pabulum, that in the truest sense of the term, will make a "full man."

INGRATITUDE.

Not till the cruel roughening of the way,
Not till the hopeless tiring of the feet,
Not till the dusk and fading of the day
Is home most sweet.

Not till our joy has turned to memory,
Not till our hearts are wearied out with fasting,
Do we lift beaten hands and cry to thee,
Life everlasting!

—A.L.G., in St. James Gazette

The Lenten season is being observed in many churches, possibly with more real self-searching and self-sacrifice than ever before. Sin in its true character is so plainly visible to the world to-day, we had almost forgotten that it was in the world, because it became transformed into that which was most attractive; but now we know, and at what cost!

The call is compelling to-day to the churches to clear away the wreckage of sin in hearts and homes, that Christ may enter in and rectify the false standards of life which we have set up and satisfy the immortal longings that call out for something the world has failed to satisfy. The following thoughts from "The Renascence of Faith," by Richard Roberts, give a glimpse of the possibilities still in the church for even greater works than the achievements of the early Christians:

"The world is too much with us, soon and late, Getting and spending we lay waste our powers."

"Life has fallen into a desperate tangle. We have staked out a little area of our life into which we have crowded our spiritual ideals, and left the rest open for business, telling ourselves that 'religion has nothing to do with business,' with the result that our religion has been an external thing.

"The scale of values which governs our modern life does not lead to satisfaction. The things at the top of the scale—money and the things that money can buy—do not satisfy. But Christ came into the world to show man the way into a life that does satisfy.

"Conversion—The spiritual life must start with conversion. The truth of conversion is coming to its own again; and the church has to learn that it refers not only to the drunkard and the harlot, but to respectable neighborhoods; that it implies not only conversion from vice, but from the love of gold, the love of pleasure, the love of fame, the pride of birth, and from every manner of self-esteem and worldliness. It is a turning of the whole life in one comprehensive act from the world to God.... We must live the spiritual life together, if it is to reach its full strength. A Christian congregation should be a fellowship—not a mere concourse of people—but a body of men and women each severally sworn to live out the spiritual life fearlessly in all its fullness. The Christian congregation should be a burning centre of spiritual energy which will effect a revolution within the area of its influence. It is impossible to calculate the consequences that would ensue from the realization of such a corporate spiritual life, even in the smallest community. The story of Antioch still remains on record."

Nervous Headaches And Neuralgic Pains

Are the Surest Symptoms of Exhausted Nerves—Lasting Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Peterborough, Ont., March 5. — Among the hundreds of cures being reported from this city as the result of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the most prominent symptoms are headaches and neuralgic pains. About one-fifth of all the blood in the human body is consumed in the brain in the manufacture of nerve force. When the blood gets thin and watery the nerves are starved and you have headaches, neuralgic and sciatic pains. Dr. Chases Nerve Food, by forming new, rich blood, affords lasting cure of such ailments.

Miss Edythe Cowles, 563 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "For some years I have suffered from nervousness, sleeplessness and a run-down system. Many times chloroform had to be resorted to to relieve the severe headaches I used to have. I had doctored for years, and had been advised that it would be necessary to have an operation, but I kept putting it off. Finally, I procured a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had taken many of the pills found that they were doing me good, so I continued the treatment. My headaches have ceased, I can now eat and sleep fine. I have not felt so well for many years. This is the only medicine I have taken, and I can give the full credit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I have already recommended it to many of my friends."

Mrs. W. T. Abbott, 536 Patterson street, Peterborough, Ont., writes. "My system was in a run-down condition, and I was troubled with nervousness and sleeplessness. For some time, also, I had been bothered with neuralgia, and, although I tried many remedies, it was without success. Upon the advice of a friend, I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found in five or six days that my neuralgia was cured, and I have not been troubled in this way since. I also find that now I can eat and sleep well, and I give full credit of this great benefit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I might also mention that I had lost considerable in weight, but after using the Nerve Food I gained back the flesh I had lost. My husband has also found Dr. Chase's Nerve Food of great benefit to him, and uses it when he feels run down from overwork."

IN MEMORIAM

THE CHILDREN IN HEAVEN

"Oh! What do think the angels say?
Said the children up in heaven.
There's a dear little boy coming home to-day;
He's almost ready to fly away.
From the earth we used to live in
Let's go and open the gates of joy,
Open them wide for the new little boy
Said the angels up in heaven.
God wants him where his little ones meet,
Said the angels up in heaven.
He shall play with us in the golden street,
He has grown too fair, he has grown too sweet
For the earth we used to live in.
He needs the sunshine, this dear little boy,
That gilds this side the gates of joy,
Said the angels up in heaven.
So the King called down from the angel's dome,
Said the children up in heaven.
My little boy arise and come,
To the place prepared in the Father's home.
The home that my children live in.
Let us go and watch at the gates of joy,
Ready to welcome the new little boy,
Said the children up in heaven.
Far down on the earth do you hear them weep?
Said the children up in heaven.
For the dear little boy has gone to sleep,
The shadows fall and the night clouds creep,
O'er the earth we used to live in.
But we'll go and open the gates of joy,
Oh! why do they weep for the dear little boy?
Said the angels up in heaven.
Fly with him quickly, Oh! angels dear
See, he is coming! look there! look there!
At the jasper [illegible] his sunny hair,
Where the veiling clouds are riven.
Oh, hush! hush! for the swift wings furl
For the King himself at the gates of pearl
Is taking his hand, dear tired little jewel.
And is leading him into heaven.

One of the principal ingredients in a good time is your imagination.

Knowledge may be power, but it takes gasoline to get you anywhere these days.

Be kind to children. Most of them retain their memories after they grow up.

Depend upon it, the average man is above the average. If you doubt it, ask him.

A man's deafness has reached the limit when he can no longer hear a noise like a skirt.

"A MORE IMMEDIATE ASSOCIATION WITH WAR THAN ARMED NEUTRALITY"

Significant Passage in President Wilson's Inaugural Address This Morning---Sounded a Note of the Doctrine of World Peace But Intimated That the United States Cannot Stand Apart in Isolation

HE MAY ACT WITHOUT AUTHORITY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, March 5.—President Wilson sounded a note of the doctrine of international and world peace in his inaugural address to-day, but in the same breath warned that the United States may require "A more immediate association" with the war than mere armed neutrality.

He spoke for unity of American thought, spirit and action, and voiced the view that this must be an Americanism steeped in world spirit, instead of the isolated national view of the past.

His principal plea for world peace, spoken before the thousands attending his second inauguration called for:

Limitation of world armaments.

Equal interest and responsibility of all nations for maintaining peace.

Destruction of the "armed balance of power."

Freedom of the seas equal to all.

Crushing of any attempts within a nation to organize or assist a revolution against another nation.

Electric with the spirit of patriotism, of Americanism, of a new world unity, the speech solemnly suggested that despite the war fires raging and despite the possibility that this nation must take a broader hand, still that peace is coming soon. Armed neutrality is our stand, he said, yet this may not suffice.

A hush followed this.

Then gravely he continued:

"We may even be drawn on, by circumstances not by our own purpose or desire, to a more active assertion of our rights as we see them, and a more immediate association with the great struggle itself."

"Any such step," he asserted, "however, will be with unselfish purpose, not with any view of conquest or national aggrandizement.

"The United States cannot, if it wishes, longer stand apart in isolation, it must regard itself as a world entity, think and act in terms of this world spirit."

WASHINGTON (Bulletin), March 5.—At 12:15 thousands of spectators crowded on the plaza on the east front of the Capitol to hear the President's address, got beyond control of the police and Boy Scouts. Cavalrymen from Fort Meyer were called upon to push back the insurging crowd.

The President was guarded as never before.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—President Wilson has asked the legal authorities of the Government to give him a formal opinion within twenty-four hours as to whether or not he has the power to furnish navy armament for American marchantmen without the special authority given by Congress.

Upon the decision depends whether the President will go ahead despite the Senate's failure to act on the armed neutrality measure and take the steps which he has feared he did not have the power to take.

On the other hand if his legal advisers report that he has not the necessary weapon without a special enactment he will call an extra session just as soon as the Senate acts upon revision of the rules and will reintroduce his "Armed neutrality" request.

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, March 5.—For the first time to-day the British press and public seemed to have arrived at a full understanding of the complex position which President Wilson faced because of the Senate rules permitting filibusterinfi and consequently comment, both public and in the British newspapers reflected a more sympathetic attitude toward the American executive and his problems than at any time in recent weeks.

The average Briton finds it hard to understand the American legislative or political system, and in such a mix-up as the American Senate found itself during the last two days neither the British newspapers nor the public were able to fathom the matter.

British newspapers were chary about suggesting "a way out" for Wilson, but most of them seemed content to leave the problems in his hands, professing the belief that the American people were behind him in whatever he did.

German Attacks Are Stopped By French

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 5.—A violent German attack, over a front of a mile and three-quarters, made in repeated assaults, was repulsed last night with heavy losses to the Germans, to-day's official statement asserted.

The German forces failed to get a footing anywhere except in advanced positions north of Cauriers Woods.

The attack which was in sufficient force to indicate a general offensive, was in the region of Cauriers Woods and north of Verdun.

The enemy's repeated attacks were broken down by a French curtain of fire. The German assaults came after a redoubted and prolonged artillery preparation.

COPENHAGEN, March 5.—Berlin advices say that part of Belgium in Germany's hands has been divided into three provinces, with Brussels, Namur and St. Apus as capitals with German governors for each.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The death list of United States coast guard seamen who perished in a heavy sea while going to the rescue of a strande steamed off Ocean City, Md., last night, was to-day believed to have reached fifteen.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Wireless received to-day says three persons on the Spanish liner on which Ambassador Gerard and party are coming home have been arrested. At one time the situation was so threatening that Gerard asked for a convoy, but later revoked the request.

TORONTO, March 5. — Brokers' wires say British Government has notified the United States munition workers that all shell contracts will lapse at the end of the present month, and orders not delivered then will be cancelled.

MELBOURNE, March 5.—The Government has decided upon an immediate general election, it was announced to-day, following the dissolution of the present parliament.

(By John Grandens.)

BERLIN, March 5.—Germany's self defensive offer of an alliance with Mexico "may reveal to Americans the dangers into which President Wilson is leading them," according to Georges Bernhard, writing to-day in the Vossische Zeitung.

"It was our duty," he declared, "to enlist as an ally America's most bitter enemy, but the offer proved the salvation of Wilson's reputation when he played it as a trump. We should not have offered Mexico American territory. Mexico is on the defensive against the Americans, and therefore should merely have been tendered assistance."

CANADIANS IN THE THICK OF THE ANCRE FIGHTING

Ontario Battalions Engaged in the Pursuit of the Retreating Germans in the Vicinity of Gommecourt Last Week

NO DETAILS RECEIVED

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 5.—After confining their operations for some months to successful trench raiding the Canadians have again figured in real offensive operations on the Ancre.

The Third Canadian Division has been engaged in the following up of retreating Germans in the vicinity of Gommecourt. Cables received to-day indicate that Ontario Battalions in particular have participated. Casualties sustained mostly on Thursday last are said to number about 200, and are considered comparatively light, especially if the entire division has been engaged.

This is believed to be the action in which Colonel Becket, of the 75th Battalion, was killed. No details of the action have yet been received here, but the casualties will no doubt be received by the Record Office at an early date.

HEAVIEST SNOWFALL OF THE SEASON

March Will Likely Have the Mast Snow to its Credit

The snow fall of last night and to-day is the heaviest of the present season. As usual, March will likely have the most snow to its credit of any of the winter months. This winter there has been no pronounced thaw, and the original snow that fell early in the season is still with us.

The snow fall of this winter has not been up to average, but it is possible that March may make up any deficiency. On looking over some old papers we discovered a few particulars regarding the snow fall of March, 1870, 47 years ago. This was the heaviest snow fall on record in this district. The winter had been an average one, and spring seemed near. On March 13th snow began to fall heavily. This was on a Sunday. It snowed continuously until the following Sunday night, with the exception of Friday. By this time things began to look alarming, as there was snow on the level to at least five feet; many claimed 6 feet. The immense snow fall went off with a rush and did much damage, practically all the dams between Lakefield and Peterborough suffering. All the territory where the C. G.E. now stands was under water, and as far north as where the C.P.R. station now is. The river itself ran straight south from the west end of Little Lake, making the cemetery point an island. The heavy snow fall was followed by the river's worst flood.—W. P.

More Socks Needed For Boys At Front

The Red Cross Society, through the Canadian War Contingent Association, is making repeated earnest appeals for socks to be sent to the men in the trenches. It will be only through continued and unceasing work on the part of the knitters that the demand can be met, and the local society accordingly urges all its workers to make an extra effort to add to the sock supply. During the past week the knitting machines in the Red Cross work rooms have been kept busy, with the result that there are now 75 pair of socks to be toed off. The society asks that all ladies who are good darners, will meet Tuesday, March 6th at 2:30 p.m. in the Red Cross rooms, to do this work.

Peterborough Soldier Is Laid To Rest With Military Honours

Funeral of Pte. W. D. Metheral This Afternoon---More Peterborough Soldiers Arrived From Overseas---Major R. P. Watt Reaches Home---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The funeral of the late Pte. W. D. Metheral, of the 207th Ottawa Battalion, who passed away at Amherst, N.S., on Friday morning, took place this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence of his brother, Mr. A. E. Metheral, 269 Reid street, to Little Lake cemetery. It was in charge of the 247th Battalion, who furnished the firing party and escort. The band of the battalion played the Dead March in Saul as the sad procession slowly moved off to the cemetery. At the grave the firing party fired three rounds and the "Last Post" was sounded.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman, of the 247th Battalion, stated this morning that the reports from the different recruiting centres indicate a very successful week for the Peterborough unit. Prospects are bright for a good week.

Major R. P. Watt, of the 93rd Battalion, arrived home on Saturday. Major Watt was in France for a number of weeks, and has been sent back to Canada with many other officers.

Corp. Frank Degan, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, reached Peterborough this morning, having been invalided home from England. Corp. Degan's son was invalided home some time ago. Corp Degan was a member of the Peterborough Fire Department before enlisting. Two other Peterborough soldiers, Sergt. Lightheart and Pte. Bruce Clarke, who went overseas with the 39th Battalion and who after being transferred to other Canadian battalions at the front, have also reached Canada, but have not yet arrived home. They are expected at any time.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Regimental Orders, Part I, No. 54.

Peterborough, Ont., March 3rd, 1917.

Daily Orders by Lieutenant-Colonel C. H. Ackerman, Commanding 247th Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Orders for Sunday and Monday, March 4th and 5th, 1917:

Duties—

Orderly Officer for Sunday, March 4th, 1917—Lieut. V. J. McElderry.

Orderly Officer for Monday, March 5th, 1917—Lieut. J. M. Shook.

Next for duty Tuesday, March 6th, 1917—Lieut. T. W. Quinn.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lieutenant.

Adjutant 247th Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Mrs. Wicker, East City, whose son, Pte. Fred Wicker, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was recently killed in action, has received the following letter:

Somewhere in France, Feb. 3, 1917.

Dear Mrs. Wicker, —No doubt by this time you have heard the sad news about poor Fred. As you already know, Fred and I were in the same company and were together since leaving England last 14th of September, 1916, and had it arranged that if either of us were killed, the other was to write home particulars. And as Fred is gone, it is up to me to tell you all I know about his death.

On January 17, 1917, our battalion raided Fritz's trenches. We went over the top at 7.45 a.m. and laid in "No Man's Land" four minutes waiting for our barrage of fire to lift from his front line. I was on a Lewis' gun in the first wave and Fred was in the second wave. I did not see him after we left our line, but was told by some fellows that were with him that he was killed by a shell in a German front line and didn't know what happened to him, so he did not suffer any pain. Fred is buried in a small little cemetery back of the lines. I was unable to see the grave owing to circumstances, but know where it is. I did not know the sad news until I came back to billet. And you can easily imagine how badly I felt after being with him so long, but the first thing I thought about was his dear ones at home, especially you.

Now, Mrs. Wicker, I know how hard it is for you. As you know, my brother was killed out here when I was home, but try and look on the bright side of it, knowing that he died a hero's death while in action, and was thought a lot of by all of us. And he was always in good spirits at all times. You will please pardon me for not writing sooner but have been trying to gain as much information as possible regarding his death, before writing.

We all unite in sending our deepest sympathy to you and the rest of the family. Trusting this will be of some consolation to you, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Private Bryer C. Carpenter.

The Kingston Whig says:

Brig.-Gen. T. D. R. Hemming, G. O.C., has five books of names to the number of 1,500 which were secured in a canvas of the city of Peterboro' by officers and men of the 247th. The city was divided into five sectors for the purpose, and the names, addresses and reasons for not enlisting were secured and may be published in the Peterboro' papers.

TORONTO, March 5.—T. B. Kidner, Secretary of the Vocational Training Military Hospitals Commission who is in the city to-day reports that a difficulty is being experienced in getting qualified instructors for vocational classes for returned soldiers. Mr. Kidner with members of the Commission will this afternoon hold a conference with E. C. Cooley of Chicago, formerly Superintendent of Chicago schools, who has just returned from Europe where he made a special study of the care and training of invalided men.

The Kingston Standard says:

Major G. L. Campbell returned from Lindsay and Peterborough last night. In both places, he stated he found there was not the co-operation on the part of the citizens which was necessary to guarantee success for the 247th and 252nd Battalions. In Lindsay, at a meeting of the officers and a number of prominent business men, he found there was a grim determination on their part to make the battalion a success. At a strenuous meeting of citizens in Peterborough he told them that it had come to the point of whether the battalion was to be or not to be and gave the city two months to redeem their reputation. After a lengthy discussion an unanimous resolution was passed that the citizens would do all in their power with money and influence to make the battalion a success. Major Campbell will return to Peterborough to-morrow.

Col. Ackerman is doing everything possible to bring his battalion in Peterborough up to strength. He has divided the city into five sections and every eligible man in these has been canvassed. The names of those who are still holding back have been published in book form, giving the names, addresses and reason for not enlisting. The book contains 1,500 names.

A patent has been granted for a mucilage bottle with a pin valve in its top to permit its contents to be poured out in small quantities and a metal flap to spread the mucilage.

WILSON NEUTRALITY ACT IS BLOCKED

Filibuster in the United States Senate Stops Passage of the Measure Designed to Give President Authority to Place Guns on American Ships.

CONGRESS EXPIRES

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Twelve Senators, led by Senator Lafollette and encouraged by Senator Stone Democratic chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, in a filibuster denounced by President Wilson's spokesman as the most reprehensible in the history of any civilized nation, defied the will of an overwhelming majority in Congress up to the last minute today and denied to the President a law authorizing him to arm American merchant ships to meet the German submarine menace.

Unyielding throughout 26 hours of continuous session to appeals that their defiance of the President would be humiliating to the country, uncompromising in a crisis described to them as the most serious to the nation since the civil war. Lafollette and his small group of supporters refused a majority of their colleagues an opportunity to vote on the armed neutrality bill, and it died with the 64th Congress at noon.

12 BALK WILL OF 76.

To fix responsibility before the country 76 Senators, 30 Republicans and 46 Democrats signed a manifesto proclaiming to the world that they favoured passage of the measure.

This declaration, embodied in the record of the Senate, referred to the fact that the House Thursday night passed a similar bill by a vote of 403 to 13, and also recited that the Senate rule permitting unlimited debate gave a small minority opportunity to throttle the will of the majority.

The twelve Senators who went on record with the thirteen members of the House against granting to President Wilson the authority he asked from Congress in the crisis were:

Republicans —Clapp, Minnesota; Cummins, Iowa; Gronna, North Dakota; Kenyon, Iowa; Lafollette, Wisconsin; Norris, Nebraska Works, California.

Democrats—Kirby, Arkansas; Lane, Oregon; O'Gorman, New York; Stone Missouri; Vardaman, Mississippi.

THWARTED PLANS AT END.

Hours before the end Senators who fought throughout the night to break down the filibuster conceived a way to thwart Lafollette's well laid plans to occupy the centre of the legislative stage at the climax of the bitter fight. Its execution brought the session to a dramatic end, with Lafollette fighting vainly for a chance to deliver a speech on which he had worked many days. He saw friends of the doomed legislation inflict the death blow which he planned.

Instead of Lafollette, Senator Hitchcock, leader of the majority in favour of the bill, talked out the waning hours of the session. Timing his opportunity to the minute, Senator Lafollette entered the Senate Chamber shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, prepared to take the centre of the stage for the last act of the tragedy. When the moment he had chosen arrived he addressed the chair, but Senator Hitchcock prevented his recognition.

The forensic struggle which ensued seldom if ever, had been equalled in the history of the Senate. Voices were strained to shrieking, threatening fists were shaken at the presiding officer, while the crowded floor and galleries looked on breathlessly. But the incident soon passed without violence.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS TO LINE UP FOR THE PRODUCTION CAMPAIGN

Youngsters at 15 and Under will Engage in a Contest in Working City Garden Plots —Others to go on Farm

WILL OFFER PRIZES

The Y.M.C.A. of Canada are to cooperate with the Department of Agriculture in organizing and supervising "Boy Power" for the purpose of increasing farm products.

The Peterborough Y.M.C.A. is to line up its boy members of fifteen and under in a contest in working city garden plots and will endeavor to act as a clearing house in furnishing young men of sixteen and seventeen years of age for farm work. The Association is fortunate in having the assistance of its President, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Director H. B. Cowan and J. E. Smith, men who are well acquainted with the agricultural situation. These men are aiding the Association Secretaries outlining a programme which it is hoped will prove most successful.

The complete programme will be announced next week, although the Association would greatly appreciate the favour, if information regarding available vacant lots could be sent to the Y.M.C.A. office this week.

To create the right interest in the proposed plan the effort must take the shape of a contest with a series of cash prizes so there will be an opportunity for interested friends to set up the trophies.

Mr. F. E. Ellis will speak to the boys' groups on Wednesday evening regarding Canada's agricultural problem. Every boy should be present.

Seventy-five men and older boys listened with the greatest interest to Lieut. A. E. Brittain on the "Second Battle of Ypres" which was given at meeting Sunday afternoon. This is the second appearance of Mr. Brittain this season and he has on both occasions been greated with record audiences.

MONDAY, MARCH 5, 1917

GRACEFULLY DONE.

Whatever difference of opinion there may be in regard to the wisdom, at the present time, of increasing the salaries of the members of the Fire Brigade, there can be none as to the prompt and ready manner in which it was done. The committee properly appreciated the importance of placing or keeping the Fire Department upon the most effective basis; and there is no way in which effectiveness of service can be better attained than by willing concession of adequate reward for service. Whatever other civic service we may economize upon, the true economy, though it costs much money, is to keep the Fire Department, in the matter of equipment, man power and esprit de corps up to the mark. This condition is the main thing that helps us sleep o' nights with a sense of safety. One can be sure that no thinking ratepayer will object to all reasonable expenditure required to keep the Fire Department in effective working order. As remarked, the large merit of the committee's grant of increased pay is the graceful and ready way in which it was done. It is possible to grant a favour or recognize a right in a grudging, ungracious way that deprives the beneficiary of much of the pleasure. It is even possible to refuse a request in a way to make it seem a sort of kindness. It is said that the late Sir John A. Macdonald had the tact and skill to send a petitioner away without granting his request—to turn him down, in such a suave, soft way as to make him feel more self satisfied than if his request had been grudgingly granted. In many ways the merit of doing a thing largely consists in the way it is done; and that extends to the action of the Fire, Water and Light committee, though the action referred to was a concession of right and desert, and in the public interest.

WITH EMPTY HANDS.

It is stated in cable despatches that Sir J. H. Hazen, Canada's Minister of Marine, who accompanied Sir Robert Borden to England, had a conference with the Admiralty officials and Admiral Jellicoe. If Sir J. D. Hazen has any enemies, his most bitter enemy could wish him nothing worse than the bad quarter hour he must have spent with the British Admiralty authorities.

At a time when the British Navy, with its magnificent record of achievement, to which Canada contributed nothing, is bending every effort; using everything that can float and fight; straining every nerve to increase its naval resources, in the time of the nation's and empire's greatest peril by sea—it must be the depth, the abyss, of humiliation for the nominal representatives of the greatest of the overseas dominions, with a wealth of ship-building resources and a great maritime population, to stand empty-handed before the expectant sea-lords of the Mother land. And not only with empty hands, but with a mouth empty of excuses, or if excuses, only of empty words; with no plausible explanation why, with all our resources and opportunity; with all the pressing need; Canada has done nothing to back the British navy.

He can only tell the British sea lords that seven long years ago the Laurier government, when it was relieved of office, left behind it, among other splendid records of its achievements, a Naval Act and tenders for armoured cruisers and destroyers, exactly the kind of craft that Britain is in deadly need of now; and that when the Borden government came into power, it scrapped these tenders at the command of its anti-British Nationalist supporters; that the Borden government substituted in obedience to the same dictation, a policy of gift of money—35 million to build dreadnoughts—carrying coals to Newcastle; that in obedience to the policy of Hon. Mr. Monk, a Nationalist member of the government, the senate refused to pass the 35 million bill, except on condition of its submission to the people, that the government did not dare, or at least did not, submit to the conditions of the policy of one of its ministers. Mr. Monk resigned and died—and the Borden government's gift naval policy died, too.

If Sir J. D. Hazen unfolds this plain, unvarnished and true tale of Canada's naval apostacy, to the British Admiralty, he may be reminded that the Laurier tin-pot navy would come in handy now; that Britain is not only building at express speed fleets of small ships for use in the present crisis, but is having hundreds of submarine chasers built in the United States.

If the Laurier Naval Act and the Laurier naval policy had been carried out, the thirty-five millions, that hasn't done anything, could have built some swift cruisers and many destroyers — just the ships that the present crisis demands. Canada broke faith with Australia, which kept her agreement with Canada and faith with the Empire by building a navy of her own. And in the third year of the war, and the seventh year of opportunity, Canada sends her representatives to an Imperial conference with empty hands.

NICKEL-PLATED GOVERNMENT.

If the Ontario government doesn't deserve the distinction of being nickel plated, another compound adjective, may fit—German silver—a combination of the baser metals, copper, zinc and nickel, in imitation of real silver, and on account of its spurious character called German; which has in a wider and worse sense become associated with deception, disregard of obligations, breach of faith, and all wickedness. The Ontario government has not dealt with our nickel interests in a patriotic and business-like way. Ontario has a monopoly of metal deposits that should be turned as exclusively as is practically possible to the benefit of this province, and, incidentally, of the Dominion, the Empire and the allied cause.

So forgetful of the interests of the province and so solicitous for the profits of foreign corporations has the Ontario government become, that one foreign corporation whose profits on the refinement of Ontario nickel mounts into more millions than Ontario's total annual revenue has been let off with only $40,000 taxes to the province. Not only does the government allow a foreign corporation to milk Ontario mines and skim the cream of the profits, without any approximation to adequate taxation, but the foreign profiteers are allowed to get their hands on more "swag" at nominal prices.

Mr. Dewart, in the House on Thursday night, brought out the damning fact that, not to go back any further than 1916, thousands of acres of lands had been sold to the foreign corporation, the International Nickel Company, or its agent, the Canada Copper Company, at the absurd rate of $3 per acre—lands if they yielded according to other lands, would contain thousands if not millions of dollars of nickel wealth per acre. If this had been done years ago not so much fault could be found, but that it is done today, in the light of recent developments and conditions, is little short of criminal outrage upon the rights of the people of Ontario.

But bad as this constructive robbery is, regrettable as is the loss to the province from such flagrant betrayal of public trust, the worst feature is the shameless impudence—to use a rather far-fetched euphemism—that is displayed. On two occasions—public occasions—Mr. Ferguson, the Minister of Mines, declared that "not one acre of nickel-bearing land had been granted by this government." Mr. Ferguson rather double-crossed the truth by intimating in the legislature last week that grants made were to a "private prospector," who Mr. Dewart showed was an employee and agent of the Canada Copper Company, virtually the company itself, and that another "private prospector" who had received three other lots from the government, at the same absurd price, was the mining geologist of the same company.

We expect of our ministers and public men that their public and quasi-official statements should be the truth and nothing but the truth—not shifty evasions—with appearance of half truths, but in reality perversions of the truth. A gentleman is one whose word one can rely on, who would feel disgraced if he were shown guilty of playing fast and loose with the truth; and we should expect as much from a gentleman in his capacity of a Minister of the Crown. But it seems unfortunately true that our standards of manly, honest, straightforward truthfulness have been debased; that our public men to a deplorable degree, have been Rogerized and Germanized, and that the statements of many of our public men have to be accepted with so much salt that corroboration is the indispensable condition of credence. One can't fancy a British statesman lowering himself to the point of making even equivocal public statements as to fact; but we don't need to fancy some Canadian public men doing the double deal in the matter of truth, we have the sad fact.

IS CANADA ADEQUATELY PREPARING FOR INEVITABLE AFTER-THE-WAR CONDITIONS?

"We should not permit our riches to interfere with our progress. There is danger that great wealth will produce the opposite of necessity, extravagance, indolence, waste, indifference, retrogression, stupidity, failure. We must be on our guard against this danger." This is the warning given by Mr. E. H. Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation, to the people of the United States. It was not enough, he added, to have the most gold, the most currency, the highest credit, the largest productive capacity. He pleaded for preparation for the period to follow the war. This appeal was made in a country which has taken some action in preparing for post-bellum conditions. The American International Corporation, for example, with capital of $50,000,000 and a directorate of the leading business men and financiers in the United States, has already created a strong, well-balanced, cohesive working force. The company has purchased control of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, is filling orders in Russia and China, has financed business in Latin America, has taken an interest in an important American machinery company, a large wholesale tea business and in the United Fruit Company. The United States government departments have definite post-war work in hand. Already the Federal Trade Commission has gathered information from all parts of the world as to export trade, and has issued a report on co-operation in American export trade.

If Mr. Gary's pleading applies after a goodly measure of action, how much more does it apply to our own country? We are without well-defined plans for dealing with conditions after the war. We are not encouraging private enterprise to deal with them. We are not posted as to what private enterprise is doing. We are without information as to what trade conditions are likely to prevail after the war in the countries with which we trade. We do not know from which countries we are likely to receive new population or which countries will forbid emigration. We have vague fears only, little else, as to the adjustment of capital and labour relations after the war. We have few national statistics of value. We have appointed special commissions, whose work is overlapping. Few, if any, know how many commissions are actually working and what they are doing. The supervisory commission is lacking. The services of the trained men of government departments are not being utilized to the proper degree. They have information which others have been asked to get.

There is willingness and anxiety everywhere to help to prepare for the post-bellum period. If these conditions existed in a modern business, a business manager and a board of directors would be on the job to direct effort, to prevent overlapping, and to formulate practical plans.—Monetary Times.

Funeral of Late Dr. McIlmoyle

The sudden death of Dr. McIlmoyle came as a great shock to the whole district. The esteem in which he was held was silently testified to by the great throngs of town and country people that packed the street the day of his funeral, among whom were many women silently weeping at the loss of the man whose skill and sympathy had so endeared him.

William David McIlmoyle was born in Fraserville, Township of Monaghan, Ontario, August 8th, 1884. After leaving public school he attended high school at Millbrook and Peterborough. After a brilliant course at Toronto University he graduated in 1908, and immediately took post-graduate courses in Bellevue Hospital, New York, and Greenwich Hospital, Connecticut, where he took a special course in surgery. After a short time in Peterborough, he came to Bracebridge, and purchase the practice and residence of Dr. Colbeck in November, 1909. His practice in the past seven years grew to be very large and his name quickly became a household word for skill and kindness.

Shortly after beginning work in town he married Miss Ethel Jackson, daughter of Mr. Thos. Jackson of Ida. Two little boys and a baby girl have been left fatherless by this untimely death. His mother and two rothers, James R. of Lindsay, Stanley H. of Fraserville are also left to mourn his loss.

His death was due to heart failure and came with terrible suddenness. Though an unusually strong man, weighing 200 pounds, without superfluous flesh, his life snapped under conditions that would have only slightly inconvenienced many weak persons. There was nothing about the operation to cause any alarm; he simply had an unusually weak heart.

The funeral service at his late residence was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Pue Gilchrist of Knox Presbyterian Church, who spoke very feelingly of the fine man thus cut off. Burial took place at St. Thomas' cemetery, the last sad rites being performed by Rev. F. H. Hinks, M.A.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. W. W. Hubbs, Toronto; Jas. A. McDonald, Peterborough; C. H. Stewart, M. Bechtel, G. F. Gibson, and Alex. Milne. The C. O. F. attended as a body. Many floral tokens of respect were sent.—Muskoka Herald.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—At the Collegiate Institute last evening some pupils gave an entertainment to raise funds. I was told by those in charge for the purpose of providing memorials of the pupils killed in France. The entertainment was, however, of a very high order until it reached the camp fire scene, when the stories told were of so shameless irreverent a kind that it made all religious people most uneasy. These young men, I am told, have Y.M.C.A. and other advantages, but if so they are a dreadful example of present day methods of bringing up children. If the name of our Lord can be so unfeelingly used what could others expect. It is but a further step down to another.

PROTEST AGAINST EMBARGO

OTTAWA, March 5.—Protesting against the imposition by the Federal Government of any embargo against the export of potatoes from the Dominion, a deputation representing the New Brunswick potato exchange, waited upon Sir George Foster, and Hon. Martin Burrell this morning.

They declared if an embargo were imposed the price would be reduced sufficiently to discourage the farmers raising potatoes this year, but not sufficient to provide potatoes for the working man at a price he was able to pay.

Some Cards Not Yet In

The time for the return of the National Service cards by those who have not yet returned them, or have returned them improperly signed has been extended to March 31st, 1917, and further cards have been issued to the postmasters for distribution among those who have made default.

It is understood that the returns from this Military District have been most gratifying. There are however, even in this district, a number who have not yet made their returns. The National Service Board has expressed the wish that everyone in the district will use his or her very best efforts in order to make the returns from this district as nearly perfect as possible.

Farm Labourers From the States

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 5.—Agents of the colonization branch of the Department of Agriculture, have brought to Toronto from New York State fifteen experienced farm hands who were immediately placed with Ontario farmers at $35 to $40 a month. Men are also being secured from the State of Michigan and distributed to Ontario points from Port Huron. The Department has received to date over 300 applications from Ontario farmers for farm labourers.

DEFECTIVE CHIMNEY CAUSED BLAZE ON ANTRIM STREET

Sacred Heart Church Debt Is Reduced To $9000

The debt on the Church of the Sacred Heart has been reduced to $9,000, Bishop O'Brien announced yesterday morning when he visited the South end parish. Owing to the scarcity of priests His Lordship was unable to obtain a relieving curate to assume the duties of Rev. J. V. McAuley, who is recovering from a recent operation at St. Joseph's Hospital. Bishop O'Brien celebrated the 8.30 mass and before the sermon, presented the pastor's report of the affairs of the church during the past year. The Sunday collections for the building fund had amounted to $3,617.05, the Easter offering $580.60, and the Christmas offering $665.90. It was very satisfactory, Bishop O'Brien remarked, that the church debt had been so easily reduced. It had been a burden to no one, and in the regular contributions on Sunday no one had felt it. The annual social had proved a great help, and the parish was in a good financial condition.

It is expected, although Bishop O'Brien did not mention it yesterday, that a permanent residence will be built on the church property this summer for the pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, and his assistant. Only four marriages at the church last year was not a proportionate number from the parish. His Lordship hoped for a big improvement in that respect. The congregation was progressing in its spiritual affairs, and was altogether in a very satisfactory condition.

The late Maurice Mulcahey had made a bequest of $500 to the church.

Bishop O'Brien preached on the text, "This is the will of God, your salvation."

Music & Drama

"BRINGING UP FATHER."

The two largest houses of the season greeted Father in Politics at the Grand Opera House Friday afternoon and evening. Every seat was taken long before time for the curtain to ring up, and hundreds missed one of the liveliest theatrical treats of the season. All through the show ran those innumerable and original puns and jokes and pleasantries that kept the audience in laughter every minute of the night. This was nicely interwoven with some of the catchiest music heard from behind the footlights in a long time here. The cast lived up to its name, and by excellent acting made the most of every situation in the play. Parts of the performance were decidedly novel and of the "Bringing Up Father" hits, Father in Politics proved to be the biggest of them all, as far as Peterborough is concerned. Dick Simons, formerly of this city, was with the company as stage carpenter and was given an ovation when he appeared in a minor role. The performance was not only remarkably well acted, but the chorus work was usually good, and the musical end of the comedy was well taken care of.

A HAMILTON VERSION OF FRIDAY'S GAME

Great Praise For Peterboro' Defence Which Held the Hams at Bay For Three Quarters of the Game--Big Celebration After the Game.

The Hamilton Herald has the following on Friday's game:

Kitchener doesn't have to make that long trip to Peterborough after all. And the Petes don't have to do any further worrying over the prospects of Bobby Armstrong, their star centre player, being in shape for the final round.

The Petes are out, and the Hams are once again back on the screen. The locals never should have been ejected out of the chase even temporarily. This much they proved last night when they administered an 8 to 1 lacing to the 247th Battalion team down east, winning the round by 11 goals to 10. The victory was scored after the most exciting and anxious 20 minutes that Hamilton hockey lovers have ever been subjected to.

The winning goal, from the stick of Alex. Murray, came with but four seconds of actual play remaining. It was Murray, who also tied up the score on the round eight minutes previous.

Hamilton had all the better of the play in every period and were head and shoulders over the visitors, proving conclusively that they are the better team, and that they must have been in a state of coma when they invaded Peterborough on Tuesday night last.

The teams were tied at the end of the first period—1 to 1. Hamilton grabbed a two-goal lead in the second session, making it 3 to 1, and came on in the last chapter with five more. Every goal was needed.

Victory was sweet. While the locals predominated throughout the entire proceedings, they were not getting results from their herculean efforts, and it looked like a hopeless task for them to score five times in the last frame. But the unexpected happened, and the round honours are resting comfortably here.

Peterborough's strong defence — Halpin and Flanagan — kept the Hams at bay for the first two periods. Shot after shot was rained on goal-keeper Legros, but the bulk of them were made from outside the defence and were somewhat easy for him to handle. The locals absolutely refused to even attempt to beat the visiting pair, it being quite evident that they learned their strength in Peterborough.

In the last period, however, with every man on the team with the exception of Sloan up on the forward line, the defence of the invaders had little chance to stop the home crew. The puck was constantly in the 247th's end of the rink, and the shots that Legros stopped were so numerous that the actual count was lost. Five got pas him, but this was but a very small percentage of the number fired in his vicinity.

This is how the last period was described:

When the teams hopped into action in the third period there were few, if any, who expected Hamilton to overhaul the 6-goal lead secured in Peterborough. The Hams had all the better of the first two periods and were in possession of a 3 to 1 margin, but there wasn't much chance conceded them of scoring the five goals necessary to give them the decision on the round. Even the most rabid supporter couldn't have been expected to wager a plugged dime on the round.

But—Well, it's just those unexpected happenings that made hockey the great game it is. The Hams were determined. The mere glory of winning the home game by a few goals meant nothing to them. They had to get five goals or go into the discard where they placed the London club one week previous. With this spirit they set sail, and what a great voyage they indulged in!

Nothing Doing For Six Minutes.

For the first six minutes of the thrilling period the home lads pestered Goal-keeper Legros until he must have been dizzy with fright but nary a shot could they sneak past his wonderful defence. It looked like a vain hope, but, with that bull-dog tenacity that has been a strong feature of their play, the red-shirts kept up the bombardment. They knew that, strong as he was, Legros must sooner or later weaken under such a fusilade. Just as he big hand on Timer Hugh Waldeck's stop-watch reached the six-minute mark, Billy Coir bulged the twine. It came on a neat play, and the Petes' margin was reduced to three goals. That one goal proved the turning point. The Hams came on like stake horses and the visitors stood still. They tried like heroes toward off the inevitable, but they were unequal to the task. Coach 'Cy' McKeon sent orders for Parker and Reise, the local defence players, to allow Sloane to take care of himself and for them to join in the attack from the front trenches. With this order the assault was on in real earnest.

Gruelling times commenced for the Petes and Legros had to be a mighty strong lad in the nets to prevent the oncoming Hams from smothering him with their drives. After another three minutes of steady attack, Billy Coir again counted. Victory was on her way sure, but time was flying, and the crowd roared expectantly in the hope that the score on the round would at least be tied before the final gong was sounded. Hardly had the cheering died away after Coir scored his second goal of the period when the plucky little C.M.R. soldier scored again. He did the trick in exactly ten seconds, getting the puck on he face-off and beating Legros with a well-placed and wicked shot.

The score was now 6 to 1 on the game and 10 to 9 on the round in Peterborough's favour.

Alex. Murry Evened it up.

The next minute, which was the time it took for the locals to even matters up, seemed like a life-time. But the much-cherished counter came with a bang, and it was Alex. Murray, the game left wing who was responsible for it. His rough voyage throughout the entire game was forgotten by him in this moment of need and he made a great play in tieing up the score. Even in the heat of the struggle, let's hesitate to say a word for Murray. He put up a great game. Early in the battle he received a nasty cut over the right eye from Pat Flanagan's stick, but he stuck to his guns in great style, and played an even better game than he exhibited in London. He was checking like a fiend from start to finish, and proved by his all-round behaviour that he has finally rounded into form. It was indeed a great night for Alex.

When the score was finally evened up, nine minutes still remained, and while the local attack kept up incessantly, a little more care was shown. Reise and Parker were sent back to play their positions and the forwards were left to carry on the bombardment of the Legros citadel. They worked like trojans but couldn't register, while the crowd, by this time, intoxicated with excitement pleaded for the winning goal. But half a minute remained to go, when the Hams made their last successful effort. The play was transferred again into the Petergorough end of the rink, and Legros was called on to make several quick moves to save the situation. He jumped around like a jumping-jack, but Alex. Murray rushed in at an opportune time and finally scored. The winning score came with only four seconds left to play.

It was one of those finishes that one generally reads about in a dime novel.

It was a nerve-wrecker. The victory was well-deserved, and Hamilton can compliment itself on possessing a club made up of boys who never believe they are defeated until they are counted out.

How can a club of that kind be denied a championship? Bring on Kitchener.

Such a scene as was enacted when Hamilton jumped into the lead with but four seconds of the last period remaining has never been seen here before and will hardly be witnessed again. The grown-ups went wild with delight, tossed their hats in the air, hugged each other and did numerous other stunts that would cause them to become insulted if they were accused of them to-day.

It was an hour of rejoicing, and the victory-crazed crowd took full advantage of it.

Some of the most enthusiastic chaps started the Arena organ pealing out its choicest music, and it was well after midnight before the Arena was cleared.

And why shouldn't the crowd have its inning? Such a rousing wind-up was really unexpected, and one of the best things that has been pulled off in sporting circles in many a day.

The Herald has the following:

Whew!

Have you recovered from the excitement yet?

Now, tell the truth: Wouldn't you have sold your bet for a shilling before that last period?

Did you ever hold a 'full-house' with a nice, big pot staring you in the face only to have another chap come along and top you? Well, if you did, you can imagine the feelings of the Peterborough soldiers when their apparently safe lead was snatched from them in the last minute's play.

It was a cruel blow for Hamilton to win, and a hard one for Peterborough to lose.

President Bob Parker, Coach 'Cy' McKeon and the other local club officials, who saw the game in Peterborough, insisted that Hamilton was by far the better team. They were right.

The Petes were a dejected lot after the game. They sat in their dressing room as if they had lost their best friend. It certainly was hard for them, however, and some of those who were celebrating the local victory couldn't help but feel sorry for them when they peeped in and saw them.

"On to Berlin.

Hamilton is now only two hours from the championship. Any team that battles like hey did to overhaul Peterborough deserves the title.

London is a better team than Peterborough looked to be last night.

Even the wildest celebrations that Hamilton has boasted of in the palmy days of football couldn't touch that's of last night. The crowd was wild with delight.

Five goals in 13.56 is a fine showing. But it had to be done.

Every man on the Hamilton team worked his head off in the last period. Peterborough was on the defensive every minute.

Frank Sloan's work in the nets was in direct contrast to his performance in Peterborough. He made some clever saves.

Peterborough, in Pat Flanagan and Halpin, possesses one of the strongest defences in the intermediate ranks. They commanded the respect of the Hams throughout, and kept them shooting from outside until the last period when the entire local team went up on the line.

Legros may be a lucky goal-guardian, but he also possesses a great amount of ability. He had more shots to take care of than any goal-keeper who has appeared here this season, and it was only due to his wonderful work that only eight got past him. He had little or no chance to stop those five in the final period. Four of them were from close in, and his entire team was around him.

ALEX. ARCHIBALD WON FINAL GAME OF OPEN BONSPIEL

OPEN BONSPIEL WINNERS.

J. K. Costain, lead.
F. Brownscombe, second.
M. C. Tooley, vice-skip.
A. W. Archibald, skip.

By the score of 20-6, Alex. Archibald's rink captured the highest honours in the open bonspiel, defeating Dr. Wightman in the final game of the primary round. The rinks were as follows:

J. K. Costain	J. W. Parkins.
F. Brownscombe	Capt. Soden
M. C. Tooley	J. Wiley
A. W. Archibald, Skip.....20	Dr. Wightman, Skip.....6

By ends—
Archibald ... ... 2003030402110—20
Wightman .. ... 0110100101000l— 6

Archibald's rink got away to an early lead and swept through the fourteen ends irresistibly. Two four and two three ends put them on easy street, and the bigger the lead the better they played.

Skip Archibald is to be congratulated upon winning this open bonspiel. He represents the untried skips, those who have been raised up from the ranks within the last year or two. In his progress to the finals he had put out of the running some of the old guard, and in Dr. Wightman he met one of the steadiest and most consistently successful skips in the local club. Nineteen rinks entered the bonspiel, and it remained for a comparatively new skip to curl his way through to the first prizes. The members of his rink gave him good support and were keyed up throughout the game.

Consolation Games.

In the consolation round two games were played.

THE ONLY FOOD THAT CROSSES THE THRESHOLD OF THE BELGIAN PEOPLE

It is difficult for Canadians to realize what the civil population of Belgium are fighting against. With industry paralyzed, imports suddenly stopped, local supplies of food and materials in part taken over by the invaders, communication and transportation prohibited, currency disappeared, and credit withdrawn, their whole domestic life is in a state of chaos.

When it is remembered that this has occurred in a country with a density of population twenty times greater than that of the United States, whose people have been engaged chiefly in industrial occupations, and lived where previously, less than 40 per cent. of the food consumed was produced locally, some idea of the present state of distress can be imagined.

Famine has for a long time been facing the people, and it is kept at bay only by those heroic workers of the Belgian Relief Commission who are collecting money and supplies from other more fortunate countries, and personally distributing them to the needy ones. In the schools of Belgium every day over one million children are gathered and fed. In hundreds of thousands of homes the only food that crosses the threshold is food distributed by the relief workers.

The total volume of food available for distribution is pitifully less than the requirements, but the people are being kept alive—waiting hungrily for their deliverance from the hand of the invader.

To each hungry woman or child in Belgium the food that a few dollars will provide means all the difference between comparative comfort and bleak misery and suffering. There is hardly a person in Canada who could not spare some small offering that would bring comfort and cheer to Belgium innocents.

The work of collecting money in Canada, and with it buying and despatching food, is being carried out by the Central Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, and branch committees all over Canada. Contributions are invited. They may be sent to any branch committee or direct to headquarters, and will be gratefully acknowledged. A safe steam ship lane has been provided for the passage of relief ships from this continent to Belgium, under an arrangement between the British and German Governments.

TWO MORE WHISKEY CASES HEARD TO-DAY

Two drunks paid $19.85 and $18.60, respectively, into police court this morning after pleading guilty to having been drunk in a public place on February 23rd. One of the men had a supply of whiskey in his house and when his friends dropped around that rainy afternoon he "treated" him to two bumpers of the stuff that's helping make Montreal prosperous.

Not long afterwards, when they had returned to the street, it was simply a matter of some one calling out the police.

ASTONISHES TOURISTS.

Sharp Distinctions Between Australia and New Zealand.

One of the first surprises awaiting the tourist from the northern hemisphere is to find that Australia and New Zealand may not be grouped as two islands of like appearance, differing mainly in size; near neighbours which may be treated as a unit. New Zealand is nearly twice as far from Australia as Bermuda is from New York, and is not only east but also south.

Four days' travel across a chilly sea is required for the traverse from Wellington to Sydney, and after exchanging the chill midsummer climate of the New Zealand lake regions for the heat of Adelaide, one readily accepts the evidence of the map that the southern coast of the mainland has the latitude of Central New Jersey, while the southernmost of the three islands which compose the Dominion of New Zealand occupies the position of Southern Newfoundland.

In climate and vegetation the two dominions are as unlike as Norway and South Carolina. New Zealand is a land of mountains, gorges, rivers, and fjords. The higher peaks of the South Island are eternally snow-capped, and the glaciers of its southern Alps rival those of Switzerland. The surrounding seas are too cold for corals. Among the mountains of the North Island volcanic fires are still active, and the geysers and hot springs are little less impressive than those of the Yellowstone Park. The aboriginal inhabitants of New Zealand, at the time of their discovery by Captain Cook, were the most advanced of all the South Pacific races, while the aborigines of Australia are the lowest in intelligence of all human beings.

Australia is in no sense inferior to New Zealand in geographic interest, but lofty peaks, profound canons, and active volcanoes are lacking; its rivers are unimpressive and its permanent lakes small and few in number; it is a continent composed of plains interrupted by ridges and mountain knobs.—National Geographic Magazine.

NOTICE

Here is where you get your money's worth, that is at the Tis It Theatre. On Saturday night the hundreds of people left the Tis It Theatre, all that could be heard was "that's the kind of show to give." This is where we do see a good show and what's more they certainly put up the music. Apart from this the management expects a greater report for this week.

To-night for our vaudeville we have Sergeant Victor and Baby Irene Jones and we are sure both will do justice to our patrons for Monday and Tuesday along with a first class line of pictures, including the 5th episode of the Purple Mask. On Wednesday and Thursday we have that beautiful photo play The Rosary in 7 parts, during this Mr. Blyth will render some good numbers which will complete the bill. Don't forget the Rosary Wednesday and Thursday.

Barrister Stinson Mentioned As O.C. of 252nd Bn.

LINDSAY, March 5. —Who will be the new commanding officer of the 252 Battalion, of Victoria and Haliburton?

This is a question that has often been heard on the streets lately, and added interest was given to the rumour when the name of Mr. T. H. Stinson, Crown Attorney, was mentioned. Barrister Stinson was in Ottawa on business and when interviewed regarding the rumour he stated that it was the first he had heard of it.

Why hurry to reach the top of the ladder if you are going to fall off when you get there?

Inspiring Sermon By The Rev. C. W. Barrett of Lakefield

Speaker Emphasized the Undesirability of the Easy Way in Life—Ultimate Failure is Bound to Come to the Man Who Follows the Line of Least Resistance.

"I know you will say that men are not persecuted to-day for righteousness, and that it is no longer a hardship to follow Jesus. But I tell you that if you followed him more closely than you do you would find more hardships than you might imagine." That was the challenge thrown out at the George street church yesterday morning by Rev. Barrett, Lakefield, in his sermon emphasizing the undesirability of the easy way in life—the ultimate failure bound to come to a life spent in following the line of least resistance. By way of illustration he pointed out that one may be socially "left out" by living up to their convictions. "Girls and young men who will not dance or play cards often find the doors of certain homes shut to them. "Not slammed in their faces," said Mr. Barrett, "but just closed—and barred, too."

St. James' Anniversary.

Rev. Mr. Barrett spoke at St. James' church in the evening, in connection with the anniversary services there, and in the morning occupied the George street pulpit for the pastor, Rev. Mr. Peever, who was at St. James'.

In the morning, at George street church, Mr. Barrett took as his text the 24th verse of the 16th Chapter of Matthew, which reads: "Then Jesus said to his disciples, if any man will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me."

We are conscious in the church today of a decided lack of power. There was a lack of power in prayer and service and sacrifice, and in the bringing of men to God, and these things could not be remedied by might and power, but only by the spirit of Almighty God. All power comes from God, and He is willing to communicate to us all the power in the world that we need. Perhaps this text indicates just why we are weak in our service to God.

The price of the needed power of life is indicated in this text. One of the great natural laws is the law of price. Everything in the world has its price. We can get the cheap things if we want them, or we can get the good things, but did any one every get satisfaction out of a cheap thing? On the other hand if we get satisfaction from a thing, we never think of the price. It is too bad if, when we can get the good thing, we are satisfied with the cheap thing in life.

Cheap Religion.

Too many to-day are putting up with cheap religion. Is it true we are unwilling to pay the price? A follower of Christ need not necessarily be a pillar of the church, nor a brilliant Bible student. The only condition was that he must follow in the footprints of Jesus. It was no easy thing for Him to follow the path of duty. He had no place to lay his head. He came unto his own and they received him not. Time and time again the mob would gladly have stoned him, and finally came the last treacherous conspiracy that ended on Calvary. But, seemingly oblivious of the consequences. He went His way telling the people of their sins and denouncing their falseness. He abandoned Himself to the one great purpose. He was criticized, and despised and insulted on every hand. Indeed it was not an easy thing for Jesus to push on in the path before Him.

Have we, then, any right to expect it to be easy for us to follow Him? The text reads, "If any men will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me." That "if" made the matter an open question. And a good many people to-day are quite content to let it remain an open question.

Not Persecuted.

It was said that righteousness was not persecuted to-day. But what about that young man of splendid family away over in India? He hears the Gospel message thinks upon it, believes it and determines to follow Jesus. His mother disuades him. His determination remains unshaken and finally his father casts him off and his brothers and sisters disown him. That is a long way off? Oh yes. But many of the men, if they would follow Jesus a little more closely would find more hardship.

One of the members of Rev. Mr. Barrett's church who was also a school teacher, was asked to dine at a Roman Catholic home. She accepted and after supper was invited to play cards. She declined, saying she did not play, and the host vented his surprise, saying, "I don't know another Methodist in town that does not play cards."

"I am sorry he could say that," said Mr. Barrett. "But I know the Methodists in Lakefield even better than he, and I do know of others who do not play cards or dance. "When one does not play cards or dance, he may find he is "left out" socially. It was only a question then of being neglected on some of these occasions, or of living according to true convictions of right and wrong. It is a question of living up to a standard or down to the level of the world. "That, young people," said the speaker, "is your challenge."

Deny Ourselves.

"Let him deny himself," said the text. There was not a sin but, upon investigation, would be found to be some form of self. To follow Him we must deny ourselves. As Luke says, "Let him deny himself daily." That "daily" is an important word there, as we are apt to deny ourselves today but go back to the old life to-morrow. We should think of ourselves as having a throne and a cross in our hearts. When "self" is on the throne, Jesus is on the cross; and when "self" is on the cross, Jesus is on the throne.

We all have the "decision of the forks" to make. There are two roads—one broad and smooth and downward. The other not so inviting or well travelled, but leading upward into a broader vision and better air. We must make our choice. Did ease yet ever take a man to a place of satisfaction? Never. The hard way is always the successful way.

Sudden Death of Mr. James Davidson

Well Known Citizen Expired on His Door-step—Funeral To-morrow

The many friends of Mr. James Davidson, 11 Dennistoun avenue, will be shocked to learn of his sudden death from heart failure on Saturday evening last about 6:30 p.m. He had been down town apparently enjoying his usual good health, and just as he reached his door-step he suddenly expired. He leaves to mourn his loss his widow, a daughter of the late George McKee of Smith, and his two daughters, Misses Georgie and Hazel, also his brother, Mr. William Davidson, and his sisters, Mrs. Sam McKibbon of Troy, N.Y., Mrs. Sarah McPherson, and Mrs. George E. Elliott.

Mr. James Davidson was a son of the late James Davidson, who emigrated from the North of Ireland and settled in the Township of Smith nearly one hundred years ago, when the City of Peterborough contained only about seven houses and was not known on the map even as Scott's Plains. He therefore is one of the few fast disappearing links connecting the present generation with the earliest history of Peterborough. He was born in the Towpship of Smith seventy-one years ago, was a very successful farmer and was widely known by a large circle of friends. He was a staunch Liberal in politics and a membes of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

The funeral service will be held at his residence, 11 Dennistoun avenue, on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, and the funeral will take place at 2:30 o'clock.

Usual Reduction In Easter Rates

For some days past the report that the railway companies would not make the usual Easter reduction this year has been the source of much anxiety. Railway officials state, however, that the report is without foundation, admitting that at the meeting early in February the Eastern Canada Passenger Association, complying with the wishes of the Dominion Railway Board that the companies avoid reduced rates, which might result in extra train service being required, rescinded all previous legislation on special or reduced fares.

"In Walked Jimmy"

A Comedy With a Purpose, Here Next Monday Evening

The grand old game of bluff played right up to the notch by a clever young man who possesses "a heart full of love, four dollars and thirty-seven cents and two necktie" is the medium for introducing "In Walked Jimmy," the four-act comedy which brings George Summers and a high-class company of fifteen people to "The Grand" Theatre on Monday next, March 12.

Jimmy, full of sunshine and "pep" to say nothing of a few ideas on the management of a baby shoe factory, has been dispelling gloom for a whole season, and still there are a few people who have never made his acquaintance. More is the pity because Jimmy is worth knowing. Jimmy manages everything. Even Old Sol is on his pay roll, ready at his beck and call to turn on the sunshine in great golden floods whenever gloom threatens to get the upper hand.

Described as "a comedy with a purpose" this play from the pen of Mrs. Ronie H. Jaffa, a clever California playwright, is guaranteed to please because it possesses all the elements of a successful human interest comedy sprinkled with witty dialogue, and abounding in clever situation, and played by a carefully selected and thoroughly capable cast of fifteen under the direction of the United Producing Company.

Easter Finery For Miss Peterborough

A Peep at Some of the Good Things That Will Be Worn at Easter

A peep of New York's spring attire through the eyes of the buyers from Messrs. Richard Hall & Sons' store, many lend an idea to Miss Peterborough for her Easter finery, for, with Easter only four weeks off it is time to do a little more than dream of the fascinating costumes she will wear.

The first thought is generally the Easter bonnet, and what alluring ones there are. They are small but close fitting and shown mostly in fine braids. For early spring ospreys are much in vogue; for later, flowers of every hue and family, wonderful flowers new even to Luther Burbank. The leading houses have quaint little hats in mixtures of black and sand and black and grey, some also are shown in the highest of hues.

The suits are amazingly chic and the combinations of black and white predominate. Cloth is much worn, more in the more elaborate suits; rose, too, comes in for its own. Suit coats are short, exceedingly so, and are mostly belted and have large collars. The skirts, short before, are shorter still, and in the suits not so wide.

The separate dresses are more elaborate than ever and georgette crepe seems to be the favourite material; though taffeta still holds a place. The georgette dresses are elaborately beaded and show a tendency to wider skirts and like the suits, shorter. The pastile shades are used in the dresses, grey and maize being the favourite.

The sports goods are positively irresistible, and the khaki-kool is the prevailing material shown in the bright shades of gold, chartreuse and rose. The brightest Paddy green, too, is used extensively.

The separate coats have huge collars and large pockets.

Miss New York defies the price of leather and wears her boots higher than ever. The lighter tones in boots predominate and grey seems to be the favourite shade.

No costume is complete without a fancy beaded bag to harmonize with some detail of the wearer's costume. They have grown to be positively indispensible to the well dressed.

Wilson Neutrality Act Is Blocked

The chair recognized Senator Hitchcock and Lafollette's opportunity was snatched away.

THE CLOSING SCENE.

The closing moments of the session were tense and impressive. Ten minutes before the end Senator Hitchcock had made his last appeal for unanimous consent for a vote on the bill. Lafollette objected. The Nebraska Senator, prefacing his closing remarks with a portion of President Wilson's address to Congress asking for the authority about to be denied, solemnly said:

"It is unfortunate and deplorable that twelve men in the Senate of the United States have used their power to defeat the will of 75 or 80 members by one of the most reprehensible filibusters ever recorded in the history of any civilized country."

Just as Senator Hitchcock uttered these words the hour of noon struck and the sixty-fourth Congress was ended.

President Wilson issued a statement to-night declaring that through the action of a few Senators it had proved impossible to have passed legislation meeting the present critical international situation and other bills of va importance to the nation. He said I believed that in the special meetir of the Senate already called for t morrow, the rules should be amend so that action could be taken. I did not disclose his policy on the ar ing of merchantmen.

OXO CUBES in "No Man's Land"

The following is an interesting letter received from France:—

"You may be interested to hear that I undoubtedly owe my life to the valuable properties of your OXO CUBES. On the——an attack was made on the German trenches .....

"I reached a spot nine yards from the German trenches uninjured, but it was useless going on. I fell where I was, and, lying quite still, was taken for dead. It was exactly a week before our men made another attack, and during the whole of that time I had to lie where I had fallen. It was certain death to try and reach our own trenches. During that week I existed on a biscuit and a tin of OXO CUBES. I ate the biscuit on the first day and the rest of the time lived entirely on OXO CUBES. I am now in hospital recovering from the effects of my week's exposure, but there is little doubt that without the warming and stimulating effects of OXO I could not have survived while lying there."

From France:—

"I have been a constant user of OXO ever since I came out here and I would not be without it.

"It is a pity that its value is not even more widely known, for there is nothing better for a man who has to face the rigours of winter campaigning."

OXO CUBES exactly meet the needs of our fighting forces in every part of the world. They aid and increase nutrition and stimulate and build up strength to resist climatic changes; they are invaluable for all who have to undergo exertion either to promote fitness or to recuperate after fatigue. They take up little space, are easily carried, and can be converted quickly into a hot nourishing drink which, with bread or biscuits, will sustain for hours.

OXO CUBES are equally valuable in the Home.

Be sure to send OXO CUBES

Tins of 4, 10, 50 and 100 Cubes.

$35.00 for a Navy French Serge Suit $35.00

The charm of navy never subsides, its favor knows no bounds. This one is doubly attractive because of the quality. It is built on the straight line effect. The coat owes its effectiveness to the large, square pockets with rows of white stitchings—the large sailor collar is here in desirable dimensions, and the deep cuffs are also prominent; the addition of an extra white collar and fancy sleeves are also worthy of note. Skirt is pocketed and pleated sides. Price $35.00

Pre-Possessing Sand Coloured Suit $42.50

The Russian model does not sound at all new, but we venture to say you never saw anything just after this model and we feel justified in calling it the new Russian model. To begin with the sand shade will attract your attention, secondly the large saddle pockets will meet with your favor—but just here let us not forget the large collar, button up front style trimmed with the season's innovation clock stitching; finished a neat belt arrangement. Skirt cut with full sides and also saddle pocketed ..... Price $42.50

Suits of Fashionable Shuddah Cloth $45.00

Shuddah Cloth is one of the season's novelties, in shades of reseda, Copenhagen and sand. The reseda is in smart pleated design with new double breasted effect, this itself makes a striking appearance, but not obtrusive, the collar perhaps is the most outstanding feature with its impressive size and over-lay of white silk. Skirt follows coat lines with panels of pleats down the front and back. Price $45.00

Suit of Serge in African Brown $30.00

The handsome box pleated arrangement on this garment makes an appeal all its own, but the alluring colour must not be forgotten, it is a pleasing shade of brown, charmingly relieved by the sand coloured collar and cuffs which in turn are bedecked with brown corded silk stitching. Skirt is full at sides and are pocketed. A decidedly smart garment. Particularly Low Price $30.00

INTERESTING LETTER FROM PETERBOR' SOLDIER OVERSEAS

Private Hugh Maguire of the Army Medical Corps Witnessed the Opening Of the "Victory Session" of Parliament

The following interesting letter has been received from Private Hugh S. Maguire, of the Canadian—Medical Stores, London, England.

I have been on duty in London for about six months now, and like it very well except the rotten climate, with which this city seems to be afflicted.

Lately it has been quite cold and snowy and in consequence of the sharp frosts all the ponds and lakes in the country present an expanse of ice, which I believe has been crowded with skaters. These latter, I believe are mostly English, as none of us Canadians, myself included, have our own skates over here and we are distrustful of the kind used by the "natives."

This last—"the natives"—is rather good, don't you think? It is by way of being a reprisal against the British for calling us "colonials." If there is anything that makes us Canadians peeved over here, it is to be spoken of very casually as colonials.

I was lucky enough to be right close to the curb at the Houses of Parliament on the occasion of the formal opening of Parliament—the victory session, by the way they call it over here—and saw the whole procession.

Special constables of the city of London police were used to line the way and through this drove their Majesties, the King and Queen, accompanied by mounted escorts of officers and men of the various colonies, now helping the motherland.

First came King George and Queen Mary in an open carriage, drawn by six horses, followed by carriages, containing various high officials of the army and navy, then in turn, the escorts representing India, Canada, Australia and Newfoundland, New Zealand and South Africa.

They all trotted by at a sharp pace and in no time it was all over. Amongst the celebrities, I noticed Viscount French, Sir William Robertson, Chief of Staff, and Admiral Sir John Jellicoe. The others in the carriages with them I did not know. The whole affair, royal though it was, was purposely made extremely quiet and simple, but it was none the less impressive for that.

The Australian bodyguard, as usual, looked the best in my opinion, with their picturesque turned up hats and waving plumes. The New Zealanders were a close second in the popular esteem with stetson hats and a narrow red and green band around them—the hats that is, there is nothing green about the men!

Our good Canadians were awarded second place in the procession, right after India, and very good they looked, too, except that they had nothing to distinguish them from the Imperial troops, except their brass Canada's on the shoulders.

We have not been visited by Zepps for months and indeed the people seem to have given up looking for them when night draws on.

An exhibition of relics of wrecked Zeppelins, brought down here last Fall is on now in Bond street, but so far I have not taken it in.

The Canadian war photographs on exhibition at the Grafton Galleries a month or so ago were exceedingly good, albeit very grim and terrible. They were quite the talk of the town while they were on view, and all London tried to get a peep at them. I understand that the King drove up one day to see them, but the place was so crowded he was forced to abandon the idea for a more opportune time.

Bridegroom Refused To "Come Across" So They Parted

Joseph and Anna Friedman, 68 and 65 years old, had just been married at the New York Municipal Building and were going down in the elevator, when the bride turned to Mr. Friedman, a tutor, and said:

"I'll be the boss of our establishment, so you better hand over what money you have in your pocket."

"No, no; I've been my own boss since I left my mother's home fifty years ago and it is too late to be bossed now," he replied.

That was the beginning of a quarrel that caused the couple to separate before they could establish a home to be "bossed," and which was reviewed in the Domestic Relations Court. They were married seven months ago, parted ten minutes later and had not seen each other until they apepared in court. Mrs. Friedman, living at No. 296 East 102nd street, demanded support.

"You were both too old to think of marrying. I order Friedman to pay his wife $1 a week," said the magistrate.

Recruiting Falls Off in the Third Military District

KINGSTON, March 3. — Recruiting for the last week of February went away below the standard that has made the third Military District lead Canada for months past. There were 453 new men signed up in the various units.

The winner of the Hughes trophy for the last two weeks in February is the Queen's Field Ambulance Corps, which secured 48 recruits.

There are now 5,831 overseas volunteers training in this district.

Of the 400 men enlisted in the 273rd Queen's Highland Battalion, it was found that the Church of England leads with 104, the Roman Catholics are second with 101, Methodists 64, and Presbyterians 60. Eighty per cent. of the recruits are Canadian-born.

SON SILENT, SHE ENDS LIFE

Mrs. Minnick Had Become Worried by Reading of Submarines.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Mrs. Ella Minnick received a letter about six weeks ago from her son, engineer of a steamship stating that he would leave Liverpool for New York in two weeks. Since then she had heard nothing from him but had read much of submarines sinking vessels and became greatly worried. Neighbours smelled gas and caused a policeman to break in the door of her apartment at No. 977 West 122nd street.

Mrs. Minnick was found dead, with all the gas jet open. Near her was a bull dog Sport, who had been poisoned by gas and it was necessary for a policeman to shoot him. Mrs. Minnick's husband, Albert Minnick, is in the hay and feed business in Newark. She was forty-five years old.

DUTTON TO PURCHASE MOTOR FIRE ENGINE

Ratepayers' Meeting Demands Increased Efficiency to Protect Homes and Stores

DUTTON, March 5—A general meeting of the ratepayers of Dutton, was held to consider ways and means of providing better fire protection for the village. Reeve D. G. McCallum officiated in the chair, and a goodly number of citizens were in attendance.

A motion, that the present system of fire protection is unsatisfactory to the ratepayers, was carried almost unanimously after considerable discussion. The meeting was addressed by G. B. Hartlock of Toronto, an expert on fire protection and fire fighting apparatus.

Various types of fire engines were considered, and different means of procuring an adequate supply of water were discussed. The council will be recommended at its regular meeting next Monday night to purchase a gasoline driven fire engine, and to procure a suitable water supply.

HOPE AND SONS SUE CAR FOUNDRY

TORONTO, March 3. — An action brought by Henry Hope and Sons against the Canada Foundry Company, was heard before Mr. Justice Latchford in the Non-Jury Assize Court on Thursday afternoon. On September 19, 1913, the Canada Foundry Company ordered steel sash from the Hope Co., of Birmingham, England, to be used in the construction of the C.P.R. Hotel at Calgary. Defendants refused to accept the completed work, claiming that the Hope Company contract was only a sub-contract of the P. Lyall Construction Co., and owing to delay in delivery the latter company had lost the contract. Plaintiffs claim that the contract was not cancelled until the major portion of the work had been completed. The delay is reported to have been partially due to a strike in the Hope factories.

Exterminating Arabs By Infecting Them With Typhus Germ

LONDON, March 5.—Information received in authoritative quarters in London shows that the Turks are carrying out a deliberate policy of destruction of Arabs, having apparently for its object their extermination, as in the case of the Armenians.

They surrounded the whole region of the Lebanon with a military cordon to stop food getting through, with the result that about half the Christian and Druse Arabs in that zone have died of starvation.

The Turks have devastated Syria and Palestine on the pretext of getting fuel, olive trees and orange gardens having been ruined. They have deported large numbers of the most illustrious Arab families and have hanged on the flimsiest pretext all Arab leaders on whom they could lay their hands, no matter whether they were pro or anti-Turk.

In the matter of the agricultural population they have pressed them more heavily with conscription than any other section of the Turkish people, and have exposed them on all the worst fronts.

Such individuals as have been left behind have been infected with typhus by deliberately sendinng into the villages thypus-stricken Armenians to act as carriers of the disease. Fortunately, however, Arab vitality is very strong.

The Turks are trying to do away with the Arabic language, and also to eliminate Arabic from the Mohammedan religion by introducing non-Arabic prayers.

When a man wants to make sure he is right before going ahead he may find himself distanced by a less conservative individual who was willing to take some chances.

CRAWLS BEFORE 6,000 PEOPLE.

ORANGE, N.J., March 2. — The Rev. Dr. Milford H. Lyon, who is conducting an evangelistic campaign in a tabernacle in East Orange, crawled on his hands and knees before 6,000 persons to demonstrate how thirty-nine members of the New Jersey Legislature, on Monday night fell for the brewery interests by defeating the local option bill.

"If men will get down in the mud and crawl at the behest of booze interests, and when brewers, saloon keepers and bartenders have influence with our Legislature, it is time for all good people to get down on their hands and knees in humility and prayer," the evangelist declared.

If you are fond of pumpkin pies, and have no pumpkins, have you ever tried substituting carrots? Cook and prepare them the same as you would the pumpkin, and you'll find it hard to tell which is the better.

Trial For Officer In Disloyalty Case

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 5.—Lieutenant George W. Krapf, attached to the Signal Corps Aviation School, at North Island, as aviation student, and recently was accused of being pro-German, is to be tried by court martial for disrespect to his superior officer, according to advices received from Western Department headquarters.

When Lieutenant Krapf was haled before Colonel William Glassford, commandant of the aviation school, and asked to refute certain charges of disloyal conduct he refused, and instead telegraphed to Major General Bell to appoint a special board of inquiry to hear the charges. General Bell has ordered such a board convened, but at the same time, it is said, has approved charges preferred against Lieutenant Krapf for the latter's disrespectful attitude toward Colonel Glassford.

To The Automobile Buying Public

I am now in a position to offer you the Ford Car either with or without the Self Starter.

Last November I received a Ford Car with an A.B.C. Electric Starter and Lighting System, which was designed by the Head Electrician of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit. This starter has been in continuous use day in and day out ever since, on a demonstrating car, which has caused it to be used an exceedingly unusual amount, and yet it has never been altered or adjusted nor has it had the battery re-charged, and it has started the car each and every time since it was put on, the starting crank having been removed.

From experience I know that this Starter is reliable and effective in every particular and I am in a position to highly recommend it to any person wishing a car with a Starter.

My salesman will be in the Show Room day and evening for the purpose of demonstrating and conferring with all persons interested.

JOS. J. DUFFUS

INDUCTED INTO SECOND TERM

(By Carl B. Grout.)

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Flanked by thousands upon thousands of his own countrymen, President Wilson was inducted into his second term to-day.

The spirit of the time harked back to the day of Lincoln. The thrill and solemnity of war and stamped upon the simple, democratic ceremony, though a strain of peace ran through the proceedings, too.

It was just 12:47 o'clock when President Wilson kissed the Bible, completing the oath which he had taken twice within two days.

Standing with bared head, he accepted the solemn serious gift of a nation still at peace, but touched on all sides by the flames of war.

Beside the blare of martial music, behind the patriotic clamour of throngs, behind the pomp and splendour of marching soldiers, marines, civilians, the war note rang clear.

The President himself sounded it, saying we might perforce be compelled to take a more active part in the great struggle.

HOBOKEN, N.J., March 5.—A wholesale bomb plot, including a possible plan of attack on President Wilson was believed to have been revealed here this afternoon in the arrest of Fritz Kolb, in a local hotel room, in which were found several bombs and quantities of explosives.

Mid-week prayer service will be held on Wednesday night.

A meeting of the ladies for Red Cross work will be held on Thursday.

Next Sunday will be anniversary Sunday. Rev. A. H. Going, of Lindsay, will be the special preacher.

Rev. J. H. Edmison At St. Andrew's

Rev. J. H. Edmison gave a most interesting address last night at St. Andrew's church on the call from home missions.

Mr. Edmison, who is an old Peterborough boy and ex-pupil of St. Andrew's Sunday school, has now become secretary of the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian church and knows the field throughout from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He spoke of the increased call in mission fields on account of war conditions. The field has, up to now, been manned largely by students during their vacation and many of these having enlisted, the vacancies have been, to a certain extent, filled by students from American colleges.

Just now the great problem is not so much in the west as in the big cities. The congested parts are filled largely with foreigners, and these present a hopeful though difficult field for mission activities. There are thousands of Jews, Russians, Hungarians, etc., who have not been evangelized in Montreal and Toronto. In the west the thousands of Ruthenians present a big problem and must be cared for spiritually.

Mr. Edmison in conclusion said he could not understand how any man calling himself a Christian could fail to respond to the call for men and money in this greatest of religious problems.

Mr. Edmison had no idea of speaking when he came to St. Andrew's but Rev. Mr. Mitchell on noticing him in the congregation asked him to come forward and speak, which he did, though suffering from a severe cold.

Studio Tea At The Conservatory

On Saturday afternoon the pupils of Miss Olive Johnson gave a most enjoyable studio tea and recital at the Conservatory of Music. A varied and attractive programme was rendered, about twelve pupils taking part. Two of Miss Logan's violin pupils assisted; and Miss Georgie Cuff, soprano, pupil of Mr. MacLean, sang most artistically, Ashford's "My Task." Altogether the programme was one of the most interesting of the Saturday afternoon series, and was much enjoyed by a large number of friends of the pupils present.

Sanitary Inspector Appointment To-night

The regular monthly meeting of the City Council will be held this evening, following a meeting of the Railway Committee. One of the chief items of business to be disposed of is the appointment of a sanitary inspector. The choice of the Council may fall on Mr. Charles Stapleton, who, for some time past, has been inspecting shells. The original choice of the Property Committee was Mr. George Metcalfe. The aldermanic mind has changed within the past two weeks, and anything is likely to happen to-night.

TAPIOCA A LA PISTACHIO

Most housewives use tapioca only for simple puddings, but there are many ways to use it in connection with fruit and other foods. Tapioca a la pistachio is made by breaking six macaroons into small pieces, putting them into a deep dish and soaking them in half a gill of sherry. Then scald one-half pint of milk, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and half a teaspoonful of almond extract. Cool and mix in half a pint of whipped cream. Pour into a glass and garnish with chopped pistachio nuts and crushed macaroons.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Prices moved upward on the stock exchange this afternoon, following the appearance of the President's inaugural address on the Wall street tickers. Mercantile marine pref., which broke more than four points at opening to 70 1-2, on failure of the sentes to uphold Wilson's armed neutrality plan advanced this afternoon to 73 1-4; U. S. Steel sold at 109 3-4, up 2 1-8 from Saturday's close. About 600,000 shares had been traded at one o'clock, nearly half of this coming during the first hour.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The feature of the week was the apathy of the stock market and disturbing news. It seems to have become shock proof. The exposure of Germany's intrigue to combine Mexico and Japan against the United States was calculated to produce nervousness. It had just the opposite effect. It tended to unify all interests in the United States for defence measures. Congress stopped its dilatory tactics and hurried to pass measures suggested by the President. All this is helpful to securities. The better the defence the better investments are safeguarded. There was no rush to get out of stocks. On the contrary the small setback was the signal to buy and since the Mexico-Japan plot was laid bare stocks have shown a good recovery.

All this leads to the conclusion that actual war with Germany has been discounted, and it may not come. The ruthless submarine warfare is attracting less and less attention. Our financial interests show increasing confidence in the outlook, politically and every other way. We are to spend some hundreds of millions of dollars for defence. This means large business for many industries and although they will not make such large profits as they obtained from Europe, they will be well paid for their services. This will stimulate industry in many lines. At same time our mills will be kept busy supplying Europe with such products as they have time to turn out. That great activity is assured for months to come is evident.

President Wilson will take protective measures for our commerce promptly after he receives authority and a large auxiliary fleet of submarine chasers is supposed to be on the programme. It will have a temporary effect on sentiment but it will not last long. The determination of this country to defend itself has taken definite shape and public confidence will be increased rather than diminished.

We think another forward movement in stocks is likely to occur soon. It will recognise that the end of the war will be hastened by the latest developments. That American influence in the world's trade will be a potent factor that this country will have much to do with reconstruction of Europe when peace comes, that our enormous increase in wealth will find employment in numerous channels which is calculated to increase rather than diminish the earning power of our leading corporations. We think the best steel and copper stocks, also those of various raw products are a purchase on any little setback, that in due time railroads issues will find much more favour. Many of them look attractive at present prices.

Recipes Worth Keeping At Hand

BREAST OF VEAL AND PEAS

The best part for this is the thick end of the breast, cut into pieces. The pieces are cut with the bone, and then cut into lengths of about two or three inches. Place them in a casserole with one or two onions cut into dice and one ounce fat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover with a lid. Put on the fire and let sweat until the veal begins to fry; turn the pieces and fry all sides, add the dried peas (soaked over night), and cover with water. If desired, a pinch of mint can be added. See that the seasoning is right. Cover and let simmer till the whole is well cooked.

COCOA CAKE.

Cream together one-half cup of butter and one and one-half cups of sugar, then add two eggs beaten light, one cup of milk and two teaspoons of baking powder sifted with two and one-half cups of flour. Bake in layer tins. For the frosting and filling place in the bowl one and one-half cups of confectioner's sugar and one tablespoonful of butter, pour over these three tablespoonfuls of strong hot coffee, add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of powdered cocoa and beat the mixture hard. Flavour with vanilla.

COLD SLAW.

After removing outside leaves from small cabbage cut in quarters; cut slices thinly. Soak in cold water until crisp, drain, dry out moisture with the following dressing. Mix one-half tablespoonful salt, one-half tablespoonful mustard, one and one-quarter tablespoonfuls sugar, one egg slightly beaten, two and one-half tablespoonfuls butter (melted), three-quarters of a cupful of cream and one-quarter cupful of vinegar. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens, strain, add it while warm to the cabbage and then cool.

LIMA BEANS WITH TOMATOES

Soak one pint of dried lima beans in cold water over night, throw them into boiling salted water and cook until tender, then drain and fry in butter until delicately browned. Cook a pint of tomatoes with half a small onion, six peppercorns, one teaspoonful of sugar and a bit of bay leaf for fifteen minutes and rub through a puree strainer. Melt two tablespoonfuls of flour, add the tomatoes gradually and season with salt, pepper and a dash of cayenne. Put the onions in a heated dish and pour the sauce over the top.

BEET SOUP.

Eight beets, one-half glassful vinegar, one pint of sour cream, one cucumber, four hard-boiled eggs and six radishes.

The beets have to be grated and put into a saucepan along with the one-half glassful vinegar. Allow to boil five minutes and strain through a fine cloth. Separate whites of eggs from the yolks, pass the yolks through a sieve and mix with the sour cream. They are now added to the essence of the beets. Season well with salt and pepper and serve with the following ingredients as a garnisher: The egg-whites in julienne, the cucumber and radishes is very delectable and can be served either hot or cold.

CANADIAN LIBRARIES.

Some Fine Collections of Books Now Exist in the Dominion.

The public libraries of the various provinces of Canada have grown rapidly in importance and activity, assisted by Government and municipal grants. The library laws of the Dominion are embodied in a series of acts dating from 1854, a noticeable feature being the close association between schools and libraries, while there is also an important extension of libraries to the rural districts. Ontario has a very large and widespread library system, the latest statistics available showing 131 free libraries with 775,976 volumes, and 243 not free with 502,879 volumes. The most important other libraries in the province are: Queen's University, Kingston, 40,000 vols.; Library of Parliament, Ottawa, about 250,000 vols.; Legislative Library, Toronto, 100,000 vols; the Public (municipal) Library of Toronto, over 150,000 vols. In the province of Quebec, in addition to the state-aided libraries, there are several large and important libraries, among which may be mentioned the Fraser Institute, Montreal, 40,000 vols.; McGill University, Montreal, 125,000 vols.; Seminary of St. Sulpice, Montreal, about 80,000 vols.; Laval University, Quebec, 125,000 vols., and the library of the Legislature, Quebec, 100,000 vols., besides parochial or local libraries. In Nova Scotia there were several hundred cases of books circulating among the school libraries, containing about 40,000 volumes. The school law of New Brunswick provides for grants being made in aid of school libraries by the Board of Education equal to one half the amount raised by a district. In the western provinces several large public, Government, and college libraries have been formed, but they are not as old and important as those in the eastern provinces.

One on the Doctor.

Dr. James L. Hughes, of Toronto, tells a good story on himself. He recently made a trip to New York and at the border was interrogated as customary by the United States Immigration Agent, a thorough Irishman:

"Are you an American?" he was asked.

"Yes, and a Canadian, thank God," replied the Doctor.

"Are you remaining in the States long?" was the next query.

"No," was the reply.

"Thank God," said the Immigration Agent.

Important Factors Which Influence Crop Production

More About Seed Selection—This Year It Will Be Very Necessary to Be Careful as to the Kind of Seed That is Put Into the Ground—Available Seed is Not as Good a Sample as in a Normal Year.

RESULT OF EXPERIMENTS

The time is fast approaching when most farmers will be getting their seed ready for sowing. There are many factors which influence crop production; one of these and a very important one, is the kind of seed sown. Until recent years the seed itself has not been considered of more than normal importance. By good seed was meant seed that would grow. It never seemed to occur to anyone that the kind of seed sown determined the kind of plant that would come up. The principal that like tends to produce like which recognized in the animal kingdom was scarcely ever associated with the plant world and yet we find that principal to be the corner stone of which the plant improver builds his hopes for better things.

This year above all, it will be very necessary to be careful as to the kind of seed that is put into the ground. Our duty to our country in this time of crisis, demands that our production of food stuffs be as large as possible and therefore it is necessary to sow the best seed available. The seed which is available on the average farm is not as good a sample as in a normal year, due to the fact that there are too many little, inferior kernels which have not sufficient food material stored in them with which to nourish the plant until it becomes firmly established in the soil.

There are a great many farmers who leave the selection of their grain for seeding purposes until just previous to the time they should sow it. This we believe is not a good practice. In nearly every barn there is a basement in which live stock are housed. Above this is the granary, where the grain is stored in bins. Where their animals are housed, unless there is a proper system of ventilation, the atmosphere in the stable will be very damp. This is noticeable by the accumulation of hoar frost on the walls and ceilings and also the presence of the animals tends to raise the temperature in the stables. The grain in the first foot or two in the bins above the stable is likely to be lowered in vitality, due to the conditions of moisture and heat in the stable below, because all that is required for germination to begin is sufficient moisture, suitable temperature and the presence of oxygen. While the seeds may not actually germinate under these conditions, nevertheless, there is a great danger of their vitality being greatly injured and from actual germination tests, it has been found that taking a sample from the top of the bin and another from the bottom of the bin, there is a great difference in the vitality of the seed. If then a person feeds from the bin and leaves only the bottom foot or two for seed, surely this is not good practice and any farmer whose seed conditions are such as described should be very careful in the selection of his seed.

Experiments conducted at the Agricultural College, Guelph, have proved that from a proper selection of seed, using large, plump kernels, the increase in yield per acre was 16 bushels in the case of oats. This increase is simply due to the fact that the large, plump kernels have sufficient reserve food material stored to nourish the young plant until it becomes firmly established in the soil. In making a good selection of seed, the use of a good fanning mill is indispensible. All grain intended for seeding purposes should be run through the fanning mill at least three times in order that all dirt, light and small kernels may be taken out.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 119 cars, with 2,238 cattle, 143 calves, 965 hogs, and 109 sheep and lambs.

The market was a little slow in the trading, quite a few loads being held over. An effort on the part of the buyers to get prices down a little met with little or no success, judging by actual transactions.

An extra choice bunch of eight heavy steers topped the market at $12, the highest price this season except for show cattle. Other high prices were recorded around $11 to $11.50. For the general run there were a few easy spots, but on the whole the market was steady with last week.

Sheep, lambs, and calves steady to strong.

Hogs were firm and a little higher than last Thursday at $15.25, fed and watered.

ONE POTATO CROP 6 TIMES THE VALUE OF HIS LAND.

GREENWICH, N.Y., March 6.—Andrew Sullivan, of South Argyle, hauled his last load of potatoes to town, and John J. Quackenbush, produce dealer, gave him a check for $1,242.52 in payment. Mr. Sullivan raised his 1916 crop on five and a half acres and saved a part of it for higher prices. For the entire crop he realized six times the value of the ground on which they were raised, and an amount in excess of the assessed valuation of his entire farm of 130 acres.

Norfolk's First Gallows.

Since Norfolk County, Ontario, has had a jurisdiction of her own, capital punishment has never obtained within her borders until a few days ago, when Emerson Shelley was hanged for the murder of Christian Shoup. In September, 1824, a gallows was erected at Vittoria to swing two horse thieves, named Smith and Carr. The hour was 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and the gallows was framed like the bent of a barn and raised by the crowd so that the posts dropped into holes in the ground. The prisoners were brought out in an ox cart sitting back to back, the sheriff, walking ahead, and a constable on either side. Two prayers were made and eight minutes remained. This time was allotted to the prisoners. Smith would say nothing, but Carr breathed words of penitence and warning to the young about him. He had not occupied more than half the time when a rider drove into the crowd and handed the sheriff a reprieve. The document was on hand three days previously, but it was considered best to give the men all the scare possible. On release Smith disappeared, and stealing a horse rode to the Niagara frontier. He was two hours ahead of his pursuers. Carr had to be ejected from the jail, protesting that he would never be better prepared for death.

OUR SERIAL STORY

THE RED PAPER

By C. HOTCHKISS

He now went systematically through his pockets, without finding the missing wallet. He did find some small bills he had thrust into his vest pocket together with some loose change, but the whole would not have paid his fare to San Antonio; the amount was aotly six dollars and eighty cents—a small capital for one who was so far from home. He had not even a check book with him.

Suddenly he remembered catching his coat on something as he came on shore. Undoubtedly the loss had occurred at that time—his wallet had been jerked from his pocket and lay on the step if it had not fallen into the sea. He hurried to the landing on the jetty. The Lone Star's quarter boat had returned to the ship and save for the watchmen hovering round the piled cargoes there appeared to be no one about. Once he was questioned by an inquisitive policeman to whom he openly told the story of his loss and who helped him in his search. But the search was fruitless.

The new difficulty of the lack of cash he faced as became a man of his caste. Going to the hotel which he had seen Bagshot enter, he asked for a room for the night, paying for it from his small fund; then he went to bed. But not to sleep; his brain was too busy for that, his disappointment too keen. For he saw he must give up his chase. It was hopeless. Circumstances had been against him from the first, and this culminating disaster settled it. Bagshot was lost for good, or if he were captured at all, it must be in the indefinite future; and he was a man who given time to provide against contingencies, would be certain to make his capture hard if not impossible.

And the girl? It was true that she had promised to write to him. But where? To New York, of course; with her uncle's latest move she must have given up expecting further active service from him. As for the detective sober thought convinced Wentworth that he could not have been faithful; there must have been some hitch in the law; perhaps his own testimony had been demanded. Of the real trouble the wakeful young man did not even guess; he only knew that every plan had miscarried.

These were bitter thoughts for Wentworth, who had hoped to satisfy justice, vengeance and love. In the morning he went to the nearest telegraph office and sent a message to Harper. It was all there was to do.

Paper stolen. Chased him Galveston. Lost him. Broke. Wire money Galveston Hotel. JACK.

The message sent, he determined to throw himself on the mercy of the hotel proprietor, and that failing, he would borrow enough of Van Buskirk to tide him over. But on hearing the story of his loss the proprietor took him to his heart at once. He was a reader of character, he said, and knew a gentleman when he saw one Wentworth might live at the "Galveston" a week or a month or longer; he was not to worry on the score of deferred payment.

It was the New Yorker's first bit of luck. With a lightened heart although not a joyous one he left the proprietor's presence, not knowing that the tide of misfortune had ebbed to its lowest and had now turned in his favour. But he did not see into the future, which was well for him.

CHAPTER XVI.

DEPUTY SHERIFF HARPER.

It was twenty four hours before Wentworth received an answer to his message. He had called twice at the office with negative results, but on the third time a telegram was awaiting him. It caused him to be mildly elated, at the same time made him wonder what had happened.

Have sent two hundred by wire. Stay where you are. Am coming. Have news. HARPER.

There was some delay before the office could furnish him with the money but with that in his pocket he felt more independent. But what did Harper mean? It was four days before he found out. And in those four days he made himself acquainted with the lowlying city, and walked for hours along its miles of fawn-colored and perfect beach. Once he had the pleasure of meeting Captain Shearpole on the street, and he laughed in that gentleman's face, well knowing that he would not be held accountable for the assault made on the sailor; he knew as well as he knew anything that the captain had gone far beyond his authority. And Shearpole only scowled as he saw the young man.

At length Harper arrived, hot and dirty but full of a contagious enthusiasm. After a characteristic greeting the two went at once into executive session in Wentworth's room. Up to that time Harper had been exasperatingly non-committal.

"And now tell me where they have gone," were his first words, as he threw himself into a chair and lighted a cigar, ignoring the grime of travel that was still upon him.

"To San Antonio. They stop at the Menger Hotel, the lady says, and I have reason to think she tells the truth. Don't you care to hear all that has happened to me?"

"No, not yet—for I know something of it. I will unload first, then it will be your turn. They've gone to San Antonio, have they? Well, Bagshot has walked into the trap! Now, listen. For three or four days we were wild at your disappearance. Thomas told me of the condition of things at the studio, and I guessed a whole lot—only I was about to look for your body, as I was mortally afraid of foul play—I have feared it all along.

"When I found you had been to the bank I began to have hopes. On the fifth day Thomas came to me with a chap named Bunsen, who had his head bandaged up. Bunsen told me what had happened, and was sure you were on the steamer. He had met with an accident just after he had left you; he was knocked completely out, and all his plans went askew. But he had the good sense to hunt up Thomas who had wit enough to turn him over to me. Good man, that Bunsen! Together we went to work, the detective doing all his share, and we have kept the thing out of the papers. But it wasn't such an easy thing to get a warrant, you being away. Your telegram helped some; we got it finally, and through the pull exercised by our broken-headed friend I got something for myself. My son, I am now sworn in as a deputy sheriff of the County of New York. It took much persuasion and a little of the rhyno, but I had laid my plans. Take off your hat to me, you ordinary, no-account citizen! I have the necessary papers with which to rope our Christian slugger, for without them we might go lame early in the race."

Wentworth looked at his friend in amazement. "What was your crazy idea of becoming a deputy sheriff?" he asked.

"My crazy idea! To catch the fellow, of course! We can't touch Planet, he being out of the state. That is we cannot take him for unproved robbery, but we can hold him as a suspect—in the other thing! Here are my plans:

"I have a letter to one Thorp, a sheriff of Bexar county—a chap afraid of nothing—a character something on the order of Bunsen. He has been a miner and a cowboy, and is an all-round plainsman, but that is nothing to the purpose. It is my notion that Bagshot intends to drop Miss Merridale somewhere, make a bee line for the mines, stake them out, register the claim and then skip into Mexico and wait a spell, unless in the meantime the girl steals the paper, but we must not depend on her.

"The first thing to do is to lay our hands on Thorp. I can't act in Texas without a Texas officer! We get out to-night for San Antonio. But let me tell you," said Harper, his face becoming set and serious, "I am in this thing to the hilt—even if it means blood. Are you with me?"

Wentworth looked astonished at the question. "What on earth do you suppose that I am here for? To be frightened at a possible fright? Go as far as you like, and I'll follow when I can't lead."

"Not that I doubted you," said Harper, holding out a dirty hand. "It was a perfunctory question born of the jig-water we have imbibed. We will catch Bagshot et al. if we have to follow him across the continent. Now you have my plan in the raw. Let us hear your yarn."

Wentworth made a full story of his trip, omitting nothing. When he had finished Harper whistled.

"I'm sorry you showed yourself on the train. He will think you are still following him and be on guard. Let me see the girl's note."

The note was produced. Harper read it and lifted his eyebrows as he smiled and drooped one eyelid.

"Early for congratulations, isn't it?"

"What do you mean, you idiot?" returned Wentworth, his color rising.

"Oh, nothing! Only when we meet up with her don't ask me to play gooseberry. It isn't my role. On your honour old man, isn't the blind Cupid marking a broad trail for you? Has not that bump gone from your head to your heart? Own up."

Was Anaemic

FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Plant Protection.

Many plants are equipped with wonderful weapons for their defense. The thorns of the rose bush, brambles and gorse prevent cows and horses from eating them, as well as keep off snails and slugs.

Cactus plants have a formidable armor of prickles and daggers. The plant known as the Spanish bayonet is armed with taper pointed spears that have sharp edges.

Some plants, such as the ragged robin, have sticky stems covered with fine hairs, to which insects stick if they climb up to try to steal the honey.

The sea spurge has a poisonous juice which kills insects, while the poisonous properties of the deadly nightshade are well known. The bracken fern has such a bitter taste that cows and sheep will not touch it.

An Immense Help.

A society woman at a tea in Newport praised the toilets of a Baltimore girl.

"She dresses exquisitely," said the guest, who, dressing exquisitely herself, is an admirable judge. "Her hats, her shoes, her coiffure—it's all exquisite.

"And I like to see her take such pains with her appearance," the guest added. "It is wise. For a girl can't help her looks, but her looks can help her."—Exchange.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Margaret

The Story of How a King's Son Came to His Own.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

There was trouble in the kingdom of Tartaria. John, a prince of the blood, but not heir to the throne, was attempting to seize it by force. King Alonzo had not married till late in life and had no son to inherit the crown till he was fifty years old. John, who, had King Alonzo died childless, would have been the sovereign, gathered about him a number of adherents, whom he had seduced by promises of preferment, with a view to deposing the king and killing the infant Crown Prince Theodore, only a few weeks old.

Now, it happened that the queen was unable to nurse her offspring, and a wet nurse had been brought in for the purpose. This woman had a son the same age as Prince Theodore and divided her milk between the two children.

John succeeded in his attempt, but not exactly as he had expected. King Alonzo was killed by one of John's lieutenants who were charged to secure the sovereign's person. John himself, at the head of an armed force, broke into a wing of the palace where the crown prince was under the care of his nurse. Prince Theodore and his foster brother, David, each occupied a cradle, that of the prince being of ivory canopied with fine lace, that of David of wood with no canopy. As John was about to dispatch the child in the royal cradle he received news that the king had been killed. Not relishing the slaying of an infant and realizing that before the prince would reach an age to be an obstacle in his way, John gave him to one of his adherents with instructions to pay a peasant to adopt him, at the same time taking measures to conceal his origin.

When the revolutionists had left the royal nursery Margaret, the nurse, who had been concealed behind a curtain and had heard the instructions given, stepped from her hiding place and, kneeling, gave thanks that no murder had been committed. Then, turning to the wooden cradle, she took the child from it and, watching her opportunity, finally left the palace with it by a rear exit.

John proclaimed himself king, and, though he gave all the offices to his adherents and by his misrule brought much misery on the people of Tartaria, he made them so afraid of him that they dared not make any attempt to throw off the yoke.

When John had reigned twenty years he had a daughter who had come to a marriageable age, but he had no son. Not daring to leave the government in the hands of a woman, fearing that after his own death the people would rebel against her, it occurred to him to marry her to the true prince, who had been brought up as a peasant.

He had always had his eye on the boy, who had been adopted by an ignorant countryman, and one day sent a messenger to bring him to the palace. The young man was so uncouth that John disliked to give him his daughter; but, since by doing so he hoped to render her succession and reign peaceful, he adhered to his determination.

Unfortunately for the king's purpose the young man was between twenty and twenty-one years of age, too old to make a refined person of him. The prince-peasant showed no evidences of having been begotten by a king and was very stupid. John gave him the best masters, both in intellectual fields and in deportment; but, despite their efforts, they could make nothing of him.

Had the king's daughter, Eleanor, been a girl of a refined nature John would have had difficulty in making a match between her and the clodhopper. But she was not. The branch of the royal family to which she belonged had been noted for generations back for profligacy and coarseness, and Eleanor, though still not eighteen, showed plainly that this inheritance cropped out in her. It made little difference to her whom she married.

When the supposed peasant had been somewhat furbished up he was told that he was the true heir to the throne and all he needed to obtain possession of it was to marry the princess, for John proposed to abdicate in his favor with a view to seeing his daughter a queen during his lifetime. As was expected, the prince-clodhopper was ready to accept the situation, and nothing remained but to announce to the people that the sovereignty was to be transferred to the son and heir of the late King Alonzo, then to make preparations.

Now, this would have filled the Tartarians with delight had not the returned prince-peasant rendered himself unpopular by his uncouthness and overbearing ways. "Put a beggar on horseback and he will ride to the devil." The man who had been taken from the plow to consort with a king's daughter had been elevated altogether too suddenly. He showed plainly by his arrogance that the more power he acquired the greater despot he would be. The consequence was that when it was announced that he was to be king the people, instead of being pleased, were shocked.

From the time the announcement was made until the day of the wedding a feeling of discontent was rife in the kingdom. Nevertheless King John adhered to his plan and had made arrangements to abdicate in favor of his son-in-law the day after the wedding. Such was the young couple's disfavor with the people that when they rode in the royal coach to and from the church not a shout of congratulation was raised except by persons who had been hired for the purpose.

The morning after the marriage King John, surrounded by his ministers and the magnates of the kingdom, was about to sign his abdication when a man hastily entered and, approaching the king, whispered in his ear:

"Your majesty, a pretender to the throne has appeared, has claimed to be king, and all the people in the portion of the city where he lives have risen to support him."

"On what does he support his pretentions?" asked the king angrily.

"He claims to be the true prince, the son of King Alonzo."

"But I took the true prince from his cradle with my own hands, committed him to the care of one of my adherents and have kept him under my eye ever since."

"The pretender, your majesty, claims that before you entered the royal nursery the nurse placed her son in the royal cradle and the prince in her son's cradle. He avers that the prince, your son-in-law, is the son of the nurse, while he, the pretender, is the son of King Alonzo."

The king paled. In twenty years that he had been enjoying the sovereignty it had never occurred to him that a mother could bring herself to sacrifice her son for another, even though that other were a prince.

"Where is this woman?" he faltered.

"She is dead, your majesty."

"Dead! Then who is to prove that this substitution was made?"

"The pretender claims that she furnished him with proofs; that he has the infant clothes he wore the day of the revolution, and they are embroidered with the royal arms."

The king cringed. He had not thought when he took the baby from his cradle to examine his clothes. He had wrapped him in a blanket he had found on the floor. He did not know that it had covered Margaret's son and she had dropped it in carrying him to the prince's cradle.

"Does this would be usurper bear the lineaments of a king?" he asked.

"He is the image of the late King Alonzo."

"Is he educated or ignorant?"

"Fairly educated. He claims that his foster mother was enabled to send him to school, having saved all the money given her by the king for furnishing his son with sustenance which enabled him to live—a sum very large."

At this point a commotion was heard without the palace. The king rose from the throne in which he sat and was observed to tremble. Calling the general of his armies to him, he ordered him to quell the disturbance. The meeting broke up, each person leaving to prepare for whatever change might come, for the king was unpopular even among his adherents, and if the story of this young claimant could be substantiated he was sure to win.

The drums were beaten in the palace court, and the king's bodyguard sprang to arms. But it was too late. A large concourse of people, armed with all kinds of implements, headed by a young man whom some who had known the late king as a young man fancied to be Alonzo returned to life, moved on the palace.

And so it was that a similar scene to that practiced by John when he made himself king happened again, only it was John himself instead of King Alonzo who was attacked, and there was no legitimate prince to be got rid of. But the claimant was a very different man from the usurper. He had the people all with him and could afford to be magnanimous. On taking possession of the palace he forbade his adherents to kill any one. Having possessed himself of the person of King John and his daughter and his son-in-law, he thus addressed the fallen monarch:

"You are my father's murderer, and by rights I should avenge his death in yours. But I prefer that you should live to repent the deed. I therefore spare your life. As for this changeling whom you were about to make king in your stead, he and his wife shall go into exile with you. May they console you in your degradation."

At this those standing about protested against such clemency and demanded the heads of all those who had usurped the throne, but the conqueror hushed the tumult by raising his hands and saying:

"I do not intend to enter upon my sovereignty by bloodshed, as the usurper did. You see the end to which he is reduced. I prefer to rule over you with your consent, and the time will come when you will be pleased that your king did not take up the reins of government with an execution."

At this reply the murmurs ceased, and the people seemed satisfied.

When the work was accomplished the prince was proclaimed king under the title of Theodore, but he would not accept the sovereignty till it had been proved that he was the rightful heir. Besides baby clothes he produced, his likeness both to his father and his mother was so striking that even the written story of Margaret that to save the true prince she had been willing to sacrifice her son was scarcely necessary. Certain it is that no one in the kingdom doubted that he was their rightful king.

The first act of King Theodore after his accession was to build a beautiful monument to his foster mother, on which he placed the simple inscription:

MARGARET.
She was ready to sacrifice her own son for the right and welfare of her people.

An Animal With Seven Names.

A notable curiosity of animal life to be found in Queensland is the duck mole, or ornithorhynchus, called also duckbill platypus, mallangong, mullingong, tambreed and water mole. Its multiplicity of names is no doubt due to the fact that it presented such a diversity of features that it was difficult to classify it. In the first place, it is an aquatic mammal—that is, it suckles its young like the whale and the dugong. It has the fur of the beaver, the bill of a duck and webbed feet, but the most remarkable thing about it is that it lays eggs like a bird or reptile. For a long time it was not definitely ascertained whether it was oviparous or viviparous, and interminable arguments arose on this point between the bush naturalists of Australia. It was a most difficult point upon which to obtain accurate information on account of the shy habits of the animal, but close research in the rivers, creeks and lagoons of north Queensland has established the fact that this curious animal is oviparous. It belongs to the sub-class monotremata.

Human Sacrifice.

Rollin in his ancient history says, "The government of Carthage was founded upon principles of the most consummate wisdom." And on the same page the historian makes this record in reference to the same people (the fortunes of war had gone against them): "They attributed this to the anger of their god, Saturn, because that, instead of offering up children nobly born, who were usually sacrificed to him, they had been fraudulently substituted in their stead the children of slaves and foreigners. To atone for this crime 200 children of the best families of Carthage were sacrificed to Saturn, besides which upward of 300 citizens, from a sense of guilt of this pretended crime voluntarily sacrificed themselves. Diodorus adds that there was a brazen statue of Saturn, the hands of which turned downward, so that when a child was laid on them it dropped immediately into a hollow, where was a fiery furnace." We are indebted to the Bible for the difference between that nation and this of today.—Christian Herald.

Symbol of the Key Ring.

The key ring symbolizes the old custom of handing over the keys of the house to the lady. This was more often a design used for the wedding ring, but occasionally for the betrothal. Sometimes the key was merely attached to the ring.

Desert Sand Pits.

In the Arabian desert the chrous, or sand storm, often digs pits 200 feet deep, scattering the sand for miles around.

The force of example is powerful. We are creatures of imitation.

Beats and Bars.

The police pipe band had become sadly depleted by the departure of all the eligible members, and an effort was made to beat up recruits within the force. "There's old Donald," said the superintendent to the pipe major. "I'll bet you he knows something about the pipes; he's a Highlander, and I'll warrant you he's been a piper in his younger days. Try him." The pipe-major at once tackled Donald on the subject of becoming a member of the pipe band so that the pipe band would be efficient to welcome the boys home from the front when that day arrives. Donald protested that "he knew nothin' whatever about musik nor of the pipes at all." "Come, come, now," said the pipe-major, "you don't mean to tell me you don't know how many beats there are in a bar?" "An' it's hersel' that's not knowin' at all how many beats are in a bar, but," replied Donald, brightening and lowering his voice, "it's hersel' could tell ye hoo mony bars are in her beat."

Lace may be stained a beautiful ecru by using either strong coffee or walnut stain. The walnut stain will not wash out, but if coffee is used it will be necessary to use it economically in order to keep the shade.

Here Is Home Evidence From People You Know

Ask Them to Confirm Their Statements About Dr. Chase's Nerve Food —Then Put It to the Test in Your Own Case

Peterboro, Ont., March 5. — Still more people are coming forward daily with good words for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. These letters are not from far-away, inaccessible post offices but from your friends and neighbors right here in Peterboro.

You can call on these people, and hear from their own lips just what was their condition and how they were benefited by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When you have been convinced that this is no ordinary medicine but a bona fide restorative of exceptional merit put it to the test in your own case.

Mrs. J. Mosley, 490 George Street Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"Over a year ago I was in a nervous, run down condition—had no ambition, only a sort of languid feeling. My condition no doubt was due to the fact that I go out nursing at different times and after some severe cases I found my system in a run down condition. Some of my friends advised me to take some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I procured a box and commenced to use them. I continued this treatment until I was greatly benefitted, and am now much better.

My husband also finds great benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and the Linseed and Turpentine. I have advise many of my friends to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and they have received good results, also."

Mrs. William A. Murphy 491 Elm Street, Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"I had been suffering from nervousness, sleeplessness and a run down condition of the system. I went to the hospital for my nerves, and while there the doctor told me he could do nothing for them. A friend persuaded me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did so, and all I am sorry for now is that I did not commence using them sooner. My head used to ache so at times I could scarcely stand it, and if I had not secured the Nerve Food when I did I don't know what would have happened. I can sleep well now and have none of those terrible headaches. From time to time I take some of the Nerve Food as a tonic—I would not want to be without them if the cost a dollar a box."

Nervous headaches, indigestion sleeplessness and irritability soon disappear when Dr. Chase' Nerve Food is used to restore the system, 50 cents a box; a full treatment of six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S ONE PIECE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This one piece frock lays claim to having the newest style features because of the marked simplicity, grace and straightness of its lines. For smartness, the collar, developed in contrasting goods, deserves a big share of credit; it is made dainty, with a soft frill following its edge and the full length sleeve shows the same treatment in its finishing.

Because braid is favored by fashion it is lavishly employed in this model—it almost covers the right side of the shaped girdle that draws in the fulness of the frock at normal waist line without any of the fitted effect. Several rows of braid are used above the hem of the skirt, but if you like it better and have the time to do so let wool embroidery be a worthy substitute—worthy, because it is very effective and very fashionable.

Serge has wearing qualities that make it stand out among other fabrics for a dress of this type. With white broadcloth for collar and cuffs or white or black satin, it will make a charming frock. Prunella cloth is also good, and duvetyn, satin broadcloth and mohair are strong favorities for the winter. There is no question about a "happy ending" if you follow the pictured pattern directions in copying the model.

The pattern, No. 8,070, cuts in sizes 36-44 bust. To make in size 36 requires 5¼ yards 36 inch material; ⅝ yard contrasting goods for collar and cuffs and 2¾ yards braid.

To obtain the pattern send 20 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

REVIEW OF 1916 BY GENERAL A. W. CURRIE

Canadians Win Every Time, But Hun Morale Unbroken, Says Head of First Division

"We expect fully that next year will see some hard and fierce fighting," said Major-General A. W. Currie, of the 1st Canadian Division, writing in December, 1916, from Canadian headquarters in France. The letter in part says: "The old division is still going strong, though the original members are getting very, very few; of all the officers and the infantry and the brigade and divisional staffs who came over to France in the beginning, there are only three of us who have never been away from the division for any reason, other than ordinary leave. Of course we still have a number of officers who have come back after being sick and wounded."

General Currie was among the first to offer himself for active service, and left Canada in command of the 50th Regiment, Victoria, with the first Canadian Contingent, and has been in France on active service since. He has been decorated by President Poincare with the Legion of Honor with the title of Cross Commander. He left Canada as colonel and received his promotion on the field.

Drafts Do Well

The letter continues: "The health of the troops is simply splendid. Everyone is cheerful and optimistic. The new drafts are very good physically and are willing and anxious to learn the game quickly and get into it at once. I feel certain the splendid reputation already enjoyed will be maintained. The corps did extremely well on the Somme, and the old division just a little more than its share. We had the unique distinction of going in three times. It was a great compliment. As long as there is a man left, the old division still has a fight in it. Our men do not whimper and do not quit.

"We fully expect that next year will see some hard and fierce fighting, for the old Boche is by no means licked. It always annoys me to read in our papers that the German morale is very low, that the German soldier is so sick of fighting that he surrenders at the first opportunity. Such stuff is all balderdash. You'd think we had nothing to do but go over and they would hold up their hands. All rot, any that we have been opposite have always been ready for a fight though we've licked them every time we have come to grips. We've licked this year, we've shown him that we could take his strongest works, and anything and everything we've taken from him this year still remains ours. We have inflicted more casualties we have received, and whenever you do that in this war you win, for it is a war of attrition. We have given him a taste this year of what he may expect next year, and as soon as the weather gets right we're going at him again and knock the very devil out of him.

Shuns Peace Talk

"About his peace proposals, I think everyone is agreed that he is like the poker player who, having all the chips in his stack, thinks it a good thing to break off the game. You've met those fellows, haven't you, and you've usually agreed they were pikers. Well, the old Boche is worse. He knows he has more now than he'll ever have again, and of course he wants peace, but he won't get it, and he knows he won't. It is a long, long time since we left Canada; we are all longing for the time to come when we'll get home again."

The Other "Blighty"

Mrs. Mitchell, wife of Major Mitchell, director of education at the Polytechnic, is in charge of British prisoners from Germany at the chalets of Seebury, near, Lucerne. On her return from short leave of absence the men had erected a triumphal arch at the entrance to the chalets, on which were the words, "Welcome Back to Blighty."

Explosion of Razmakers

Mr. Louis Raemakers, the cartoonist, who visited Liverpool and was entertained by the Lord Mayor, said if he had tried to keep silent on the German atrocities he would have exploded.

Had Severe Cold PAIN IN CHEST SPASMODIC COUGHING

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away in a day or two. This is a mistake for before they know it, it has settled on the lungs.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that on the first sign of a cough or cold it must be gotten rid of immediately, otherwise it may cause years of suffering from some serious lung trouble.

Mr. A. George, 30 Blevin's Place, Toronto, Ont., writes: "Having greatly benefitted from your remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I take the liberty to write you a few words about the effect of that wonderful syrup. Two years ago I caught a severe cold followed by a spasmodic cough and pain in my chest. I was treated by many doctors but without any benefit, and also took many proprietory medicines which all failed to cure. One of my friends recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I recommend it to anyone as a God-send remedy."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 35c and 50c.

FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

How Winnipeg Citizens Care For Heroes and Dependants

A Winnipeg writer says: While every person in the city has in some way heard of the Returned Soldiers' Association, few have but a hazy idea of how this splendid organization came into existence, and the magnificent work it is carrying on. As a matter of fact, the "R.S.A." came into existence from sheer necessity in May, 1915. At that time a few loyal-hearted citizens saw the dire need for some organization which would care for the men returning from the front, and look after their dependents while they were away.

Not the least of its many duties is that of meeting returned men at the railway station and given them such a welcome as to make them appreciate that they have at last reached their home. At any hour of the night in all weathers, members of the Returned Soldiers' Association are on hand to welcome back those men who have done so much for the Empire.

The Association has through the kindness of citizens and friends throughout the province been enabled to do a great work on behalf of the men. Tons of provisions kindly donated have been distributed, coal, wood and money given wherever it is needed. In addition a professional nurse is employed by the Association who devotes the whole of her time in calling on the returned men and looking after their requirements when sick.

Often on the arrival of the men from the front, they are without funds and remain that way until such time as they receive their checks from Ottawa. It is during this period that the Returned Soldiers' Association steps in and supplies the needed funds to meet their requirements.

Another branch of the work of the Association is that of looking after the war widows and fatherless children. This is in the hands of a most competent and capable committee of ladies who devote a great deal of their time to visitations, and in supplying the necessaries of life as they are required.

FIGHTING FOR LIBERTY

Experiences of United States Citizens With Canadians Overseas

A number of wounded Americans who served with Canadian Highland battalions at the front told interesting experiences after returning to hospitals in Canada. Pte. R. A. Wilson of Philadelphia enlisted with the 42nd Highlanders of Montreal in 1915. He got hit by shrapnel in the right hand and left leg at Ypres, but after a couple of months in hospitals he went back to Ypres. There he was caught by a high explosive shell and partly buried, being left on the field for a day and a half before he could be taken back.

"I'm a good Yankee," said Wilson, "but if they only fix me up I am going back to take another crack at the Germans."

Pte. W. L. Cutter, Fitchburg, joined the 53nd Battalion. His regiment was badly mauled at Ypres, and then had still harder fighting at the Somme. The regiment was badly cut up and was reinforced several times, once by companies of Canadian Japanese. Pte. Cutter at the Somme was hit three times in the arm and once in the chest when a machine gun got his range. He come back with a paralysed arm to have it amputated.

"All we Americans who have joined in the fight have to say is to ask that you good Canadian reserves send on plenty of reinforcements. God knows, the boys need them. I wish I could go back, but what can a man do with one arm?" he concluded.

HOW EXPLOSION LOOKED

Force and Glow of Burst in Great Chemical Works

London in 1917 had a fire and explosion in a war chemical works which killed forty and did immense damage. Here is what the city saw and heard: The explosion occurred almost exactly at ten minutes to seven. All over London the streets were thronged with thousands of people hurrying homewards. A pale, pinkish glow appeared suddenly in the sky towards the southeast. "Fire!" exclaimed everybody. In a twinkling the glow turned to a dull, angry red, and then in a flash the whole sky seemed to burst into a blinding glare of light. The night became as day for the moment. And in a moment came the roar of an explosion, one big, appalling thunder-clap. As the reverberations died, the light in the sky faded with the same dramatic swiftness with which it had blazed out. All around was plunged into darkness again.

"I was on point duty a quarter of a mile away," said a policeman. "The explosion lifted me clean off my feet. I should think I went a yard into the air, and my helmet, which was torn off, seemed to go sky-high. The crash of glass was deafening. The huge cloud of fire that filled the sky immediately after the explosion was the most wonderful sight I ever saw."

CANADIAN'S AIR FIGHT

Experiences and Humor of a Westerner in Action

Letter from Flight-Lieut. W. H. Dore, late of the Winnipeg staff of the Bank of Commerce, written from France: "To-day there is a 70-mile gale blowing itself around. I was to go to X— to bring a new type of machine we are having in the squadron and fly back one of the old type that we are getting rid of, but the wind is too strong. The new machines, though rather difficult to handle at first, are very warm for winter work and faster than the types used by us previously. Next spring, however we must have something newer still for the Huns' machines are all very fast.

"Did I mention in my last letter anything of a fight I had with three Huns? One fellow came over our aerodrome and I pushed off after him. He got within range when I was seven or eight miles over the lines and only 5,000 feet high. He was joined by two others and then they attacked me. I shot one down, drove the second down and while chasing the third my gun jammed, whereupon I broke off the fight. Whenever one meets a Hun on his own level and within long range, unless he is caught unawares, one invariably finds another Hun higher up and in the act of diving on the Britisher. If you don't get him as he comes down or if he doesn't get you, he keeps going down and glides homewards, and the one at your own level pushes off too. We all wish up here that the Hun would put up more and better fights. One of our boys got a fellow alone a few days ago who tried to fight, and he soon sent him to the earth in flames.

"Owing to the shortage of pilots in our flight, I missed my turn to go to Paris. I should have left yesterday. We go there for our machines and so far all who have brought machines from Paris report having had a delightful time. We all think that in a few years we may be able to go on when the war will end, but very few want it to end now, they would prefer to see the Boche thoroughly beaten and give their lives to help in the doing rather than see peace declared now."

ALIENS OF ARMY AGE

2,700 in One London District and Making Money

At the Bethnal Green Tribunal Mr. J. Cole said that there were in the district 2,700 aliens of military age who were not serving in the army. While our men had been fighting, these men had enjoyed years of absolute safety and had reaped additional benefits in trade and business, while doing absolutely nothing for the benefit of the country. He was convinced from what he had heard that the wives and mothers of fighting men in the district would take the matter out of the hands of law and order and cause trouble if something was not done. Mr. O'Grady said that day by day foreign names were appearing over shops formerly occupied by Englishmen now at the front. Mr. T. Brooks said that the local music halls were crowded nightly by young aliens of military age.

Civil Mobilization

Gustav Herve wrote in La Victoire (Paris): Opponents of civil mobilization are horrified at the idea of imitating Germany. It is folly to expect that we can maintain a great army indefinitely, with all its necessary supplies, and at the same time continue to produce luxuries and over-eat ourselves, and enjoy taxis, theatres, cinemas, and jewels as usual.

TIRED ALL THE TIME

It is natural to feel tired sometimes when you have worked or exercised sufficiently to cause a healthful feeling of fatigue. But you should be refreshed by rest. A tired feeling that does not disappear even after a night's sleep is abnormal. It means that you are anaemic—that your blood is thin and watery. It means that you need a tonic to build you up, and fortify your system against such a condition. If you do not take prompt steps to improve the blood you are inviting disease because poor blood means that your power of resistance is lowered. Thin blood is largely the sufferer's own fault. It results from neglect because the blood can be built up. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills supply the elements that the blood needs to make it rich and red, and to enable it to carry more oxygen. That is why these pills change weak men and women into robust and healthy people. There is no spot in this great country where you will not find some former sufferer who has been restored to the blessing of good health through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If you are feeling at all out of sorts do not further neglect yourself; a fair treatment with these pills will give you new strength to meet life's duties.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TESTING WOUNDED FOR RETURN TO TRENCHES

Doctors May Make Mistakes But Not With Aid of New Instruments —Nerve Tests Unique

It is the cases that refuse to get well in hospital that come to the Grand Palais at Paris—a real court of miracles. Turn to the card index and you will be astonished at the results obtained; apparently hopeless cases sent back to the firing line, as good as the next man, and others restored to civilian life, very little the worse for wear. That is better than leaving them to rot in the gutter or to drag out an ineffectual existence as pensioners of the State.

Some go back to the trenches when they would be better away, because they lack nerve control. The instruments in use at the Grand Palais find that out too. D'Arsonval's chronometer is harnessed to this delicate work. An electric needle draws on a smoked cylinder the measure of one's emotivity. At a given moment, a revolver shot is fired or a magnesium light flashed. If the victim starts, his line quavers. His breathing graph is desperately jagged, his "trembling" is pronounced, his vasomotory system disturbed.

Nerves and the Airman

It is possible for a nervous man to be a good aviator—there are such cases—but the better his nerve control the better he will generally be. And it is a fact that the Gynemers and Leafe Robinsons are extremely calm. The instrument is of use in determining the right material for the air, but it has another purpose: of preventing the apparently cured man from being given the wrong sort of work.

Makes No Mistakes

Men who have been trepanned are often ostensibly sound. Doctors certify them as good for the "service armé." The instrument does not make such a mistake; it records their high impressionability; it warns the authorities that they will break down at a critical moment. There have been some lamentable cases of brave men who have found their nerves suddenly gone. Their preliminary encounter with the battery of the Grand Palais would have shown their inability to face the other battery on the field.

AUSTRIA REPLIES TO UNITED STATES

GERMAN ATTACKS AROUND VERDUN FAIL

WILSON'S DECISION REGARDING ARMING OF MERCHANTMEN EXPECTED TO-DAY

Armed Neutrality Bill Introduced Into the Senate This Afternoon But Vice-President Sustained Motion That the Introduction of the Measure Was Out of Order---German Attempts to Retake Trenches Lost to French at Verdun Yesterday Have Proved Fruitless.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, March 6.—President Wilson will probably announce his decision to-day on arming American merchantmen.

There were strong intimations that the decision of his legal advisers will give him the power of furnishing guns to the ship owners.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Senator Lodge Republican, this afternoon introduced an armed neutrality bill in the Senate.

Senator Owen moved that the introduction of the bill was not in order. Vice-President Marshal, in the chair, sustained Senator Owen.

Desperate Fighting in Verdun Sector

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), March 6.—Desperate fighting continues in the region of Caurieres Wood and Douaumont, but violent efforts of the Germans to drive French troops from the trenches which the French reconquered yesterday, have failed, according to to-day's official report.

Austria Will Sink All Enemy Merchantmen

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Austria cannot give up her right to sink "enemy merchantmen," she declared in reply to the American note received at the State Department.

Austria does not, however, include neutral merchant ships under this right.

It is thought the United States will not break with Austria at present.

Japan Knows Where True Interest Lies

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By Ralph S. Turner.)

TOKIO, March 6.—Japan knows full well where her true interest lies and would be "committing an act of sheer madness if she attempted to violate her plighted faith with the Allies," Field Marshal Count Seiki Terauchi, Premier of Japan, told the United Press in an exclusive statement to-day.

LONDON, March 6.—Naval aeroplanes on Sunday dropped numerous heavy bombs over the German blast furnaces at Brebach, an official statement declared to-day.

LONDON, March 6.—All the elements of a Sherlock Holmes detective story were present to-day when the Crown called to the bar the famous "poison plot" quartette to answer to a charge of conspiring to murder Premier Lloyd George and Minister Arthur Henderson. The four were Mrs. Mary Wheeldon, Miss Harriet Wheeldon, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Mason. They were arraigned before Justice Low in the Old Bailey.

First of the surprises in the case came when a dark-skinned Mohammedan, S. H. Rica, arose in court and entered his appearance as counsel for the defendants. For the Crown, Attorney-General Sir F. E. Smith was in charge of an array of counsel.

LONDON, March 6.—After Saturday, Holland will be compelled to prohibit the export of bread to Belgium, on account of the German submarine warfare, according to announcement made here to-day from Dutch sources.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Lieut. Hans Berg's trip across the Atlantic with the British steamer Appam, captured by the German raider Moewe, proved futile to-day, when the Supreme Court awarded the vessel to her British owners.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The Hoboken police this afternoon held Hans Schwartz who, they claimed, admitted he was an accomplice of Kolb, arrested yesterday following the discovery of bombs and explosives in his hotel room. Their plan, it is said, was to set bombs on Black Tom Peninsula, the Lackawanna freight terminal, which was devastated by explosions six months ago.

Black Tom is now jammed with highly explosive munitions, having received the heaviest shipments in its history yesterday.

MILITIA TO HANDLE STRIKE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., March 6.—Following a clash with 400 strikers, in which one man was killed and four policemen badly injured, Police Chief John Curry to-day admitted conditions have passed beyond his control. The militia may be called from Buffalo and Tonawanda in order to preserve order. Most of the strikers are Polish. The men on strike are employees of three plants of the Aluminum Co. of America and the International Graphite Co. plant.

ASK CIVIC BODIES TO CHANGE BANKS

The Council endorsed the Finance Committee's recommendation last night asking the City Trust, Board of Education and Utilities Commission to transfer their accounts from the Bank of Montreal to the Bank of Toronto. It opened up the way to old battling grounds, but brought no new results. Aldermen Smith, Langford, Worth and Dobbin opposed the recommendation, but to no avail. Alderman Stratton was chief spokesman for the Bank of Toronto, although he stated that he had not voted when the first change was made.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY ASKS FOR $1200 THIS YEAR

An Increase of $400 Over Last Year's Grant From City—Children's Aid Asks For $800 and Fair Board $600

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Three deputations waited on the Council last night, presenting requests for grants as follows:

Horticultural Society, $1,200; last year's grant, $800.

Children's Aid Society, $800; last year's grant, $300.

Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, $600; same as last year.

Messrs. Walter Stocker, Glover, Kennedy and Beal represented the Horticultural Society. Mr. Stocker stated that the Society had to pay $3 a day for park caretakers this year, as compared with $1.75 last year. The Peterborough Floral Co. had donated the plants for the parks last year. The Society will have to buy them this spring. Mr. Beal endorsed Mr. Stocker's appeal.

Children's Aid Society.

Mr. Joseph Wearing, Rev. R. G. Peever, Dr. King, ex-Ald. Edgar, H. J. McCannon, Mrs. John Gibbs, Mrs. Walter Stocker, Mr. C. A. G. Spence and Adjutant McElhiney comprised the Children's Aid Society deputation.

Mr. Wearing pointed out that the Society had not the tag day monopoly it once enjoyed, and patriotic contributions had in many cases deprived the Society of many donations it had formerly received. The County Council had increased its grant this year from $200 to $400.

Mr. Spence developed the idea that the grant was not a charity but an investment that would yield great results and actually save money for the city. The Society could bill the Council for the maintenance of children, but hesitated to adopt that method.

Agricultural Fair.

Mr. Glover, Mr. Tom Brown, Mr. John Cox and Mr. B. Duffus represented the Fair Board. Mr. Glover requested the Council to make a grant of $600, the same as last year. It used to be higher, but in view of conditions the Board did not look for an increase.

The petitions were referred to the Committee of the Whole, to be considered with the estimates for this year.

Sanitary Inspector Appointment Sent Back To Committee

The Property committee's recommendation that Geo. Metcalfe be appointed Sanitary Inspector was turned back to the committee by the Council last night for further consideration.

When Ald. Dobbin intercepted the Metcalf clause he hopelessly divided the Council. He moved that the appointment be made by the Board of Health, to whom the whole matter should be referred.

Ald. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Worth, that the committee advertise in a special way for a returned soldier and that a strong effort be made to appoint a returned man.

Ald. Duncan asked Ald. Dobbin if he could recommend a good man from the returned soldiers. The position demanded ability and efficiency.

Mayor Duffus seconded the motion.

Ald. Smith moved an amendment to the amendment that the appointment be referred back to the Property committe.

In the subsequent vote Ald. Smith's motion carried.

Plotted To Start A Revolution in India

NEW YORK, March 6.—Dr. Chanader Chakiaberty, a Hindu physician, and Dr. Ernest Sckunner, a German, charged with "setting on foot a military expedition against a friendly nation," were arraigned to-day before the Federal authorities.

They admitted they had received $60,000 from Wolff Von Igel, German plotter.

The object of the plot was to start a revolution in India.

ONLY A FEW OF THE CANADIAN BATTALIONS IN THURSDAY'S FIGHT

Casualties Are Estimated at 300 With a Considerable Number of Officers in the List---Engagement Was Designed For Purposes of a Diversion--Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Major O'Flynn to Address Returned Soldiers--To-day's General Military News.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 6.—That the engagement of Thursday last in which Canadians took part was local in character and designed for purposes of diversion, is the opinion of the Militia Department this morning. Only a few battalions took part and casualties are estimated at about three hundred, with a considerable number of officers.

That the engagement was only of one day's fighting is believed to be because of the fact that Friday's casualties appear to be fairly normal.

TORONTO, March 6. — German shrapnel within one's body does not justify criminality. Col. G. T. Denison, Toronto's soldier magistrate, emphasized this to-day when he sent Reuben Fenton to the Jail Farm for thirty days for holding up a pedestrian with a revolver. Fenton's lawyer pleaded that his client was a returned soldier and still wounded but the Magistrate said Fenton's was a penitentiary case and he was lucky to get off with a light sentence.

OTTAWA, March 5.—February's recruiting shows some improvement; during the last two weeks 3,296 men were enlisted, making a total for the month of 7,930 men enlisted. This is an increase of 125 men over the recruiting for the month of January. Toronto District takes the lead for the fortnight, with an enrolment of 1,180. Other districts were as follows: Montreal, 368; Kingston and the Maritime Provinces, 317 each; London, 328; Manitoba, 255; Saskatchewan, 202; British Columbia 174; Alberta, 69, and Quebec, 8. A non com from the 216th Bantams Battalion is here to-day in search of men for the "small man's" unit. The Bantams are to go overseas shortly and need only a few men to bring them up to strength. LONDON, March 5.—Distinguished Conduct Medals have been presented to the following:—132688 D. Marrs, for dressing two wounded men in the open under heavy fire. He assisted in bringing both back to the trenches; 225623 A.C. Palmer, Mounted Rifles, carried out a most daring daylight reconnaisance and located a sap within the enemy's wire, shot a sentry and made his way to the enemy's parapet; 228139 E. Sproat, Mounted Rifles, when bomb struck a parapet and fell back into the trench picked up the bomb and threw it over the parapet, where it at once exploded. His prompt and gallant action undoubtedly saved many lives; 21216 J. Walton Mounted Rifles, carried out an enterprising daylight patrol and brought back most valuable information, and later during a raid personaly accounted for three of the enemy; 478560 G. Watson, Royal Canadians, although wounded by bombed an enemy dugout and killed nine, and later carried a wounded man across No Man's Land, back to our lines: 67570 Sergt. T. Toon; 77936 Sergt. G. C. Council Defeated Motion To Bring In Plumbing Inspector

The Property committee's recommendation to suspend Plumbing Inspector Thompson from both duties and salary until Mr. Ed. Manning's complaint of defective work at 710 George street, is investigated, and a report satisfactory to all parties was adopted by the Council last night.

The motion was moved by Ald. Smith, seconded by Ald. Saunders.

Ald. Dobbin moved an amendment, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that a competent outside man be engaged to inspect the plumbing at Mayor Duffus' residence, Mr. Manning's and any other cases in question.

Ald. Saunders — There's no proof against the Inspector.

Ald. Dobbin—I'm looking for proof on one way or the other, that's all.

Ald. McIntyre blamed the plugber in the Manning case more than the Inspector.

Mayor Duffus—You mean both are to blame and neither to blame.

Ald. McIntyre—The plumbers are after Thompsons scalp and looking for his job.

Ald. Duncan—An outside man would be fair to all parties. There have been complaints of this kind since I have been on the Council.

Aldermen Dobbin, Duncan and Worth supported the amendment, which was thereby lost, and the motion carried.

LABOUR MEN ASK COUNCIL TO SECURE VACANT LOTS

PTE. J. McCOY.

Son of Mr. J. M. McCoy, 565 Rogers street, who enlisted in the 109th Battalion and who is now at the front with the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion.

Mr. Joseph Crowe Assured Council They Would Endeavour to Work the Land if the Council Would Take the Lead in Getting the Lots.

TO CONFER WITH FINANCE COMMITTEE

That the workingmen of this city are anxious for the success of the greater production movement in its local application was emphasized upon the Council last night by a deputation from the Trades and Labour Council, including Mr. Joseph Crowe, Mr. L. G. Myland, Mr. Fred Browne and Mr. Herb Frost.

Mr. Crowe stated that the Trades and Labour Council was deeply interested in this proposal. If the Council could arrange to secure vacant lots in the city the Labour men would undertake to work them this spring and summer. They could employ the early mornings, evenings, Saturday afternoons and holidays. Most of this land has gone to weeds. If the Council would take up the question of getting in touch with the owners of these lots, the Labour Council would gladly assume the working of them.

Mayor Duffus said he had eight lots in the south end which he would turn over to the Labour men.

"The Labour Council has struck the keynote," said Ald. Stratton. "If once we get them back of the movement we may feel assured of its success. Many lots can be planted at a minimum of expense. Seeds can be bought in quantity and at a right price, and the labour and materials can be secured right. We should make a grant to give them a start."

Ald. Stratton moved that the matter of a grant to the Trades and Labour Council be referred to the Finance committee who would confer with the Trades and Labour Council and report back to the Council.

Ald. Smith remarked that the Labour men were not asking for charity.

Ald. Dobbin—They want us to help them get vacant lots.

Ald. Weir—I think the owners of the lots will give them for this work.

Ald. McIntyre seconded the motion for a conference between the Finance committee and the Trades and Labour Council.

HUNS ON THE ANCRE BECOMING GARRISON OF RAVING MANIACS

Position Had Become a Veritable Field of Terrors, Making Madame Tussaud's "Chamber of Horrors" Cheerful as May Day In Comparison

TOO HORRIBLE TO STAND

Examiner Special:

(By William Philip Simms.)

With the British Armies in France, March 6.—One reason why the Germans retreated along the Ancre was because they were fast becoming a garrison of gibbering lunatics. Their position had become more hideous than the scuppers of Hell.

Mud—bottomless in places—and the ceaseless pounding of the British guns, have turned their positions into stench pits too horrible for human nerves to stand.

The United Press correspondent was the first American permitted to penetrate across the ground evacuated by the Germans as far as Thilloy toward Bapaume. Madame Tussaud's wax works' chamber of horrors was as cheerful as a May Day compared with this field of terrors, painfully pictured at each step.

I zigzagged around stagnant cess pools and interlocking shell craters in which the water was the exact colour of blood. This might have been due to chemicals in the high explosives which rent the holes, or to the nature of the ground itself.

I found myself stepping on German bodies and parts of bodies which littered the region. They were in all imaginable conditions and positions, sometimes piled several deep.

At another place on a pile of several deep, lay a boyish German officer, fair as a girl, with his arms thrown back and his blue eyes staring to the skies. His sandy hair had been brushed back modishly by the rain.

Imagine scenes like this covering miles. Imagine every trace of vegetation long since blasted away. Imagine the earth powder stained and churned up from ten to sixty feet in depth. Imagine mud so bottomless that the German prisoners claim their men frequently were swallowed up whole in attempting to cross after dark.

This is the territory the Germans left.

Two attacks in November left scores of dead Germans outside the trenches. They have remained there until now when the British are burying the remains.

The scenes were too horrible for human nerves to withstand. They make quite believable the stories of soldiers who became raving maniacs.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES.

It does not pay to experiment with your eyes. Nature only provides one pair to each person, and science comes to the assistance of those who suffer from their eyes. If they are not neglected too long. See Dr. Lacey and See Better, 416 George street.

WATCHFUL WAITING.

We are told in this morning's despatches that President Wilson, newly seated in the saddle of official responsibility and power, is still watchfully waiting as to whether he has legal authority to arm United States merchant ships against the attacks of pirates. This is an admirable example of caution and its spirit can only be paralleled by the action of a man who, seeing a burglar with levelled pistol, ready to kill him and be free to spoil his habitation and murder his family, goes to the telephone and rings up a lawyer to find out whether he has a legal right to shoot first and protect himself and his household. The United States has so far trusted, and not in vain, to the protection of the British navy. But the British navy is rather too busy at present fighting for the principles upon which the United States is founded, and protecting itself and its cause against the same menace, that Uncle Sam is so far tamely obsequeously and impotently permitting, to continue effectively helping him in the crisis that has arisen. If Britain had waited for a legal opinion as to whether she had a right to go to the rescue of invaded Belgium, the Hun would have harried Paris long ago and been strutting to-day in the streets of London. Uncle Sam, thy name is "charity," which "suffereth long and is kind"—to the Hun.

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

The comment and complaint of a "Mother," appearing in a letter under "The Voice of the People," as to irreverence at a school entertainment, may or may not be justified or well founded. The objection to certain language as "shamelessly irreverent" may be ascribed to puritanic or pharisaic super-sensitiveness; such language may pass current as amusing and clever in the general estimation. And that may easily be the worst feature of this day conditions. The evil of irreverence, lack of respect for sacred names and things, has become so sadly prevalent; we have become so much accustomed to them, that the finer sense of reverence has become blunted.

This is an irreverent age, and it must therefore be regarded as an irreligious age, for in the last analysis, reverence is the foundation stone, the essence of religion—the spirit of worship. To speak lightly and flippantly of sacred things, or indeed to hold few or no things sacred it a common characteristic of many, if not of the most, of our people. So lightly is held the second commandment, that we hear people, with professions of respectability, refinement and religious sentiment, lightly, airily and irreverently take a divine name in vain—"gee!" or "je!" is a common expletive and it is nothing less than "taking his name in vain," and worse than that a disrespectful, blasphemous abbreviation of the name of the Redeemer of Mankind. People do this thoughtlessly and ignorantly, because there is too little teaching by precept and examples of reverence for sacred things and respect for elders or superiors.

Old-fashioned people set some store by the command, "honour thy father and mother"; but the staple of nine-tenths of the inane, so-called "jokes," the products of literary parasis, of the present day, are founded upon outrage of convention, of decency; upon caricatures of religion and religious men; upon exploitation of children's precocity, flippant retorts and physical and verbal acts of disrespect to parents. Plays are expensively mounted and staged, and largely attended and applauded, with the motive of tricks upon "father." Many of our picture plays that are served up to the children of to-day consist in glorifying horse play and rudeness, and unkindness to the menial, the poor and the unfortunate; in playing tricks upon parents, things to make angels weep, but nevertheless things that throw children into ecstacies of laughter and confirm, foster and encourage the spirit of disregard of parental authority, the spirit of disrespect for parents; then for other superiors; then for human authority, and finally of disrespect for divine authority—the origin of all irreligion. The air of our civilization is full of this debasing and degenerating incitement to disrespect of goodness, virtue, refinement and the better and higher things of respectable society. Respect for our superiors and our fellow men and for the finer elements of social relations is so largely absent that good manners and politness, especially in the young, is a lost art—an obsolete virtue—as extinct in relation to modern, social intercourse, as in the spirit of the stately and decorous minuet of a bygone time, in relation to the social enjoyments of to-day, as represented by immodest and satyristic monstrosities of the modern dance; one a type of decayed gentility of decorum, and the other of a vicious exaltation of the grotesque and degenerate.

These conditions come because we do not teach the foundation principles — good manners— in many of our schools, or in many of our homes; because too many of the mess of us do not believe in the subordination of our right to independent formation of opinion and inperpetration of divine injunctions to the true and real spirit of their demand. Irreverence and irreligion—convertible terms— are the root of many of the evils that disturb the poise of high ideals.

GETTING TOGETHER.

Getting together and pulling together, are the lesson and appeal of the war situation. Essential to the best success in normal conditions, civic unity of sentiment and aim and action is absolutely indispensable when concentrated energy is needed to successfully confront a crisis, either in civic or national life.

At the first civic conference called by Mayor Duffus, among the suggestions made, as to the needed conditions of civic progress, one gentleman, speaking from a business point of view solely, deprecated the existence of religious and racial antagonisms, as an obstructive element in business progress, not to speak of their destructive influence upon moral and social unity, and civic harmony, the fundamentals of the real civic spirit of progressiveness.

Religious rancour—bred, fed and nourished by organization for protection of a faith when its worth should be shown and protected by the life of those who profess it, and by that only—and racial antagonism fostered for political purposes, are the gravest dangers of Canada—disintegrating and destructive.

Religious rancour can be eliminated by each striving to exploit his religion in his life, and by Christian toleration of others who believe otherwise; and racial antagonisms by liberal regard for the patriotism and point of view of others.

In Manchester, England, there was, and may be now, an organization composed of intensely individual national elements, but combined and exploited in a way to conduce to true nationalism. A coterie of twenty each of the four races of the United Kingdom — English, Irish, Scotch and Welsh, foregathered on the days of their respective patron saints—St. David's Day, March 1st; St. Patrick's Day, March 17th; St. George's Day, April 23rd, and St. Andrew's Day, November 30th. Though representing four great races they met as one, and all being Britons helped each other celebrate their national days. They loved their own best, of course, but each mutually helped the others, and recognized their individual preferences. In the melting pot of social intimacy, racial differences disappeared and the pure gold of common citizenship, common aim and common endeavour for national good, remained.

Why could we not have something like that in Peterborough? Form a coterie with five or six sterling representatives of the great races, and assemble to help each celebrate and recognise the national day of all the rest. There is no quarrel, no imputation of disloyalty to his adopted country Canada, to any one who cherishes fond and loyal memories of his own land on its national day.

We could have represented on every national day all the nationalities of the Mother Land — English, Irish, Scotch and Welsh; and also the great French race on St. Jean Baptiste day, June 24th—a large element—a part of our citizenship. This would help the "bonne entente" movement, and make it as real and excellent a thing in Canadian life as is the alliance between Britian and her Dominions and old France.

Then we might add a fifth element in the form of native Canadians, and unitedly observe July 1st. We could make it the common natal day — the amalgamating element that would unite and consolidate all the other races, whose patriotism as Canadians would in no way be lessened by periodic reminiscences of the respective home lands that gave them birth or origin.

It would be a glorious day for civic interests and, collectively, for national interests, if we could get together as Canadians all, on the national days of the respective great nations, and unitedly dig a big deep grave for all the animosities, heart-burnings, jealousies and prejudices which have been brought across the seas and fostered and kept alive as irritating elements of division that mar and impair the unity of spirit and destroy the harmony of citizenship, that are the one thing needful for the achievement of the highest success in civic or national life.

Let us bury the suicidal body of religious strife and racial rancour at a cross roads and drive a stake through it.

The Polaric Difference In Reasoning Between The Teuton and the Briton

It is difficult to understand Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg's latest address to the Reichstag. It can be accepted as an expression of things really believed only on the theory that the Prussian mind has become so accustomed to using the spurious coinage of reasoning that it is quite unable to distinguish the false from the true. In what other way can we explain the German Chancellor's regret at "rupture with a nation which by her history seemed to be predestined surely to work with us, not against us?" It sounds like disguising hypocrisy. But von Bethmann Hollweg is a responsible statesman. He was addressing the representatives of the German people. Where in our history has there been a position taken, a policy declared, a principle enunciated, which would justify the belief that in this great struggle between democracy and absolutism, between eternal right and monstrous wrong, the American people would give their sympathy or their aid to the Hohenzollerns?

The Chancellor accepts and dwells upon the German legend that the British blockade is to the full as unlawful, as inhuman, as the German war zone decree enforced by murderous submarines. A peculiarly flagrant instance of falsification of reasoning and of history is furnished by his attempt to whistle down the wind the American objection that, while England "destroys only material values which can be replaced, Germany destroys human lives which are impossible to replace." "Well gentlemen," he continues, "why do the British not endanger American lives? Only because neutral countries, and especially America, voluntarily submitted to the British orders." The German Chancellor should know that the official documents refute him. Germany in her memorandum of Feb. 1 notified us that "sea traffic will be stopped with every available weapon and without further notice in the following barred zone," the limits of which were thereinafter set forth. "With every available weapon and without further notice." That meant and was intended to mean attacks by submarines without warning upon every merchant vessel that ventured within the barred zone. Moreover, in the first German war zone proclamation of Feb. 16 1915 we were warned that "neutral ships entering the closed waters * * * bear their own responsibility for any unfortunate accidents." Undoubtedly von Bethmann Hollweg has in the archives of the Chancellery the British Order in Council issued March 15, 1915. In that document he will find this passage.

> And whereas his Majesty has therefore decided to adopt further measures in order to prevent commodities of any kind from reaching or leaving Germany, though such measures will be enforced without risk to neutral ships or to neutral or combatant life and in strict observance of the dictates of humanity.

In the note handed by Sir Edward Grey to the American Ambassador on the same day we find this declaration:

> The British fleet has instituted a blockade, effectively controlling by cruiser cordon all passages to and from Germany by sea. The difference between the two policies is, however, that while our object is the same as that of Germany, we propose to attain it without sacrificing neutral ships or noncombatant lives or inflicting upon neutrals the damage that must be entailed when a vessel and its cargo are sunk without notice, examination or trial.

The English blockade has not cost a single American life. The immunity of American citizens from sudden death at the hands of English naval commanders is not due to our voluntary submission "to the British orders." England promised that American and neutral lives should not be destroyed. She has faithfully kept her word. We need waste little time over the German Chancellor's perversion of the truth of history. A far graver matter is the profound moral difference between the conduct of England and the conduct of Germany. England with the bad example of Germany before her, pledged herself to take no innocent life. She has kept her pledge. Germany has now twice warned the world that she would destroy the lives of any and all innocent persons who ventured within the limits of her unlawfully prohibited zone. To the extent of her powers she has kept that horrid pledge. It is a dreadful record to put upon the page of history, but there it stands and will forever stand, written in blood, a chronicle of German infamy. "The Prussians are savages," said Goethe, "civilisation makes them ferocious." With fury and every contrivance of ruthlessness they are striving to deserve that characterisation.—New York Times.

A CHANGE OF HEART OVER SUNDAY

Ald. Stratton's Paper and the Alderman Himself Have a Disagreement—Should Consult Each Other More

From an editorial in the Review of Saturday, among a lot of things it said regarding margarine the following references are taken. The article was written as a criticism of the action of the Trades and Labour Council in asking that the restrictions on the manufacture and importation of oleomargarine be removed.

Mr. Stratton's paper said:

"They (Labour Unions) have prospered under the tariff and have no quarrel with it. Why then should they demand that the fiscal policy of this country in this regard be tampered with? The dairy interest affords employment to a small army of workingmen, skilled and otherwise, and is more and more becoming the chief source of wealth in the farming community."

"To permit the manufacture and importation of butter substitutes would at once place the dairy products of Canada in the category of the suspected articles, just as are those that come from the United States."

"Canadian wheat and dairy products are on the same footing. They are given first choice abroad, and their reputation must be protected."

And this is how Alderman Stratton would carry out the suggestion of his paper to protect them. At the Council meeting Monday night he said in answer to the deputation from the Labour Council which desired the City Council to memorialize the Government to remove the embargo on oleomargarine, Alderman Stratton immediately endorsed the request of the deputation and later supported the motion asking the Government to remove the present restrictions on the importation and manufacture of oleomargarine.

WARNING

"The Forecast" of December, 1915, says: "Investigations * * * have proved with equal conclusiveness that children are the chief sufferers from the bovine type of tuberculosis, which is so prevalent in cattle that it is useless to think of its immediate eradication. THE ONLY PROTECTION FOR OUR CHILDREN, UNTIL THIS IS ACCOMPLISHED, IS PASTEURIZATION.

There is no escape from the conclusion, therefore, that IN PERMITTING THE USE OF MILY OR MILK PRODUCTS, WITHOUT PASTEURIZATION, we are responsible for the slaughter of innocents compared with which that of Herod was a trifle; and many of those whom we do not kill we maim and cripple for life, for the deadly tubercle bacillus attacks the bones, joints and glands of the unhappy little ones rather than their lungs."

Cheap Tea Not Economical!

Many people complain about the poor flavor of the cheap tea they are using, but are trying to put up with it because they think they are saving money.

In reality, cheap tea is rarely more economical, often less economical, than Red Rose Tea.

While Red Rose Tea may cost a few cents more, or even 10 cents more per pound, than common tea three teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea are equal to five teaspoonsful of common tea.

Less Red Rose Tea is required in the tea pot, because this master blend of Indian-Ceylon teas consists largely of the famous hill grown teas of Assam, India.

These Assam teas excel in vigor, richness and strength. Their leaves yield more liquor and a fuller flavored liquor. Blended with Ceylons they make the ideal tea for flavor and economy.

Try a sealed package of Red Rose Tea and keep count of the extra number of cups it yields in comparison with cheap teas. You will find that Red Rose is worth every cent asked for it—and that it costs no more to use this delightful tea.

Mother's Got the Vote

Ma says the Wimmin Suffridge Bill is passed as sure as fate,
An' that now she'll go a-votin' long with aunt and cousin Kate,
An' that there'll be somethin' doin' now the wimmen's got a show,
But who will mind the house an' all, is what I wants ter know,
New mother's got the vote?

Ma tells about the children who ain't got no time ter play.
But who work, 'long with their parents, in the sweat shops, night an' day,
An' for all their long, long toilin' what a little pay they get,
But who will do our washin' is what I dont' see yet,
Now mother's got the vote?

Ma says how where the wimmin vote they make good laws to stop
The little children workin' in the factry, mine an' shop,
An' that "equal pay for equal work" is a law all countries need,
But who's to darn our socks, an' do the sewin', who, indeed,
Now mother's got the vote?

Ma says, in lands where wimmin vote there's fewer babies die,
Because the laws is better 'bout the food an' milk supplie.
An' because they've "state-paid nursin', whatsoever that may be,
But who's a-goin' to cook our meals, is the thing that bothers me,
Now mother's got the vote?

Some say, when wimmin vote, the men won't be perlite no more,
But Ma says good men will be jest's perlite's they was before,
But who's a-goin' to sweep an' clean, an' tidy every day,
Now mother's got the vote?

Ma says there's lots of wimmin folk, wastes time on bridge an' teas,
An' payin' calls, an' gossippin', an' useless things like these,
An' that votin' don't take but a little time, p'rhaps once a year,
But who'll take keer of baby, is what I wants ter hea.,
Now mother's got the vote?

Ma says there's lots of cruel things, what I can't understand,
As goes on every day an' night in this our Christian land,
An' that where the wimmin has the vote they don't let such things be,
But who'll look after father, an' who'll look after me,
Now mother's got the vote?

But when I asks my father, he says "Sonny, you keep cool,
Your mother she's got lots of sense, an' I guess I ain't no fool,
An' this here Wimmin Suffridge Bill (they've passed it sure enuff)
Will show us that our wimmin folks is made of right good stuff,
Now mother's got the vote.

We'll get our washin' done all right, same as it's allus been,
An' our clothes will all be mended, an' the house kep' neat and clean
An' we'll get our meals an' ev'rythin' jes' as we've allus done
But I guess there'll be some diff'rance in the way some things is run,
Now mother's got the vote.

Hairs Will Vanish After This Treatment

(Toilet Helps.)

You can keep you skin free from hair or fuzz by the occasional use of plain delatone and in using it you need have no fear of marring or injuring the skin. A thick paste is made by mixing some of the powdered delatone with water. Then spread on the hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and all traces of hair have vanished. Be careful, however, to get real delatone.

NURSED HER HUSBAND

After Seeking Divorce Famous Beauty Returned to "Cruel" Hero

Mrs. Hugh Ronald French, daughter of Robert J. Wynne, formerly Postmaster-General of the United States and Consul-General to London figures in a remarkable story of a love renewed by the war. Mrs. French, who as Miss Ida Marcelle Wynne had been reputed to be one of the most beautiful girls in London when her father was Consul-General there, was married to Captain French in 1909. Four years afterwards she obtained a divorce in London on the ground of cruelty. She alleged that her husband was rarely sober except when on duty, and that when he was under the influence of liquor he acted brutally toward her. There was introduced at the trial the name of a Canadian chorus girl.

Captain French, who at the time of the trial was captain of the Seventh Dragoon Guards, made no defence and did not even appear by counsel. In April, 1916, however, when an application was entered in behalf of Mrs. French to make the temporary divorce decree permanent, Captain French opposed it, and on April 4 the court rescinded the decree and declared it of no effect. Captain French then returned to France, where he had been fighting with distinction.

Mrs. French devoted herself to nursing wounded soldiers at a private hospital in Grosvenor Square, London. She was thus engaged two months, when she learned that her husband had been severely wounded and taken to the hospital on Salisbury Plains. She immediately went there and nursed him back to health. When Captain French bade his wife goodbye, to return to his command at the front, those at the hospital who did not know of the court proceedings would never have believed that so affectionate a couple ever had been parted.

BRITISH FOOD CONTROL

Labor, Seed, and Machinery Carefully Prepared by Government

Says a London report: The Government's plan for the increase of home food production is being carried out on business-like lines. Farmers and others who cultivate land under arrangement with the County War Agricultural Committees will have all their requirements as to labor, seed, and machinery met. The guarantee of the Food Controller and the Board of Agriculture is behind the County Committees in this matter. Supplies of seed oats and potatoes are usually held ready for distribution as soon as the reports from the county committees show the requirements of each district.

Mr. S. F. Edge, the motor expert and also a pig breeder, has been invited to join the Food Controller's staff to superintend the supply of agricultural machinery. The Government have taken over the control of maize in the country. Control will be in the hands of the Wheat Commission, who it is expected will shortly assume control of all other forms of corn and also of rice. Lord Devonport, the Food Controller, appointed Mr. Hugh Francis Paul to be his commercial secretary, and Mr. David Davies and Mr. A. P. Hughes-Gibb to be his private secretaries.

QUEEN MARIE OF ROUMANIA was married to King Ferdinand in 1893, and was then the Princess Marie of Edinburgh, the daughter of Alfred I., Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Prince of Great Britain and Ireland. Her Majesty is noted for her great beauty and her kindness of heart, she being the popular idol of her people. Ever since the entry of Roumania into the war Queen Marie has devoted herself to Red Cross work and the general care of the wounded.

Fighting-Writing Irishman

James O'Kelly, M.P. for North Roscommon, Ireland, for thirty years, who died during the Great War aged 78, had an interesting career. He was at one time an officer in the French army, which he quitted soon after the fall of Paris. In 1870 he entered journalism, and became the editor of the New York Herald. He afterwards proceeded to the war in Cuba as a newspaper correspondent, and was taken prisoner. Six years later he took part in the United States expedition against the Sioux chief, Sitting Bull. He went to the Soudan for the London Daily News.

Railroadman Did His Bit

"These men are doing almost as good service for their country as the men who are fighting in France," said Mr. Ingleby Oddie at an inquest on a L. and S.W. Railway man, who was killed while crossing the lines at Waterloo.

Many a young man falls in love with a girl who does not exist, soon finding that it is a case of mistaken identity.

PAIN? NOT A BIT! LIFT YOUR CORNS OR CALLUSES OFF

No humbug! Apply few drops then just lift them away with fingers.

This new drug is an ether compound discovered by a Cincinnati chemist. It is called freezone, and can now be obtained in tiny bottles as here shown at very little cost from any drug store. Just ask for freezone. Apply a drop or two directly upon a tender corn or callus and instantly the soreness disappears. Shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off, root and all, with the fingers.

Not a twinge of pain, soreness or irritation—not even the slightest smarting, either when applying freezone or afterwards.

This drug doesn't eat up the corn or callus, but shrivels them so they loosen and come right out. It is no humbug! It works like a charm. For a few cents you can get rid of every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as painful calluses on bottom of your feet. It never disappoints and never burns, bites or inflames. Genuine freezone is sold only in these small bottles packed in a little sealed wood case, bearing a yellow wrapper. Beware of imitations.

FAMILY OF FOUR LIVES ON $8 A WEEK; HOW IT'S DONE

NEW YORK, March 5.—Fifty cents a month increase in rent has caused several families living in the neighborhood of Fourteenth street and avenue B to seek cheaper quarters. One of these families moved recently from a two room flat for which they paid $8 a month. The father, Thomas Keogh, is a chauffeur, and he, his wife and two children now have a three room flat for the same price.

When the husband remonstrated with the landlord for increasing the rent the latter explained he had to ask more from all of his tenants because his own water tax had been considerably increased this year. The explanation he gave was that the tenants were using more water than they should and consequently would have to pay for it.

Where they now live the Keoghs have three dark rooms, and to keep their gas bills down they have a light in only one. The husband earns $3 a day as a chauffeur, but he does not have regular work. He is employed by a large taxicab company. Keogh goes to the taxicab garage regularly, but often he has to wait two or three hours before he is sent out, and sometimes there is nothing for him all day. Last week his entire earnings including tips amounted to $8. In better weeks he gives the tips to his wife. These sometimes amount to $1 or 2 a week.

Gas costs the family twenty-five cents a week. They have a quarter meter. Mrs. Keogh says she tries to make the quarter last through the week, even during the winter, when the days are short. Fuel costs thirty cents a bag, and sometimes especially during the very cold weather, it took a bag a day to heat the rooms.

They eat meat once a day. Mrs. Keogh pays twenty-four cents a pound for pork chops or beef, and her husband can eat almost that quantity himself, so she has to buy more for herself and the older child, who has just started to school. They do not eat potatoes or other vegetables on account of the cost.

For breakfast they have a cereal and tea or coffee. Even the smaller child, who is barely three, drinks tea or coffee weakened with condensed milk because the mother cannot afford to buy fresh milk. They have bread with the tea or coffee. The big meal of the day, with meat, is at noon. This costs less than forty cents. There is little besides the pork chops or chopped beef, and the evening meal is as simple as the breakfast. They have a cereal again, with bread and no butter.

When the husband has a fair week and can give his wife $1.50 or $2.00 she saves this for clothing for herself and the two little ones. She does all the work herself, including the washing and ironing and caring for the youngest member of the family.

Her husband is a good chauffeur, she said, and he expects to get regular work in a few days, when they will be able to buy more for the children to eat. She makes their little clothes and most of her own and keeps her husband's clothes looking neat and clean. While the older boy is at school in the afternoon and her household duties are done for the time she takes the younger one with her to the markets. That is all the exercise she has.

THE NEW GOSSARD CORSET FOR SPRING

The new models vary in height of bust and length of skirt—as they should—to meet the individual requirements of the various figure types, but the general tendency is toward less corset, lower bust and shorter skirts, with a smaller waist line, indicated by skillful designing rather than actually expressed. Youth is the keynote in the style of these new Gossard Models.

Be fitted today to one of the many models designed for your figure type. An expert corsetiere who understands your corset problems will deem it a pleasure to fit you without obligation.

PARENT CIRLE OF QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

The meeting of the Parents' Circle of the Queen Mary School yesterday was largely attended. After the usual business had been transacted Canon Cornish gave a splendid address on "Character," in which he hoped the women who had now practically got the vote should not misuse the privilege. He also deplored the fact that there was no religious instruction given in the schools.

Mrs. Wilson contributed two very enjoyable selections and Miss Gladman, piano solos.

CAPT. J. BONAR PASSED AWAY

BELLEVILLE, March 6.—The remains of the late Captain John Bonar, who died at Cobourg, at the age of 83 years, arrived in Belleville today, by C.N.O.R., and was taken to Belleville cemetery vault until interment in the spring.

Capt. Bonar was one of the prominent men in Belleville over a generation ago. He was a sailor, being owner and captain of the tug Eliza Bonar. He leaves a son and daughter. He was a leading curler of the old curling club and was a member of the Orange Order. In religion he was a Presbyterian.

The deceased was an uncle of City Clerk S. R. Armstrong. The latter is in Belleville to-day attending the funeral.

Mr. Archibald Bryce Celebrates His Eightieth Birthday

Yesterday, March 5th, 1917, Mr. Archibald Bryce, of Keene, celebrated the eightieth anniversary of his arrival in the land o' cakes. He was born at Crammond Bridge, Linlithgowshire, Scotland, March 6th, 1837. He came to Canada at the age of twenty, and the state of mind resulting from an, evidently, tempestuous transatlantic voyage, is revealed by his statement that when he landed at Quebec, if he had had enough siller he would at once have gone back to Scotland. He came to Keene and settled there, and there he has lived ever since, reaching an honoured old age, winning and holding the respect of his fellow citizens, and having been an intimate part of the life of the community for the past sixty years. Keene is a quiet place, with few stirring events, yet Mr. Bryce has had some romance in his life. He has always been a competent amateur violinist, and the same "fiddle" strung, and in tune, is at his hand, that he employed to play at the wedding of Mr. James Nelson in December, 1866, and that was played by Mr. Bryce at the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson last December.

Mr. Bryce at eighty, is still in fairly good physical health and his mental health unimpaired. Yesterday at his residence there was a happy gathering, his children, his grand-children and many of his neighbours came bringing gifts to celebrate the occasion and congratulations and hearty good wishes for many more hale and happy days.

THE REV. J. P. WILSON AT MURRAY ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

"The Laws of the World Protect Property More Than Human Life," Said the Speaker—A Lesson From Samuel

Rev. J. P. Wilson occupied the pulpit of the Murray Street Baptist church, Sunday evening, taking the place of Major Campbell, who was to have spoken to the Murray Street congregation Sunday night. A good-sized congregation was present, and appreciated not only the splendid sermon by the pastor of Trinity Church, but two well-rendered numbers by the choir and an excellent solo by Mrs. Ford Turner.

Rev. Mr. Wilson took for his text the 22nd verse of the 15th Chapter of 1st Samuel, which reads: "And Samuel said: Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams."

Among the brilliant failures in history was the man Saul, to whom Samuel spoke those words. His first appearance to us was like the entrance of a Homeric god. He was the handsomest man in all Israel. Like many others who have been called to leadership he was a farmer's son. It is not the lot of many to start out on a search for their father's cattle and return a King. But such was the career of Saul. And he was so gifted that it is little wonder that when Samuel annointed him the people cried out "God Save the King."

No career was ever started more favourably than that of Saul. He was the unanimous choice of his people who were full of the visions of the bright things that his rule would bring to their nation. They expected great things of him. His very presence demanded great things. But they were sadly disappointed. One does not expect much of a briar bush, but that is not so of an oak. Much is not expected of a tin whistle, but we look for a great deal from an expensive pipe organ. There is a law that holds good in heaven and earth. When much is given much is expected. And yet this great man became Saul the Mistake. Why then did he fail? Disobedience brought about his downfall. It seems strange that disobedience should undo this bold, strong, gifted strategic king; but that is what actually took place. Had he chosen to obey the voice of God his career would have been all that it promised in his early days of kingship.

True Manhood.

"You cannot make true manhood without obedience," said Mr. Wilson. Ruskin said that obedience and not liberty would be the watchword of the people. Ruskin pointed out that the biggest things were the ones that yielded the greatest obedience to the laws of nature. The ocean obeys gravitation, but not so the lake. The sun likewise is subject of the law of gravitation much more than a speck of dust.

The word "church" is from Greek, meaning "to call," and one who enters into the Church is one who has listened to the call and then obeyed. The only path to eternal life is the path of duty and the only key to the door of eternal life is obedience.

The wisest man is he who has discovered the most of the laws of God, and the happiest man is he who obeys the most of the laws of God. Jesus gave complete obedience and the most heroic obedience to the divine laws. He was the holiest among the mighty and the mightiest among the holy. Obedience was one of the outstanding characteristics of Jesus. If He came not to do His will, but the will of His Father, who is in Heaven, how much more should we be affixions to do His will. To the young men of the congregation Mr. Wilson said that their life would be one great battle, a battle between self-will and God's will. Which would win? The answer to that question solved the problem of lives. Saul struggled for a time between the higher ideals and the lower impulses, but finally the latter conquered. If he had been true with his popularity and wisdom and stature what might he not have done, and what might he not have become. Many men to-day see the vision of what God wants them to do, but they will not obey the vision. They will not pay the price. "I suppose this is what is going on to-day as a result of disobedience," said the speaker. "The day of reckoning had to come." So it was that the United States could look calmly on while the Lusitania was sunk and Belgium outraged, but loudly protested when her trade was likely to be interfered with. The laws of the world protected property more than human life. As a result one-third of the world lived below the poverty line and another third so close that a week's sickness would mean starvation. While these things exist could there be any peace, permanent or lasting?

Concluding, Rev. Mr. Wilson said that there could never be a happy soul, a peaceful one, until that soul obeys the vision of what God intends it to be.

Council Seeks Right To Raise Poll Tax to $10

The following motion to give the city power to levy a poll tax of $10 this year was passed by the Council last night on motion of Ald. Stratton seconded by Ald. Dobbin:

That in view of the many men employed in the city on munition and other remunerative work, and, who being neither householders or owners of property, and contributing little or nothing to the upkeep of the municipal or patriotic expense incurred by and on behalf of the city that the Council take steps to solicit from the Legislature now in session power to impose for this war year a special tax of ten dollars a such sum as may be deemed advisable either in the form of a special or of an increased poll tax over and above the amount now demanded; that when such request is made to the Legislature that it carry with it, if permission be accorded, a stipulation that employers of labour may be required to supply to the city assessor lists of men employed and the wage paid to such per week or month as the case may be; That this matter, if deemed advisable by this Council be handed to the Finance Committee or other Committee for immediate action; that the terms of this resolution may be altered if the idea be not herein clearly or properly expressed.

Merchants and City Fathers To Discuss Free Market Idea

Ald. Saunders reminded the Council last night that the time was approaching for the re-letting of the contract for the collection of the market tolls. The market year expires on March 31. Ald. Stratton moved that the Property Committee discuss with the Retail Merchants' Association, the advisability of the remission of the market fees this year. He believed it would be a good idea and that the merchants would work with the Committee.

In seconding the motion Ald. Smith remarked that the Council could try out the plan for one year. It might encourage farmers to bring in their produce and the citizens might benefit thereby. The motion carried on the understanding that the Property report back to the Council.

Trent Valley Canal Will Be Prosecuted Without Any Unnecessary Delay

Important Letter Received From Sir George E. Foster, Acting Prime Minister

The following letter has been received from Sir George E. Foster, Acting Prime Minister, in the absence of Sir Robert Borden. It will be regarded as very satisfactory under the circumstances:

Department of Trade and Commerce,
Canada, Minister's Office.
Ottawa, March 4th, 1917.

Major J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
Peterborough, Ont.:

Dear Major Burnham,—I am sorry that the extreme pressure of business and the necessity of getting information from other departments has made it impossible for me to answer your letters and telegrams sooner.

As to the Trent Canal matter, you have already had replies from the Minister of Railways and Canals, who is chiefly interested in and responsible for that work, and in his temporary absence, I have referred to Dr. Reid, who is acting in his place, and who agrees with the answers made to you by the Minister himself. It is impossible, as you will see, for me to go any further than the Minister himself in regard to positive assurance as to when the Canal would be finished and ready for operation. The policy of the Government, both Governments in fact, has been to complete the Trent system of internal navigation as rapidly as possible, considering all interests, and no unnecessary delay has, I think, taken place or will take place. But conditions caused by the war are as you know imperative and have influenced and to a large extent restricted the Government's outlay upon our great public works.

We must all of course accommodate ourselves to these conditions. Consistent with the demands of the war and other consequences, the Trent Valley Canal will be prosecuted without any unnecessary delay.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) GEORGE E. FOSTER.

BALDWIN WORKERS LAID OFF.

1,800 Made Idle by Competition of Contracts for Allies.

PHILADELPHIA, March 3.—Eighteen hundred men employed by the Baldwin Locomotive Works in making 13-inch shells for the Entente Allies were laid off to-day because of completed contracts, according to an announcement by the company.

Within the next six months other foreign contracts for war munitions will have been completed.

To The Automobile Buying Public

I am now in a position to offer you the Ford Car either with or without the Self Starter.

Last November I received a Ford Car with an A.B.C. Electric Starter and Lighting System, which was designed by the Head Electrician of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit. This starter has been in continuous use day in and day out ever since, on a demonstrating car, which has caused it to be used an exceedingly unusual amount, and yet it has never been altered or adjusted nor has it had the battery re-charged, and it has started the car each and every time since it was put on, the starting crank having been removed.

From experience I know that this Starter is reliable and effective in every particular and I am in a position to highly recommend it to any person wishing a car with a Starter.

My salesman will be in the Show Room day and evening for the purpose of demonstrating and conferring with all persons interested.

"In Walked Jimmy" Scores Success At His Majesty's

A Comedy of Smiles Which is Bound to Draw Big Audiences

HERE NEXT MONDAY, MAR. 12

"In Walked Jimmy," a cleverly written sample of a style of comedy that presents many difficulties in construction, scored a great success at His Majesty's Theatre last evening. The plot is well built, carried through with admirable consistency and balanced all through.

But after all, it is not the plot that matters most in this comedy of smiles. The whole show revolves around the magnetic personality of the man who takes the part of Jimmy. In Mr. Summers' capable hands, this characterization becomes a source of continual merriment all through the evening. There is a sigh when he bounces triumphantly off the stage. There is an anticipatory chuckle when he swaggers back.

When any of the characters are in trouble—in walks Jimmy. When the Cinderella Shoe Factory is getting ready for dissolution—in walks Jimmy.

That is the real beginning of the piece. He appears on the scene just when the proprietor has paid off all his staff and is getting ready for the worst. "Jimmy" comes in like a breath of fresh air—a ray of sunshine—a Niagara Falls of energy. The shoe factory gets out of its coffin again and takes on a new lease of life and everybody is happy. Incidentally there are some serious moments as the conviction grows that Jimmy is a criminal. It would be unfair to say more than that.

Mr. Summers is, of course, the life and soul of the piece. Seen between the acts, he admitted that many business men have thanked him for the production, describing it as having been an inspiration.

All the parts are well filled except that one or two of the players would do well not to shout their speeches so violently. Mr. William McCrystal as Bobby Day has an excellently subdued style of humour, and scores a real success. Mr. Neil McLeod as John Trevellan gives a good characterization of the elderly business man. Miss Janetta Evans as Kitty Blake acts well, although she has not the opportunities for comedy afforded to Miss Florence Morrison, who is inimitable as Delie Dunn. Altogether "In Walked Jimmy" scored a great success last evening and deserved every bit of it.

SUGGESTS THAT 3 POLICEMEN BE DISPENSED WITH

That the Police Commission show cause why it should not reduce the police force by three constables and thus save the city from $1800 to $2500 was a motion passed by the Council last night on motion of Ald. Stratton, seconded by Ald. Dobbin. Ald. Stratton argued that the Temperance Act was so effective the present strength of the force was not needed. Kingston, Kitchener and other cities had cut down the number of their policemen considerably.

Ald. McIntyre—The Police Commission won't pay any attention to us. They didn't last year.

COMMITMENTS FOR DRUNKENESS ARE FALLING OFF

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER.

TORONTO, March 6.—The annual report of the Provincial Secretary's Department, issued to-day, contains interesting information respecting the operation of the Ontario Temperance Act for the three and a half months of 1916 it was in operation.

In Toronto cases of drunkenness were reduced by 278; London by 47; Kingston by 88, and Ottawa by 104.

The net results for the cities and towns of the Province, embracing all gaols and lockups is a total decrease of 5,908 committments, which reflects a marked benefit in consequence of temperance legislation. With the exception of Parry Sound, which has a remarkable increase in drunks, the city of Hamilton had the worst drunkenness record during 1916 of any place in the Province.

Hamilton had 761 committments, an increase of 267; Parry Sound had an increase of 437; Brantford, 31; Chatham, 39, and Woodstock 17.

Are Fewer Milk Cows Now in This Country

The latest estimate of live stock in Canada gives a total of 6,429,864, or six per cent. over the number recorded in 1915, says the Trade and Commerce Department. The increase in respect of beef cattle amounts to 427,000, or 12.5 per cent., while milch cows show a decrease, indicating a tendency to neglect dairy farming in favour of beef production. Sheep showed a shrinkage of 3.6 per cent.

Exports of chilled beef in 1916 are estimated at 21,723 tons, as against 6,260 tons in 1915 and practically nil in 1914.

In connection with this new trade it may be said that the further development is attracting the attention of the government as well as of farmers throughout the Dominion. It has been built up on a foundation of high prices, but it is believed that the export can be maintained in normal times. Proposals have been put forward to establish a chilled beef trade with the United Kingdom. The advantages are that the right quality of meat is available and the distance from Quebec is much less than from any of the argentine ports.

Mr. John Watt Suggests Plan To Protect Canoeists at Locks

A plan of providing protection for sinkers could be held in position far canoeists at the Locks was outlined enough from the shore to allow for an in a letter to the City Council last only canoe passage between the boom night from Mr. John Watt. He pointed and the shore.

ed out the danger that exists in the rush of water below the dam and reminded the Council of last summer's drowning at that point. Mr. Watt's idea was conveyed in part as follows:

A double boom for one length of boom log may 39 or 40 feet, should be lashed two feet apart and chained to the pier which is adjacent to the rollers at its upstream end. The other end of the boom will float free.

A single log boom of one or two lengths chained to the end of the double boom would be sufficient here. At the end of the approach to the lock at least two lengths of boom are required. If these are attached by a 300 foot rope (preferably cable) to the down stream end of the first boom they will float in line, and with small

When the upper and lower booms are connected by a cable and the upper boom chained to the pier there will be little danger of the booms breaking away. In the winter they will simply freeze in and remain there until the next season.

It would be an advantage to have a plank walk on the first boom and because the end of the boom is against the pier it would be easy to walk along this double boom and land in safety without injuring the canoe on the jagged stones along the shore.

In summing up this is what is required: 6 boom logs about 290 lineal feet, 360 feet of cable, 100 feet of bind. ing and anchor chain in short lengths, 100 lineal feet 2 x 10 planking.

The letter was referred to the Legal committee.

Provincial Secretary Will Amend Municipal Act

COUNCILS ARE EMPOWERED TO ESTABLISH FUEL YARDS WITH OUT REFERENDUM.

TORONTO, March 6.—Hon. W. D. McPherson, provincial secretary, introduced in the Legislature an act to amend the municipal act, giving to municipalities the right, with the approval of the cabinet, to borrow from time to time the money necessary for buying and storing fuel and such articles of food as may be designated by the order-in-council, and for selling the same to dealers and residents of municipalities; also for acquiring, land, erecting buildings, establishing, conducting and maintaining depots, stores, warehouses and yards for such purposes, and for appointing officers to manage such business.

The act gives authority for making all regulations necessary to carry out these powers. The bylaw need not be assented to by the electors, but shall require a two-thirds vote of members of the council. The debentures shall be payable in not more than ten years from date of their issue.

AUSTRALIAN ELECTION MAY HAVE AN EFFECT

(SPECIAL TO THE REVIEW.)

OTTAWA, Ont., March 6.— The announcement that Australia has decided upon a general election is bound to have very considerable effect upon Canadian political plans. Parliament adjourned until April 10 on the assumption that the Imperial conference would be well over by that time and a safe margin would be allowed in addition for the return of the Premier and his colleagues to Canada.

Now it would seem that the conference cannot be completed until May, as the Australian representatives will not be able to sail for some time now, and the voyage is a long one.

If the government does not decide to go on with the session without the Premier and the two other Ministers, a summer session is inevitable.

Should the session go on with Sir George Foster as Acting Premier, business of more or less non-controversial nature would be considered. The extension proposals for instance would not be taken up until after the Premier's return

Results in New Brunswick and the decision of Australia to hold a war-time election may have considerable bearing upon the attitude which the Opposition will assume when the extension proposals are brought down. There is another feature of the situation. The case of Hon. Robert Rogers and the Galt report is bound to figure when the session re-opens. It is even conceivable that the Opposition may refuse to do business with Mr. Rogers still a member of the Cabinet.

The New Millinery Has All The Charm of The New Season

The New Sport Hats Are Strikingly Different

Yes, so radically different that it's almost impossible to associate the styles with anything you've seen before. Undreamed of combinations of colors have been employed to bring about the effects that are daring in their conception. And the shapes! The same free idea applies to the shapes as to the colors. There are turns and twists, high crowns, low crowns, brims, no brims—in fact anything that will help improve milady's appearance is good and correct for Spring. That you will like these hats is a foregone conclusion.

Women's and Misses' Spring Coats $6.98

A Value That Will Cause a Sensation

Here, then is another example of shrewd and careful buying. And you'll not need be be told that to secure a coat like this required more than careful buying from any New York manufacturer. It means that we have had to locate a manufacturer who conducts business on the same plans that we do—who puts his values in his merchandise rather than expensive showrooms and other unnecessary costs. The result are these smart fashionable coats made of checks, mixtures, flannels and tweeds. Smartly designed with the new pockets and belts, also with the large flat collars. Trimmed with buttons The colors, too, are unusually attractive.

"THE TURNING POINT"

The Turning Point, presented last night by the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E. in aid of the returned soldiers' fund, was well attended. The caste, excellent before, was even more assured last night and the natural nervousness felt by an audience at an amateur production, was dispelled directly the curtain rose.

Mr. Campassi, in the part of Dave Denny, the care-free Southerner, took his part with such composure and naturalness, it seemed a pity he had not had a heavier part to play.

Mr. G. R. Langley in the difficult role of the New York shark, an all-around villain, was splendid and he played the part so well that it is well for him his popularity is so general as to be able to offset the impression given from the stage.

Miss Seabourn Hamilton, as Barbara Byrd, a winsome little Southern girl, charmed the audience with her graceful handling of the part.

Mr. D. L. Maclaren as Dr. Snicker, and amorous and grasping pastor, handled the lines and situations cleverly and kept the audience in roars of laughter.

Mrs. Scadding as Mrs. Anderson, the impressionable New York lady, was, with her beauty and ability, eminently fitted for the part she took.

Mrs. John Birnie, in the part of Aline Anderson, the heroine of the play, brought down the house with her charming personality and absolute naturalness and composure. Her splendid delineation of the little New York girl will long be remembered by all who saw her.

Miss Mable Patterson as the fascinating widow, was the life of the play Once more she made the audience gasp to think such talent as she showed had not been put to more practical purposes by becoming a professional.

Miss Florence Scott was the daintiest little French maid imaginable, and her solo, "Irish Eyes," was encored again and again.

Miss Isobel Morphet as "Billie," was splendid and her songs extremely catchy.

Peterborough possesses many pretty girls, but it would be hard to find twenty-five lovlier ones than were seen in the chorus last night, or twenty-five better trained voices.

The whole play was a credit to those who took part in any way, and to Mr. Neville, who trained them to such perfection in so short a time. It is to be hoped he may at some near date undertake another such venture. Mrs. Alec Spence, whose talent as a musician is well known, very kindly furnished the music for all the choruses.

The chorus consisted of: Esme Aylmer, Helen McLaren, Helen Stapleton, Geraldine Hooper, Nora Hatton, Bessie Mather, Marjorie Hatton, Georgie Stevenson, Agnes Carmichael, Marjorie Gladman, Irene Scott, Kathleen Dunsford, Edith Kerr, Helen Rush, Margaret Eastwood, Phyllis Young, Celia Dunsford, Hilda Cattitt, Marion Harstone, Maysie Armstrong, Phyllis Dawson, Margret Neill, Jessie Cressman, Vera Knox, Greta Rountree, Maida Conner.

BRANTFORD POLICE FORCE SHORT MANNED

BRANTFORD, Mar. 5.—The Brantford Police Force is very short of men. All the men at present on the force following out the policy of Chief Slemin are either returned or rejected men. Two more resignations have taken place, Constables Boles and Forbes having resigned. It is said that these resignations followed on a talk the chief had with the men in regard to enlistment, one man leaving the force at the time. The newest member of the force is a returned soldier, Palmer, who was at the front for two years.

ASHBURNHAM HAS LIVE CIVIC ORGANIZATION

Since the outbreak of the war one of the most noticeable features in connection with the work of the different organizations in the city has been the manner in which the residents of Ashburnham have taken hold of their share of the work and got results. As an outcome, no doubt of the results produced from effective organization in patriotic matters, the residents have a very true civic association of which Mr. R. B. Rogers is President, and Mr. G. L. Hay is Secretary.

At a meeting held the other evening the following resolution, on motion of Mr. Geo. Record, seconded by Mr. Malcolm McIntyre, was unanimously carried.

"Resolved, that it is the unanimous opinion of this meeting that, in justice to the people of Ashburnham, the street railway should be extended to this side of the river. We believe that since the union of the municipalities of Peterborough and Ashburnham, that the interests of this portion of the city have been more or less neglected by our city fathers. Therefore, we urge that our representatives in the City Council be interviewed and asked to use every influence at their disposal to have such extension made in the near future."

The meeting adjourned until Thursday, March 29th, when the representatives, Ald. Weir and Ald. Smith will be present to confer on important matters relating to Ashburnham.

T. H. GRAHAM'S FARM STOCK SALE

Mr T. H. Graham, of Lot 6, Concession 4, Township of Smith, will hold an important auction sale on his premises on Wednesday, March 7th, beginning at 12 o'clock. In the list there are several head of registered cattle, a lot of fat cattle, 12 young cows in calf, and a number of yearlings. Also a number of fine pigs and poultry. There are eleven good horses to be sold, together with a splendid lot of implements, waggons, sleighs, carriages, buggies, harness, etc.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples are Impurities Seeking an Outlet Through Skin Pores.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Toronto Telegram says: With teams in the senior and junior final of the O.H.A. last year and teams in the intermediate and junior final this season, Kitchener has just one chance left to make it one winner in four attempts. Both sevens failed last season before Toronto teams and the juniors this winter also fell by the wayside at the hands of a Queen City representative. The question now is—can the Kitchener intermediates trim Hamilton?—and this week will probably give the answer. The great comeback of Hamilton in the semi-final with Peterborough boosted their stock considerably, and has created a great deal of added interest to the final games. The Hamilton seven are a flashy outfit, and in this respect have it on Kitchener. On the other hand, the latter have developed an effective team play and are noted for their great checking. The first game is at Hamilton to-night (Tuesday), with the return game at Kitchener on Friday.

The Port Hope Guide says:

Peterborough were defeated by Hamilton by a score of 8 to 1, losing the round by 11 to 10. Peterborough went in with a six-goal lead, but Hamilton simply smothered them. We haven't much sympathy for our northern neighbours. A team that could defeat an opposing team by six goals and then take such a case of stage fright off their own little pond as to lose out in the round, is not deserving of a championship. A team that can win at home by six goals should be able to defeat the same team on any ice. It was different with the Peterborough team in by-gone days, when Chris Graham and Harold Armstrong were the shining lights.

Kitchener and Hamilton will meet in the first game of the intermediate O. H. A. finals to-night at Hamilton. The return game will be played in Kitchener on Friday. The feeling among Peterborough fans is that the Hams. will win the round. They certainly will if the Kitchener Intermediates do not show any more class than their Juniors did against Aura Lee on Saturday.

The 207th team got nearer to a championship than any Peterborough team has done in eleven years, and, incidentally piled up an enviable record, winning ten games and losing two, and scoring 142 goals to 73 by their opponents, an average score per game of approximately 12 to 6.

With Bob Armstrong in shape for the Hamilton series, Peterborough fans would be getting ready to go to the rink to-night to see the Soldiers battle with Kitchener. But what's the use?

Kitchener, March 6.—A large number of hockey fans will accompany the Kitchener O.H.A. intermediate team to Hamilton to-night to witness the first of the series of home-and-home games for the championship. The team is in fine fettle for the series.

Hamilton, March 5.--Hockey has made rapid strides in Hamilton. This season the interest shown in the two clubs has been much more pronounced than in any year since the game was properly introduced here. If the Arena was large enough there would be even larger attendances.

The 207th seniors attracted bumper houses to their O. H. A. games, and the Hamilton Hockey Club is doing the same thing in its rush toward the intermediate title. Last Friday night's crowd was the largest in the history of hockey in Hamilton.

The Toronto Mail and Empire says:

Hockey surprises are coming fast and furious this week. On Friday, the 118th Battalion defeated Owen Sound at London by a score of 18 to 7. Last night they went to Owen Sound and lost by 21 to 6. Hamilton, Ottawa and Aura Lee are not the only teams who can furnish surprises.

At this stage of the season there are generally more surprises in the hockey world than at any other time. The players, after a long winter's training, are inclined to get stale, and a stale team is worse than one that isn't in condition.

Spence of Toronto, Secretary of the Ontario Municipal Association, suggesting a Commission on tribunal that would have power to fix or regulate charges in any case in which either a Municipal Council or an Insurance Company considered the existing or proposed rates of insurance were not equitable in view of the facts affecting the situation. The Association referred to municipalities. providing extensive fire protection and the fact that there should be commensurate reductions in the rates of insurances in such municipalities.

Golden Wedding Celebrated

On March 5th, 1867, Mr. and Mrs. H. Porter were married in Manvers, and yesterday afternoon, after fifty years of happy married life, in which not one break has been made in the immediate family connection, they celebrated their golden wedding at their home, 265 King street.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter received their guests, who included Mr. D. Porter, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell, Oshawa, Mr. and Mrs. W. Patten, King street, and Mr. and Mrs. Sproul, Toronto, at their own home, which was festively decorated with carnations and daffodils, after which the party had dinner at the home of Mrs. Porter's daughter, Mrs. Patten, 267 King street. The dining table presented a gala appearance with its bouquets of golden daffodils and central decoration, a large wedding cake. Toasts were proposed to "bride and groom," and to the absent sons, Mr. M. W. Porter, Rocanville, Sask., and Lieut. Park Porter. R.F.C., at present on leave in England. Mr. and Mrs. Porter have many descendants, seven children, fourteen grand-children and two great grand-children.

The gifts received were many, including a purse of gold and large bouquets of golden daffodils.

After dinner a most enjoyable musical evening was spent, Mr. Bert Sproule contributing to the general enjoyment with several patriotic songs.

City Solicitor And Mr. E. H. D. Hall Get $15,00 Expense Money

City Solicitor Gordon and Mr. E. H. D. Hall, Solicitor for the Utilities Comission divide $1,500 in the proportion of two to one to cover their expenses in connection with the Peterborough Light and Power arbitration and late proceedings. The motion to that effect was moved by Ald. Duncan and succeeded by Ald. Smith. The sum included with the other expenses of that work, are paid out of the debenture loan and will be covered by the rates to be received from the city's power service.

Peterboro' Light and Power Co. Balance

That $80,882.21, with interest at 5 p.c., since Jan. 31, 1917, be paid Thomson, Tilly and Johnston, solicitors and agents for the Peterborough Light & Power Co., and bond holders in full of the balance of the award of the Peterborough Light & Power Co., this motion at the Council meeting last night was an echo of the city's late expropriations. Ald. Stratton stated that another $10,000 would cover all the remaining incidentals of that transaction.

DOCTORS ADVISE IRON FOR THE BLOOD

Anaemia, pale faces, nervousness, stomach troubles, watery blood, etc., are sure signs of thin blood. Dr. Malmorise says he can take any of these cases and cure any one of them in ten days by giving Iron for the blood, and Phosphorus for the nerves, "called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron." I have found that 99 per cent. of all stomach, liver, kidney, bowel, nerve, etc., troubles are traced right back to the blood. Just as soon as Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is given it is almost immediately absorbed by the system the blood taking the iron while the nerves are soothed by the phosphorus, making you eat better, feel better, look better, digest better, and finally you will be made 100 per-cent. stronger. Do not be taking all sorts of patent medicines and laxatives which only ruin your system; go to the root of the trouble and start taking Iron and strengthen your blood, restore your nerves, and your digestion and will recharge your whole system with new life. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. C. Weber dispenses it for Peterboro

German Papers Much Worried Over the Plot

Don't Know What to Think of Mexican Revelation—Seek to Show What U.S. Has Done in South America

ABUSES THE PRESIDENT

AMSTERDAM, March 7.—The German press comments concerning what the Vorwarts calls "The Mexican Adventure," indicate the embarrassment the revelations have occasioned. Almost all express indignation at what the Berlin correspondent of the Weser Zeitung calls "The Vile Treachery," whereby the instructions to the German ambassador have fallen into the hands of the Washington Government. This correspondent uses precisely the same language as the Lokal Anzeiger, declaring that "the pleasing openness with which the United States case is admitted on the German side shows we have nothing to fear by its publicity. No right thinking man can characterize our measures as hostility to America."

TELLS WRONG UNITED STATES HAS DONE.

The correspondent proceeds to accuse the United States of attempting to incite neutral states of the whole world against Germany. It further says the interesting revelation was received lately from Argentine that the United States attempted last year to drag the South American republics by treaties into a war against Germany, and sting them to sharp action against German ships lying in South American harbours. He accuses the United States of having, with the Entente, exercised pressure against China, to which, he says, is attributable to China's sharp note against the German prohibition of navigation. The despatch which is evidently inspired, adds:

"It must be said with all clearness that the United States least of all has occasion to display moral indignation of Germany's action."

SEES NO ADVANTAGE.

The editor of the Weser Zeitung publishes a leader, regretting the whole affair, and asking what advantage an alliance with Mexico would be to Germany. The article is uncomplimentary towards Mexico. The writer says the German Government has seen Anglophobe influence increase in the United States and declares that the German Ambassador must have been smitten with blindness if he did not recognize this and with culpable levity if he did not oppose it with means promising some degree of success.

The Vorwarts observes that President Wilson considered it necessary to employ high explosive to bomb the German-Mexican alliance plan and to hasten the granting to him of plenary powers. The newspaper anticipates that the fury of the American people will blaze in wild flames if the result is achieved which the President desired.

MUST REGARD EVENTS AS DEPLORABLE.

Count Reventlow, Deutsche Tages, of the Zeitung, sarcastically points out that those who cherished hopes of the maintenance of peace with the United States based on a division of opinion in that country, must regard the turn events have taken as most deplorable. He condemns the German policy which at this very moment must be described as putting the match to a powder magazine. His strictures naturally are directed against Bethmann Hollwegg.

The Post declares that Germany has nothing to conceal. From the moment the German Empire was obliged to reckon on the entrance of the United States in the near future into the war, it was the natural elementary injunction of diplomatic prudence to take precautions that in the event of the actual declaration of war, useful relations could be established with other states.

DEFENDS GERMAN PROPOSAL.

The Berlin correspondent of the Dusseldorfer General Anzeiger defends the German proposal to Mexico, and violently attacks the United States in much the same language as the Weser Zeitung correspondent. Both articles are easily traceable to the German Foreign Office.

ABUSES PRESIDENT.

The Hanover Courier, a copy of which has been received here, contains a vituperative editorial, full of personal abuse for President Wilson, the United States and Americans generally, in which adjectives like "dishonest," "ignorant," and "bullying" occur in every other line.

"What is in the so-called 'plot' that may not see the light?" asks the Courier. "Would they have us wait patiently like a dumb ox for the butcher's ax? If America joins our enemies we have a perfect right to deal with America's enemies."

The newspaper continues to the length of a column making assertions concerning "American hypocrisy."

NEEDS NO ALMS.

The editorial concludes: "The army widows' and orphans' commission rightly rejected Mr. Gerard's half million marks. We need no alms. To offer the widows and orphans of victims of American bullets a dole from blood money earned from them was an impertinence inviting a point blank refusal of the money."

THE MONEY REFERRED TO.

The 500,000 marks referred to in the above despatch was collected in the United States under the patronage of a committee headed by James W. Gerard, then ambassador to Germany. A despatch from Berlin March 2 said the committee to which the money had been turned over by Mr. Gerard on the eve of the Ambassador's departure from Berlin had decided to deposit it in a local bank subject to the dispostion of Mr. Gerard. It was added that commission had decided not to make the distribution among war widows and orphans as was originally contemplated.

Mr. and Mrs. Tinney of Preneveau were honored by their friends previous to their removal to the West. Following is the address which was accompanied with the gifts of china and a very pretty clock:

Mr. and Mrs. M. Tinney.

Dear friends—We, your neighbours and friends have learned with deepest regret that it is your intention in the near future to remove from our midst. We have all (young and old) many times enjoyed the hospitality of your home, whilst the stranger also found a resting place in the same. During your five years' residence at Preneveau we have repeatedly been witnesses of your unselfish and self-sacrificing lives. Whenever sickness, sorrow or bereavement or trouble of any kind clouded the homes of any of your neighbours you were always found lending a helping hand, rendering untold assistance and giving valuable counsel. The Women's Institute of Belmont loses in you, Mrs. Tinney, as First Vice President, one of its most earnest, untiring and hard-working members. Since August, 1914, when the clarion call to arms sounded and brave and loyal men left home, friends and business, to answer that call and a vision of broader work rose before our Society, you have given abundantly of your time, energy and means to patriotic work.

OUR SERIAL STORY

THE RED PAPER

By C. MOTCHKISS

Will you kindly try to talk as if you were sane—and incidentally mind your own business?" was the retort.

"To be sure! And do you think, my poor, addlepated benedick that I am not doing both? I'm a trifle selfish myself. That mine attracts me immensely, else I don't know if I had come so far. With your influence in a certain quarter I might get an interest in it. I will guarantee to form a syndicate and give Miss Merridale two millions for a controlling share, if she is willing to sell. See my lay? Nothing like having a friend at court."

"Quit your rot and talk sense," returned Wentworth, his face glowing.

"All right. First, I'll wash, then we'll dine. After that we'll take a look at this town. Then we'll take a certain train for a certain city, where you will see a certain lady, and ——"

Wentworth threw a pillow at him. The big fellow kissed his hand airily, and ran, laughing, to his room.

San Antonio lay hot and still under a sky line like Italy's, when Wentworth and Harper stepped from the train the next afternoon. As a means of precaution the two searched the pretty, red railroad station in order to be sure that they were not being looked for. Then they parted.

It had been arranged that the big man, being unknown to any of the Bagshot party, should go straight and openly to the Menger hotel, where he would be in touch with the men he was after. Wentworth would be less obtrusive by taking quarters in one of the less prominent hostleries.

After becoming sure that Bagshot was still in San Antonio the new deputy would hunt up the sheriff of Bexar county, tell his story, show his credentials, and trusted to have the criminals in custody that night. As soon as matters were in running order he would report to Wentworth, who was advised to keep himself from the public eye as much as possible.

And had that gentleman obeyed instructions all might have gone as intended; but he had no sooner stepped from the automobile that took him from the station to the Angelus Hotel than he became nervous and restless. His room seemed but a suffocating box to him though it was airy and comfortable, and after putting himself in order he ignored the risk of being seen by either of his enemies, and in spite of Harper's warning to keep off the streets, sallied out to get the air that his lungs seemed to demand. He figured out that there was not one chance in ten thousand of running upon either Planet or Bagshot.

He had not thought to walk toward the centre of the city but he soon lost sense of direction. In his path the ancient and the modern appeared to be on equal footing. The town like a young giant, was shaking off the slumber of old ways though, not yet fully awake to the new. The seventeenth century here rubbed shoulders with the twentieth; the mantilla of the senorita, the peaked and silver-trimmed hat of the tradtional Mexican, the broad felt of the avowed plainsman, the flowery creation of the modern milliner, and the somber "Derby" of the pushing generation, were all in evidence. The spurred rider in the Mexican saddle trotted in the wake of the automobile, and up-to-date architecture threw its shadow over low, adobe structures. It was a scene of contrasts—the mixture of two or three centuries, and it was both bewildering and attractive to Wentworth.

He walked on, interested in all that he saw, and had gone what he thought was but a short distance from his hotel when he came to a park like opening, and then he recognized his whereabouts. He was standing on the edge of the Plaza of the Alamo, and he knew that he had no business there.

For in front of him were the tree-embowered grounds of the Menger hotel, while to the south stood the venerable historic and dilapidated convent which gave the plaza its name. The appearance of the Alamo was perfectly familiar to Wentworth, who in his callow geography days, had looked at the picture of the "Cradle of Texas Independence," and read its tragic history.

There was no mistaking it, and it gave him a sense of satisfaction to know the ruin was being cared for, as indicated by the soldier patrolling in front of its wide doors. Only a few years before the trim park had been but a shadeless, sun baked opening, and the Alamo a storehouse for hay, now modern ideas have prevailed and the row of buidings opposite the hotel faces upon a wealth of tropical sucetience.

Though modernized in appearance to Wentworth there hung over the whole city an atmosphere of shiftlessness—a veritable air of yesterday but never of to-day. It showed in the listlessness of those moving on the streets, in the lack of hustle to which he was used, to the quiet, for which he was grateful.

Though now aware that he was on forbidden ground the young man was in a very pleasant frame of mind. What did it matter? He could not be seen from the hotel across the park; the trees were too thick. And he had a world of faith in Harper, only regretting that necessity compelled him to keep away from active participation in Bagshot's capture.

At that moment his thoughts were turned to the girl whose face attracted him as the lode-star attracts the needle; and he had just taken off his hat, and was fanning himself with it, when he saw her emerge from among the trees in front of the hotel, and with her head down as if in dejection or deep thought walk slowly in the direction of the Alamo. He watched her with an intensity of which he was not aware until she entered the dark portal, the patrolling sentinel apparently taking no notice of her, and then in spite of all reason Wentworth determined to follow her, and meet her face to face, to hear her voice, perhaps to take her hand. Up to that moment he had not fully realized his mental attitude toward the girl, but he did then; he knew now, and was hardly surprised, and with the awakening knowledge he threw discretion to the wind.

And yet not altogether the last. He had sense enough not to attempt to cross the plaza where he might be seen from a dozen points; he was too cautious for that. Turning his back on the park he skirted it by a side street, coming to it again on its lower end, and hurrying along he approached and entered the old and bullet scarred building.

There was no one who prevented. A man with a badge pinned to his flannel shirt, a supplement to the soldier outside, lounged sleepily just inside the entrance, smoking a cigarette, but neither lifted a finger in question to his entry. A peculiar feeling took possession of the young man as he found himself encompassed by the historic old walls; it was as if the climax of the nearly century old conflict had something to do with himself; for here was to be a climax for him—a climax of his hope; of fear he had none.

The interior was gloomy, and Wentworth soon discovered that the lady had not lingered on the ground floor. He made no inquiries but seeing a flight of steps against the adobe wall he went up. As he passed from behind two large packi. boxes and advanced into the long room on the second floor he saw the object of his coming standing at a sashless window gazing out on the plaza. With a quick eye the young man took in the bullet marked walls of the apartment and the chipped rafters overhead. Here the storm of war had raged at its height, for he was in the room in which David Crocket had died.

Wentworth thought to take the girl by surprise but as she heard his step on the hollow floor she turned and came toward him holding out her hand.

"I felt that you would come," she said, smiling a welcome, though her face showed a lack of its usual vivacity.

"Then you knew that I was in the city?"

"Not until a few moments ago. But I knew you had escaped from the boat for Mr. Bagshot told me he saw your ghost on the train before we left Galveston; and he was very much upset." She laughed a tired laugh. "I felt it was no ghost, knowing your ability to appear unexpectedly—and I knew you would follow."

"And you saw me?"

"I was sitting under the trees. Yes, I saw you standing over the way." Her face was rosy but withal it bore a troubled look. "I cannot stay long," she continued. "Far from being deserted, as I once feared that I might be, I am closely watched. He suspects I know something—suspects I have communicated with you."

"Where is he?" asked the young man, continuing to hold the slender fingers in his grasp.

"I don't know. Away somewhere for the day. He is away every day coming back in the evening. He is ready to move on the instant; he is frightened and desperate. Quite changed and even violent to me and either he or Planet always keeps me in view. Jose happens to be out now, so I came—at some risk."

"Heaven bless you for coming!" said John fervidly. "You will soon be relieved of them!"

"Pray Heaven, so, but I don't see how," she said wearily, though her breath quickened as she marked the light in Wentworth's eye and tried to draw her hands from his.

"What are his plans?"

"Last night he told me we were going to Boerne to-morrow and outfit for the plains. As if I did not know the reason he made up a story of an impossible ranch. His plan is to take me home to Kerrsville and then go on. He has made some arrangement with someone about the mine. They are to meet at Kerrsville. That is all that I know. He does not trust me much. Oh, I wish that it was all over! I'll give him the paper and all rights. I am sick—sick!"

She drew away her hand and threw out her arms in a gesture of infinite despair. Wentworth looked at her hungrily. He thought nothing then of the fatal paper, and for the moment forgot his father's murderer. His soul was filled with pity and desire for this woman—this girl with her lovely figure, her golden hair, her pale and appealing face. All he had done he felt that he had done for her. He loved her—he would have her!

The quiet of the place, the romance of the surroundings, the luxurious-ness of the air, and his past disappointments and reverses all contributed in bringing his daring to a pitch which later astonished him. He considered neither words nor deeds at that sublime moment but afterwards he was aware that he had suddenly clasped her in his arms and kissed her on the mouth—a passion as strong as it was new swaying him beyond his control.

She loosened herself from his embrace, with a low cry, her face aflame with confusion. "How, oh, how could you do such a thing?" she stammered, but there was no anger in her voice nor sense of outrage in her attitude. Wentworth was stunned at his own temerity. "God knows I did not mean any disrespect," he said, his own voice deep with passion. "I—I—could not help it. I know I took an unfair advantage, but—I have one excuse. I—"

She interrupted him there. She had retreated toward the window and the lover was beginning his passionate appeal when the girl lifted her hand, and pointed through the opening. "Look! Look!" she cried, indicating the plaza. "It is Jose! He is searching for me! I come here often, and he knows it. Pray heaven that he doesn't see you! Hide! Hide! for my sake! Let me go!—Oh, let me go!"

For Wentworth, with a lover's doubt solved, had embraced her again. "I will never play the coward for that villain!" he exclaimed hotly. "Tell me you are not offended."

"Offended? Oh, he is at the door! Please, please, let me go. No, I am not offended."

"Go, then," said Wentworth, as he released her. Go down and meet him, if you feel that you must. I will see you to-night. I will have them both to-night. You will wait for me? Promise!"

"I promise. I promise anything. Oh—cannot you see that it is for you I fear? Be careful—be careful!"

She ran from him, hurrying across the room to the stairway. Wentworth did not follow but stepped to the window, and with his heart in his eyes watched her go along the edge of the plaza and wondered why the Mexican had not trailed after her.

But the Mexican, though much of a fool in judgment, was not stupid. He had stopped inside the door of the convent and was chatting with the air of an old acquaintance, with the officer who lounged there. As he stood rolling a cigarette Miss Merridale went out and toward the hotel without as much as a look at him.

In dress the man was metamorphosed. He no longer wore his tight-fitting black costume, but the blue flannel shirt, leggings and pointed sombrero he had donned fitted his character and surroundings. It was a free and easy costume.

He had seen the girl pass him with all her usual hauteur but with an agitation of face that was unusual, and his wits, made active by the latent jealousy that marks those of his blood sought for a cause for the latter. There was but one explanation that appealed to him and after learning from the watchman that there was a stranger, evidently a Northerner, in the building, he put two and two together. His dark face paled with passion and his black eyes gleamed like stilettos.

THOUSANDS OF SICK WOMEN

Helped Every Year by Common Sense Suggestions Given Free by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

For forty years women suffering from all kinds of female ills have been writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Thus they receive common sense suggestions drawn from a vast volume of experience, and thousands of sick women have been saved from untold suffering, as letters like the following clearly show:—

Newark, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman. Your Sanative Wash is just the thing to overcome female weakness. I have told young mothers as well as older ones about your remedies, and what they have done for me. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life, as my health was very bad when I wrote you, but now I can do my own work and have not had a sick day since I began taking your remedies. I keep the Compound and Liver Pills on hand all the time."—Mrs. Geo. Thompson, 24 Sherwood Court, Newark, Ohio.

HAD BOILS
FOR SIX MONTHS
B. B. B. DROVE THEM AWAY

When the blood becomes impure the very first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, sores, etc., and to get rid of these troubles you must cleanse the blood thoroughly with a good blood remedy.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters.

Thousands of people from one end of Canada to the other have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but words of praise for its cleansing properties.

Mr. Rufus Bears, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I want to say a few words about your medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters. I had boils for over six months and sometimes was so bad I could not work. I tried lots of cures but nothing would drive them away for good until I took B.B.B. In a short time I was all better. It is a dandy medicine. I keep it in the house all the time."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., but so well and favourably is it known that there are many imitations on the market. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

BEADED RETICULES.

How to Make a Modish Wrist Bag Also Unique.

So strong is the vogue of beads that they are being placed on every accessory of dress possible. Fancy designs of beads are found on stockings, on neckwear, on parasols and on bags.

The designs used on one bag make one think of kindergarten days, so crudely drawn is each animal. However, they serve their purpose, and that is all that is necessary. The fact that they need not be exact makes it possible for any one to sketch a menagerie on a bag and fill all of the animals full of beads. The simplest way to do this is to string your beads and then couch them on the material.

Fence the animals in with rows of beads sewed above and below them.

The style of bag you choose to make determines whether the base of it shall be covered with beads. One bag is made with a flat bottom and has, therefore, been successfully covered with circles and circles of beads.

Ribbon can be satisfactorily employed to fashion bags of every description and for every purpose. The wide ribbon will do for the bag, while the narrow ribbon will serve as drawstrings.

Too Regular.

Not long ago a worthy woman of an Iowa town who had lost three husbands coyly admitted her intention to marry a fourth.

"Congratulations, Mary, congratulations!" cried a friend one day as she burst in upon the prospective bride.

The latter sighed. "Oh, the weddings are all very well," said she; "but what I do object to are the funerals."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Granny's Talk to Young Mothers

"Few young mothers realize the extent to which a cold lowers the system and makes it susceptible to disease. The majority of diseases arise from germs, but it is not widely known that a healthy system will repel their attacks.

Mothers should never allow a cold to run for 24 hours without attention. If this is made a rule there will be less sickness for young mothers to worry over. A good reliable medicine for coughs, colds, croup and bronchitis should always be kept in the home. You may say that you have no confidence in cough medicines, but that is because you have never tried the medicine that is thoroughly reliable and has stood the test of half a century. There is nothing in it unsuitable for even the baby.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

NO HYPHENITIS HERE.

Canada Has No Problem Arising From German Citizens.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, writing to his paper from Ottawa, has this to say about "hyphenitis" in Canada:

Canada is a land where hyphens grow in every bush, but it is a land free from the disease known to the United States as "hyphenitis." With the hyphen everywhere in evidence, there is no problem of the hyphenated.

Canada has a "German problem," but it does not affect the German-Canadian. Some idea of the magnitude of the alien situation which confronted the Dominion upon the outbreak of the war will be conveyed by the fact that the number of subjects of the enemy countries within its borders — Germans, Austrians, and Turks — is put as high as half a million. These were men who had not become naturalized. The great majority were recent immigrants.

For the purpose of handling this alien problem the country was promptly divided into registration districts and registrars were put to work separating the sheep from the goats. The records of individuals were carefully looked into, the great majority of the sheep were placed under parole, the goats were incarcerated in detention camps. For reasons that will be made clear, a good many of the sheep went with them.

Between six thousand and eight thousand Germans and Austrians are held at these detention camps. The majority of these, however, are Austrian and German workmen, held, not because of any enemy act or through special fear of their committing such act—this being true particularly of the Austrians—but because they were thrown out of work by the coming of the war, had no place to go, and had to be cared for. So far as this element is concerned, internment is more in the nature of charity than punishment.

Berlin is the principal city of "German" Canada. It is a splendid, up-to-date city of nearly twenty thousand population. The conditions are very much like those of some parts of Pennsylvania—the names are German, some of the elders cling to the traditions of the Fatherland, the German language is taught in the schools, German newspapers are published, and the native-born are as Canadian as the descendants of the "Pennsylvania Dutch" are American. Many of the men now active in the business life of this section are Canadians of the second and third generations.

To a large extent the masses of these German Canadians have lived their lives to themselves. In consequence there was some disposition, when war came, to look upon this element with suspicion. This was especially true after a few Germans in other parts of the country had made themselves obnoxious by their manifestations of sympathy for the enemy, and more especially true when a few hotheads—not Canadians, mind you, but Germans—had been so indiscreet as to attempt to justify the slaughter of women and children aboard the Lusitania.

This suspicion lasted for some time, but has been pretty effectively dispelled. When war came the leaders of "German Canada" came right to the front. In the war Parliament the Hon. W. G. Weichel, member of the House of Commons for Waterloo, was selected by Premier Borden to second the address from the throne.

A Kit Carson Incident.

Kit Carson received his only severe wound when he was twenty-three years old, and in especially honorable fashion. The Blackfeet Indians had rushed a herd of horses and run away with most of it. After a sharp pursuit through the snow by thirty of the trappers the thieves were overtaken and parley held. The Blackfeet argued that they thought they were robbing their enemies, the Snakes, and not their "friends," the Americans. This was only a ruse, and after the savages in lordly manner, had brought out five of the poorest horses and offered them in full settlement the council broke up in a general rush for weapons. The fight was from behind trees and rocks. One of the trappers had trouble with the lock of his gun. Carson saw the difficulty and quickly changed his aim from his particular adversary to the one that was threatening his companion. The shift saved the man's life, but Carson received a bullet in his left shoulder. This wound, added to the inferior numbers of the trappers, forced them to withdraw without attaining their end.—Kit Carson Days.

STOMACH MEDICINES ARE DANGEROUS

DOCTORS NOW ADVISE MAGNESIA

Just how dangerous it is to indiscriminately dose the stomach with drugs and medicines is often not realized until too late. It seems so simple to swallow a dose of some special mixture or take tablets of soda, pepsin, bismuth, etc. after meals, and the folly of this drugging is not apparent until, perhaps years afterward, when it is found that gastric ulcers have almost eaten their way through the stomach walls. Regrets are then unavailing; it is in the early stages when indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, flatulence, etc., indicates excessive acidity of the stomach and fermentation of food contents that precaution should be taken. Drugs and medicines are unsuitable and often dangerous—they have little or no influence upon the harmful acid, and that is why doctors are discarding them and advising sufferers from indigestion and stomach trouble to get rid of the dangerous acid and keep the food contents bland and sweet by taking a little pure bisurated magnesia instead. Bisurated Magnesia is an absolutely pure anti-acid which can be readily obtained from any drug store. It is absolutely harmless, is practically tasteless and a teaspoonful taken in a little warm or cold water after meals, will usually be found quite sufficient to instantly neutralize excessive acidity of the stomach and prevent all possibility of the food fermenting.

London's Bellmen.

Other bells than those attached to churches used to disturb the slumbers of Londoners. Prior to the institution of watchmen every parish had its bellman, who used to stalk the streets all night. At irregular intervals he would ring his bell loudly and cry out, "Take care of your fire and candle, be charitable to the poor and pray for the dead." If he met any malefactor he rang unceasingly until the neighborhood was roused to his assistance. A copy of verses published in 1683 by Isaac Bagg, "Bellman In the Parish of St. Giles In the Fields," describes his duties as:

To see your doors and windows all are fast
And that no villainy or foul crime be done
To you or yours in the absence of the sun.
If any base lurker I do meet
In private alley or in open street
You shall have warning by my timely call.

—London Chronicle.

How the Camel Got Its Hare Lip.

In "The Women of Egypt" Mrs. Elisabeth Cooper, the author, says that when she decided to ride a camel and he was brought to the door she tried to make friends with him:

"I walked around him and examined him closely. He smiled at me with his hare lip, which, if tales are true, he obtained legitimately. When Allah created the first camel he was lonely and went around moaning and groaning over his fate. It was then that the sour, dissatisfied look came to his face that is a distinguishing mark of all camels. Allah became sorry for him, seeing what a fine disposition was being ruined, so he sent a genie to tell him that a spouse was being created for him. The news delighted the lonely camel so intensely that he smiled and smiled until he split his lip, and it has remained thus ever since."

A New Fish.

An angler, armed with every luxury in the way of bait and fishing gear, sat on the bank for hours without getting a bite. Seated near him was a small lad with a bough cut from a neighboring wood. At the end of this improvised rod were a bit of string, a bent pin and half a worm. First one fine perch was landed by this youthful angler and then another. Pleased with his success, he started for home and on his way met the vicar. "Those are two fine perch, my lad," said the clergyman. "No, sir; they's not perch," said the boy. "But they are," said the vicar. "No, sir; I'm sure they're not, for when I caught the second fish the gentleman next to me on the bank said, 'Well, that's the limit!'"—London Express.

Parade of the Snail.

Mons, like Namur, is fond of fete and processions and military pomp. Every year on Trinity Sunday comes the parade of Lume Con—Walloon for a snail. The snail, however, is a mighty dragon of thirty feet in length. When the march through the streets is ended a gentleman known as Gilles de Chin steps forward and pretends to slay the dragon—so that the parallel is complete. In this procession in former days an enormous cannon used to be carried. It is believed that the cannon was the one used at the battle of Crecy.—London Standard.

Twitching of the Nerves, Headache and Indigestion

Would Lie Awake For Hours Unable to Sleep—Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Peterborough, Ont., March 7. — These are trying times on people who are naturally nervous and easily worried and excited. On every hand you hear of nervous prostration and nervous collapse. Sometimes the result of overwork and the worry of business cares and again on account of the depressing influence of war news and the anxiety for those who are in danger.

Never has there been so great demand for treatment to restore the exhausted nerves and never has Dr. Chase's Nerve Food so thoroughly proven its efficiency in this regard.

Mrs. C. French, 104 Lansdowne street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches, and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with a twitching or fidgety feeling about my limbs after retiring, causing me much loss of sleep. If wakened up out of my first sleep, even had I been asleep only five minutes, I would lie awake for hours and could not get to sleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves going and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or fidgety feeling in the limbs is entirely cured, I can now eat and sleep well. I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Bluffed Savage King Mtesa.

When the well known African traveler Dr. Robert Felkin was staying with the bloodthirsty King Mtesa of Uganda many years ago the king, out of gratitude for his visitor's medical treatment, wished to cut off his head. On Dr. Felkin representing that the treatment was not finished and that if interrupted it would cause Mtesa's death the latter granted him a reprieve until he was quite recovered. Then the execution was determined upon. Emin Pasha, who was a friend of Dr. Felkin, had instructed him most accurately about the state of affairs in Uganda and had revealed to him an important state secret—namely, where Mtesa's powder store was hidden. Dr. Felkin remembered this at the right moment and as a last resort threatened that if Mtesa killed him he would bring down a flash of lightning upon his powder store. Mtesa replied incredulously, "Tell me where it is," whereupon Dr. Felkin whispered in his ear, "It is concealed under your harem."

Mtesa turned pale and allowed Felkin and his companions to live. The "lightning maker's" authority increased when next day a flash of lightning happened to strike near the harem.

A Frank Philosopher.

Charles Eliot Norton in his Harvard lectures on the history of art used often to describe a meeting between Thomas Carlyle and the philosopher Mallock.

"Mallock was a wise man," he would say, "but his views differed from Carlyle's, and hence, though they were true views, Carlyle deemed them false and pernicious. We should all cultivate a broad outlook, so as to escape from the narrow intolerance of a Carlyle. When Mallock called on Carlyle he talked in his fluent way for two straight hours. Then he rose to go. At the door Carlyle, who had smoked the whole time in grim silence, took his pipe from his mouth and said mildly:

"'Weel, goodby, Mr. Mallock. I've received ye kindly because I knew yer mither, but I never want to set eyes on ye again.'"

Steel Points.

The expression "well tempered" or "finely tempered" steel is generally misused. It is usually taken to indicate steel of extra hardness, whereas the reverse in the case, though very few people are aware of the fact.

The greater the degree of tempering the softer the steel. The steel worker measures the degree of tempering by the color of the metal. Thus the hardest—namely, the least tempered—steel is light straw in color, while the softest kind is white.

Between these extremes, commencing from the hard end of the scale, are the following shades: Straw, dark straw, light bronze, bronze, dark bronze, light blue, blue, dark blue.

Tempering steel is a very delicate business and one calling for that sense of what is "just right," which is found in good cooks.—London Answers.

Brutalities at Sea.

Naval punishments were brutally severe in the seventeenth century. They marooned—that is, they set a man ashore alone on a desolate coast or island and left him to starve, to be destroyed by savages or wild beasts. They keelhauled—that is, they dragged a man naked by yardarm whips under the bottom of the ship and drew him up raw and bloody with the harsh wounding of barnacles and spikelike adherances only to be submerged afresh ere the unhappy miscreant could fetch a full breath. They nailed a man to the mainmast by driving a knife through his hand. For murder (that was often manslaughter) they tied the living to the dead, back to back, and threw them overboard.

Push.

"Push," says a modern philosopher, "should be the big word in the vocabulary of every beginner. There is no such thing as 'pull' applied to bodies. The engine never pulls a train, but pushes it. The coupling of the engine always extends behind that of the car following and does actually shove it forward." But the pessimist will not be silenced. He only shifts to "Who's back of him?"—Pittsburgh Sun.

Dancing.

The art or exercise of dancing can be traced back to the early Egyptians, who ascribe that invention to their god Thoth. Beyond a doubt dancing is much older than history. It began in connection with religious rites and was performed in honor of the deities that were worshiped.

A Brave Man Needed.

"I don't know what we're going to do for dinner, Jack. I asked cook to kill one of the chickens and she said she simply couldn't."

"Well, I'd rather starve than do it myself, but we might call in our next door neighbor. He belongs to the National guard."—Harper's Weekly.

Debts.

"Debt is a terrible thing. Nothing annoys me more than debts."

"I didn't know you owed anything."

"I don't; I refer to what other people owe me."—Boston Transcript.

"Do you keep servants?"

"No. We are like all other housekeepers in that respect. We hire servants, but do not succeed in keeping them."—Houston Post.

Mining in British Columbia.

Mining, which, after all, should be perhaps the greatest industry of British Columbia, is beginning to come into its own. There are dozens of big mines, copper, zinc, silver, not to speak of coal, which are steadily producing, and doing so quietly without any band wagon methods. But there are signs that the investing public is getting into a receptive mood in regard to mining: Hitherto British and United States capital has corralled most of the best paying propositions, while local capitalists have been asleep or indifferent.

The investing public is getting into a receptive mood in regard to mining. There is still plenty of money left in the Province for legitimate investment, and given a fair deal, money will be forthcoming. The investing public of this province has cut its investing eye-tooth and will demand fair treatment from the prospectors, insisting that they be sure of their ground when looking for prospective buyers, and will expect fair treatment from corporations. When a corporation places its securities in the hands of the public its propositions become the concern, not of the immediate persons interested, but of every man holding stock, who does not want to be kept in the dark regarding operations, and who wants the why and wherefore of all statements explained thoroughly. With reports of dividends and good prices reigning there should not be the lack of confidence in buying that there is at the present.

Railway Travel in Germany.

Praise of railway traveling facilities in Germany is given by Miss Norma Lorimer in her book, "By the Waters of Germany:"

"Although we were only traveling third class we had little tables to eat at, and the upholstered seats were wide and well adapted to suit the comfort of women. * * * I was thankful on that hot day that the seat was free from any kind of upholstering and for the fresh air installation, which is fixed in the roof, along with the electric light. One of the other good points about German railway traveling is that a stewardess attends to the comfort of the passengers on board just as a ship's stewardess does at sea. She tidies up the carriages after messy meals have been eaten from baskets * * * until it is no difficult matter to arrive at the end of a long day's journey in almost as dustless and fresh a condition as one started out."

How Bodies Fall.

Answering the question, "Why is it that falling bodies in the air manage to reach a spot directly below them if the earth is in continual motion?" Edgar Lucien Larkin, in the New York American, says:

"They do not fall on a spot exactly below the point where released and let fall. Go up to the center of the dome of the capitol at Washington, or center of interior of the Washington monument, and drop an absolutely round ball in absolutely still air, and it will strike the floor slightly to the east of the precise vertical. The earth revolves from west to east, therefore dome and top of monument traverse wider circles than do their bottoms, hence move faster. The ball, having motion of starting point, falls to the east of base—vertical—point. True of all points on earth except at poles."

Early Use of Tin.

The tin used in the composition of bronzes from Assyria was, probably obtained from Phoenicia, and it is believed that this was exported 3,000 years ago from the British Isles.

The Assyrians appear to have made an extensive use of this metal, and the degree of perfection which the making of bronze had then reached clearly shows that they must have been long experienced in the use of it. They appear to have received what they used from the Phoenicians. Some think the Celtic tribes were acquainted with this metal previously to the arrival of the Phoenicians upon those shores.

It is said that the Phoenicians were indebted to the Tyrian Hercules for their trade in tin.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Brief Military Messages.

Lord Howard of Effingham when the Spanish armada was put to flight made one word the message of his victory to Queen Elizabeth—"Cantharis"—the Spanish fly, "a conceite which," a chronicler tells us, "did much to tickle her majestie and her courtiers."

The Vicomte de Turenne, marshal of France, was a man of equally few words, as he proved when, after his brilliant defeat of Conde at the dunes in 1658, he announced his triumph in ten words: "The enemy came, was beaten. I am tired. Good night!"

But the world's greatest generals have always been models of brevity as of modesty since and probably long before the days of Caesar, whose "I came, I saw, I conquered!" sent to his friend Amintius after the glorious victory over Pharnaces at Zela is the most famous "dispatch" in the annals of war.—"Great Thoughts."

Passing of the Romany Dialect.

The Romany dialect, so great loved by Borrow, is said to be now dying out among English gypsies, one of the few families which still cherish it being the Woods, whose tents and caravans may be found by the rivers and roads of north Wales. The Woods preserve many stories of their earliest known progenitor, who flourished about the beginning of the eighteenth century. According to their traditions, "he always rode on horseback on a blood horse, would not sleep in the open, but in barns; wore a three cocked hat with gold lace, a red silk coat, a waistcoat embroidered with green leaves, had half crowns for buttons on his coat, sported white breeches gayly decked with ribbons, pumps with silver buckles and spurs, a gold watch and chain and two gold rings." From the description one gathers the gypsy's idea of a bowling swell.—London Chronicle.

A Rise.

A man from the middle west was coming over from Catalina island to Los Angeles. In one hand he carried a bottle, tightly corked and full to the top with a clear green liquid.

"What you got in the bottle, sport?" asked a fellow passenger.

"Some water from the Pacific ocean. The folks back home won't believe the sea water is salty. They're ignorant, but I'm taking this bottle home to prove it."

"But," said the other, "you've got the bottle plumb full. When the tide comes in that water will rise and bust the bottle."

"Is that so?" asked the man with the water. "I hadn't thought of that. I'll pour out a little." And he did.—Saturday Evening Post.

Strictly Canadian Henceforth.

All of Canada's army divisions at the front are to be henceforth completely Canadian. The Minister of Militia announced a few days ago that arrangements had been completed for the supplying of every unit of the three divisions now at the front with both Canadian men and Canadian equipment. Although the 1st Division was completely Canadian so far as personnel and equipment went, it was found necessary when the 2nd Division went across to borrow part of the artillery, transport, and other units from the British War Office. These are now being replaced by units and equipment supplied and owned by Canada.

In the case of the 3rd Division, the organization of which is now being completed, the same policy of having Canadian-supplied or Canadian-owned equipment in the way of transports, artillery, Army Service Corps, etc., is being followed.

Glycerin's Discovery.

The first announcement of his discovery of glycerin was made by Karl Wilhelm Scheele, a Swedish chemist, in 1777. The inventor described the substance as "the sweet principle of fats" and named it oelsuss. Later investigations by Chevreul, Berthelot and many other chemists resulted in the perfecting of the glycerin which is now so largely used in manufactures, medicine and the arts. Scheele made many other important discoveries, including tartaric acid, chlorine and baryta. He discovered arseniureted hydrogen and the green color still known as "Scheele's green."

Where can a man take $89.30 per year for 10 years and invest it in ANY OTHER WAY and produce an immediate estate of $4045.00 in case of death?

Or he could withdraw $905.55 which you will notice is more than he paid in, ALL TOLD, and still retain a FREE paid up participating policy of $1000.00, payable at death; thus his dollars did two things at the same time,—carried the risk, and gave a FREE POLICY and he saved his money for himself too.

Tea Drinking in Russia.

It is not correct to say that Russians like their tea without sugar; on the contrary, they usually take several big lumps. The peasants bite pieces off the sugar instead of putting it into the glass. A slice of lemon is usually, though not always, put in the glass, but orange, jam, bits of apple and even strawberries, when in season, are very popular substitutes and make a drink which most people would consider uncommonly nasty. Hostesses who wish to be quite comme il faut in this matter should note that Russian tea must be served to ladies in cups, not glasses; gentlemen drink it from glasses with silver or plated holders. The long handled spoon used for stirring the tea is left in the glass, and to manipulate it properly while drinking requires some little dexterity. Failing the glass-holder, a saucer may be used, and in less exalted circles it is permissible, and even customary, to drink the tea from the saucer.

Breaks Only the Best.

They were preparing to move, and the mistress herself was packing the china. She had reached a set of bread and butter plates in which she particularly delighted—a simple white and gold pattern of exquisite fineness—and one was missing. She hunted through the kitchen and half empty pantry and as a last resort unpacked a neatly closed box she had just finished. She thought of asking Delphine, the faithful old deaf maid, but the effort required to make her hear seemed too great.

Delphine, however, whose keen eyes missed nothing, when she saw her mistress on the point of losing her patience came over to her and explained:

"I'll have to tell you now. I broke one o' them things t'other day. I don't break anything very often, but when I do it's something of some consequence."—New York Sun.

Two Rules of Life.

Here is a man whose guiding principle is hate. He is forever trying to punish somebody for some real or fancied grievance. He will spend money and thought and time to bring confusion upon some one whom he chooses to regard as an enemy, money and thought and time which he might employ in advancing his own fortunes or in nobler effort. When he succeeds in his end he seems to take a brief satisfaction in his work, but he does not impress us as a happy man. He soon forgets all about the punished enemy and casts about for a new one to punish. When he fails in his end and his enemy escapes or punishes him he is very much cast down.

One advantage of taking the diametrically opposite passion to the one this man has selected as your guiding principle of life is that even when you lose you win.—Columbus Journal.

"Hocking Valley."

Broadway near Forty-second street, New York, always in July is known as "Hocking Valley." You see, most of the actors and actoriues have been out of work for a few weeks, and during the month of July it is a case of all going out and nothing coming in, with the result that they are "hocking their cracked ice."

Diamonds are the savings banks of all Broadway talent, and they are the next best thing to real money when their owners are broke. Nearly every theatrical person hits hard pan in July. They may need only a few hundred beans to tide them over until they sign up and it's so easy to slip off a ring or stickpin and get the kale from "uncle" when they are visiting "Hocking Valley."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

WOMEN SHOULD GET THIS HABIT AS WELLAS ME N

Don't eat bite of Breakfast until you drink glass of water

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy, complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleaning, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S PLAITED DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The strong tendency for original effects in frocks for growing girls shows decidedly in this one, No. 8,078, a model that should please the most capricious daughter.

The box plait running the full length of the centre front is a notable feature. Either side of it three tucks are introduced in the waist body—these are stitched to the waistline only, but pressed into position all the way to the lower edge of the dress. The collar developed in contrasting goods is of a very attractive cut and the full length sleeve has a natty cuff to match. The skirt is a full plaited model joined to the waist body at side, front and back, leaving the centre box plait in the dress free, to prove its merit in giving the "straight line front" that is so much the rage in models for senior girls and women. The side belts, button trimmed, are decorative features that have much fashion value.

Wool plaid, wool checked material, serge, gabardine, wool poplin and like weaves are very desirable with the union of silk, satin or white broadcloth for collar and cuffs. The pattern shows in pictures every point to be covered, so that the girl who wants such a dress will find copying the design no great effort.

The dress pattern No. 8,078 cuts in sizes 6 to 12 years. To make in size 8 requires 3¾ yards 36 inch material and ¾ yard 27 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern, send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

A BRITISH RAID ON THE GERMAN LINES THROUGH CLOUDS OF POISON GAS.

The British bombing parties along the western front have been particularly active. Many daring raids have been carried out by them in the face of constant clouds of poison gas. When wearing his smoke helmet the British soldier presents a strange impersonal appearance; the German apparatus contains a round chemical filter much larger than the British nozzle. On both sides bombs are used as the principal weapons; these are carried in bags round the waist and hurled at the advancing foe. Notice the saw edge on bayonet.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Getting at A Secret

By JOHN TURNLEE

Betty and I were at the piano, I was handing her sheets of music, which she would play or try to play. Presently I tired of this and said to her:

"I heard something about you the other day."

"What did you hear?"

"I'm not going to tell you."

If I had really heard anything about her I might have teased her for awhile, then told her; but, since I had heard nothing, I had drawn down discomfort on my head.

Every now and again I would admit something in which there was not a grain of truth, and every time I did so I sank deeper into the mire.

"Did you hear it from a man or a woman?"

"From neither." This was about the only truth there was in all my answers.

"Did you see it written?"

"No."

"Printed?"

"Certainly not."

This ended this series of questions, and after some thought Bet went off on another tack, in which, of course, it was as easy for me to run her on the rocks as before. At last I said to her:

"Really, Bet, there's nothing in what I heard, or, rather, I heard nothing at all. I said what I did only to tease you."

"You didn't do any such thing. You heard something that I am sure I should know. There is an enemy against whom I should be on my guard. It is your duty to tell me who she is."

"She?"

"Yes. I'm not afraid of a man. Men have no interest in injuring women, and if they had they wouldn't know how. They'd blunder, and it would all react on themselves."

"Didn't I tell you that what I heard was complimentary?"

"And don't I know how to injure a rival by pretending to praise her?"

"How would you do that?" I asked, hoping to divert her attention from the subject in question.

"You may as well tell me who this she devil is and what she said about me."

"There is no she devil, and she has not spoken a word against you."

"Has she red hair?"

I gave a shrug, but no reply.

"This is ridiculous!" said Bet. "Just as if I didn't know who had been saying disagreeable things about me!"

What a fool I had been! And by my folly I had doubtless caused her enmity toward some innocent woman to burst into a flame. At any rate, this is the way I looked upon the matter. I must try a bluff. I scowled fiercely and, rising, went into the hall, opened the door of the coat closet, stepped inside and was taking down my hat when I heard the door shut behind me and the key turned.

Here was a pretty how-d'ye-do, Bet had me locked in the dark and would doubtless keep me there until I told her what had no existence even in imagination, much less in fact. I waited, expecting to hear from her. I waited in vain. I rapped on the door.

"What is it?"

"Let me out." I assumed an angry tone.

"Tell me what you heard about me."

"I would if I could, but since I heard nothing I can't."

"Then you admit that you are untruthful?"

"Yes, anything you like."

"And you heard nothing said about me?"

"Not a thing."

"Perhaps you have forgotten it?"

"Perhaps I have."

"Very well; stay where you are till you remember it."

I did not propose to remain in a dark closet where there was no room to stand except bolt upright. I would break down the door in preference. But this would make a disturbance in the house. Bet wouldn't care, but I would. I must find some other expedient.

There is a confession I have to make here. I was quite gone on this tantalizing creature and had been deterred from proposing to her because I had two years in college yet before me and three more in the study of a profession.

"Bet," I called.

"What is it?"

"I give in; I crawl; I cave."

"Are you going to tell?"

"Yes, I am. You have forced it from me."

"Well, tell it."

"Not while in here. Let me out and I'll make a clean breast of it."

It was a long while before I could convince her that I would keep my word. When I did I went with her into the library, where we had been before, and, drawing a small sofa to an open fire, we seated ourselves side by side.

"I told you I had not heard this thing from a man or a woman. It was told me by a little bird."

"What did the little bird say?"

"The little bird said, 'You are in love with Bet.'"

There was a long pause, after which Bet asked in a low, soft voice, "And what did you say?"

"I said, 'Little bird, you're right.'"

We celebrated our tin wedding recently. I called my wife's attention to the manner of my proposal.

"Humph!" she said. "I knew the secret all the while. I was determined to make you say it."

Buttons From Clam Shells.

Canada has natural resources of which little is known. One of these, which is of but recent development, is the clam-shell fishery. In many of the inland streams, large quantities of shells may be found. From the Grand river, in South-Western Ontario, alone no less than 165 tons of the clam or washboard shell have been taken. Other species found in the Grand river are the mucket shell and sand shell.

A use has been found for these shells in the manufacture of fresh water pearl buttons. For this purpose, from two to three hundred tons are used annually, a considerable portion of which comes from the United States. These shells have a market value of from $14 to $35 per ton. The fishing for the shells is done under license from the Ontario Fisheries and Game Department, under a royalty of one dollar per ton.

The button discs are cut from all parts of the shell, some of the discs being 11-16 of an inch in thickness. They are afterwards split to the required thickness for buttons.

After the discs are cut from the shell, there is still a use found for what might be considered a factory waste. The perforated shell is ground up and sold for chicken grit, for which it is admirably adapted.

There is no doubt that, were it generally known that the shells have a market value, a much larger supply could be secured from the inland streams in other parts of the country.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WATCHING PRICES.

R. H. Coats' Work in Labor Department Has Been Invaluable.

Thanks to Mr. R. H. Coats, late editor of the Labor Gazette and now promoted to the position of Dominion statistician, we have a record of the course of wholesale prices in practically all articles of consumption, and covering the whole Dominion, for a full quarter-century. More than that, we have a carefully calculated average of these prices for the decade 1890-1900, and this average constitutes the "index number" for Canada, the gauge by which all wholesale prices in this country may now be measured. If one wishes to consider the subject only cursorily, he will find all the facts he needs in the Labor Gazette for July last, but if a more careful study is intended, the volume entitled "Wholesale Prices, Canada, 1914," should be consulted. Both are published by the Labor Department, Ottawa.

In the boom times of several years ago, the rise in prices was an annoyance. People complained of it, but were too busy to do more than complain. Now that economy is the one great word of command, the question of prices will have to be faced and dealt with. And, pending any action that may be taken by the public at large, it will be money in the pocket of any individual to consider this question of prices with a view to reaching conclusions for his own guidance.

The main chart, so to speak, of this system of price reporting is a diagram showing by a line the course of wholesale prices for the last twenty-five years. Beginning slightly above what afterwards proved to be the average for the decade, prices fell rapidly from 1890 to 1897, when they touched eight points below. Almost the whole of this decline was recovered in one steady rise before the beginning of 1900. In that year there was another slight reaction, followed by another long and steady rise which, by the year 1907, had carried prices twenty-six points above the average. A fall of five points was recorded within two years thereafter, and that was the last seen of decline. Up to the end of 1914 there was a rise to thirty-six points above the index number, and the monthly reports since then have shown that that rise continued during the first half of the present year, reaching a fraction over forty-seven points above the average in June.

These, of course, are general averages, and indicate no more about the details of local prices than the figures of average rainfall foretell whether to-morrow will be fair or showery. War conditions greatly disturb prices, and may make the average higher or lower than the normal. But a fair consideration of prices, as given in these reports will help any man to plan more intelligently his own budget for the year and therefore his general scheme of living. Many economies can be effected through knowing what the course of prices has been and how prices are affected by events and conditions.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations the throat and bronchial tubes.

FOR BEGINNERS.

Hints to Help Mrs. Newlywed Over Hard Spots.

In making soups always put the meat in cold water. Corned beef and ham should be put in boiling water. A tablespoonful of vinegar put in the pot will make tough meat or chicken tender.

To roast beef allow twenty minutes to a pound.

All vegetables should be put in boiling water.

Cut hot brown bread by putting a string around the loaf the right thickness for a slice and draw quite right.

Anything mixed with water requires a hotter oven than anything mixed with milk.

A dish of cold water put in the oven will prevent cake from burning.

In making tea allow one teaspoonful for each person and one for the pot. Allow one tablespoonful of coffee for each person and one for pot.

Always pare fruit with a silver knife.

Always sweep carpets the way the nap runs.

If new tinware is rubbed over with fresh lard and then thoroughly heated in the oven before it is used it will never rust afterward, no matter how much water is used in it.

Play Aprons For the Little Girl.

From Paris come some lovely little aprons for children. They are made of practical materials, such as jean, poplin or fine French cotton fabrics, and they have borders which show printed flowers, animals or geometric designs to delight the eye of the little wearers.

The colors are blue, pink and tan and also white. Some of the models are made with shoulder straps, while others introduce plaits across the shoulder and have a ruffle finish. Nearly all the aprons are supplied with pockets. They make ideal play garments as well as offering protection for the little frock of linen or batiste.

Her Sympathy.

Old Gentleman (who had just finished reading an account of a shipwreck with loss of passengers and all hands)—Ha! I am sorry for the poor sailors that were drowned. Old Lady—Sailors! It isn't the sailors; it's the passengers I am sorry for. The sailors are used to it.—New York Globe.

VALLEYS OF B. C.

Fertile Tracts of Country Are Suitable for Fruit and Mixed Farming

British Columbia is not considered an agricultural province, but, in addition to the acreage already devoted to agricultural purposes, it has hundreds of thousands of highly productive land, favorable in every way to intensive development, lying as latent wealth awaiting transportation facilities. That she can and will supply her own markets in the near future is shown by the rapid development of those fertile valleys of the interior which have been lately tapped by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

During last summer Mr. W. E. Scott, Deputy Minister of Agriculture in the British Columbia Government, and Mr. W. T. McDonald, live stock commissioner, made a personal investigation of the farm and live stock possibilities of central British Columbia lands, after which a most favorable report was made to the Government. A portion of Mr. Scott's report is quoted as follows:

"There have been many opinions expressed about the lands in Central British Columbia contiguous to the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Our observations led us conclusively to the opinion that this part of the Province is a country the future of which is assured as a stock raising and mixed farming country.

"After leaving Prince Rupert, on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, there is practically no land suitable for agricultural purposes until Terrace is reached, 100 miles from Prince Rupert. Here the Kitsumgallum and Lakelse Valleys extend on each side of the Skeena River. There is probably an area of 250,000 acres of land in these two valleys suitable for agriculture.

"Considerable development has been effected lately in the Kitsumgallum Valley. The clearing here, in comparison with our coast districts, is comparatively light. The soil is very productive, and is well suited for general mixed farming purposes. Dairying, poultry raising, and small fruit and vegetable growing may be prosecuted successfully. The district is particularly well suited for growing strawberries and other small fruits, the quality of the berries being very high and realising good prices on the Prince Rupert market.

"A very large amount of development work has been undertaken during the past year in the Bulkley Valley. The quality of a large proportion of the land is all that could be desired, and very good crops are raised thereon. Crops of oats promising to run 100 bushels to the acre were seen, and all prospects were most encouraging. Farmers are realising that the time has arrived when they should develop their lands, and land-clearing operations are in evidence on all sides.

"We were immensely impressed with the enormous extent of good land in the Nechacho Valley, most of which can be cleared at a very low cost indeed. A large number of settlers have gone in there, and on all sides one sees signs of activity. Settlers log houses are springing up in every direction, and considerable energy is being shown by most of them in clearing their lands and getting them into crops. Fields 100 acres in extent in grain were noticed."

Mr. Scott states that there are many tracts of good agricultural land adjacent to Prince George, but that there is also a considerable area of light land which is not well suited for agricultural purposes. Continuing his report he says:

"The wonderful country visited between Hazelton and Prince George has a great future ahead of it now that transportation has been effected. It is a big country with a big future, and, as soon as times improve and conditions right themselves, a big forward movement must take place. The country traversed grows magnificent crops of timothy, oats, and barley. Wheat may also be grown successfully if care is exercised in getting the seed sown as early as possible.

An Authoritative Ruling.

Mr. Sam Kydd, the well-beloved editor-in-chief of The Montreal Gazette, and Mr. E. F. Boddington, another widely-known Canadian newspaperman now on the staff of the Philadelphia Ledger, were "talking shop" as they walked along Craig street in Montreal.

"What would you say is the difference between a journalist and a newspaper man?" asked Mr. Boddington broaching a point which has never been decided since old Caxton's staff squabbled over it.

"Well," said Mr. Kydd, "I cannot better express my ideas on the matter than by giving a concrete illustration. You see that hole?" pointing to a circular opening in the sidewalk into which a load of coal was being shovelled. "Well, if you or I stepped into that, we would go right through. But if your really truly journalist were to step in, he wouldn't go all the way. His bulging brow and massive brain-pan would refuse to pass through."—Toronto Saturday Night.

The Will to Do.

Why is it that we, in the very kingdom of grace, surrounded by angels and preceded by saints, nevertheless can do so little and, instead of mounting with wings like eagles, grovel in the dust and do but sin and confess sin alternately? Is it that the power of God is not within us? Is it literally that we are not able to perform God's commandments? God forbid! We are able. We have that given us which makes us able. We do have a power within us to do what we are commanded to do. What is it we lack? The power? No; the will. What we lack is the simple, earnest, sincere inclination and aim to use what God has given us and what we have in us.—John Henry Newman.

COOKING VEGETABLES.

Be Sparing in the Use of Water and Adding Seasoning.

In the cooking of vegetables there are a few things to remember—first to retain all the mineral matter and nutriment possible, to soften the cellulose and to develop the flavor, making them more palatable.

Spinach cooked properly should be well washed and cooked without the addition of water or very little. This vegetable, being rich in iron, which is soluble in water, by being cooked in a large amount of water may be rendered nearly valueless as a food. This is true of green peas and beans or, in fact, any of the delicately flavored vegetables. The seasoning is another important item. The flavoring never should be disguised by seasoning. Usually butter, pepper and salt, not too much, are best because the plainest.

To accomplish these results one may use several methods—cook the vegetable whole or in large pieces, cook with the skin on when possible, cook in as small an amount of water as possible without burning, serve the water in a sauce with the vegetable whenever possible, and season after the vegetable has started cooking, so that the salt does not draw out the flavor.

Go out of your way to do a favor, and make a friend.

Scotch Not to Blame.

The harp, says an English writer, was the highlander's instrument before the bagpipe. That point was insisted upon by a Scotsman of fifty years ago, the lord advocate of the time, who was anxious to disclaim his country's responsibility for the bagpipes and to show that they were "English, essentially English." He appealed to Shakespeare, who often mentions the pipes, but not once in "Macbeth," his only Scottish drama. It is in Lincolnshire and Yorkshire that he localizes the instrument. James IV.'s accounts contain an item for "Ingile pyparis," while our Edward I. had his court pipers, and from his time on to Elizabeth's mention of such officials constantly recurs. Most Englishmen are thankful to have given the pipes safe conduct across the border.

The Cult of Fashion.

Young lady at the theater to her friend. "What do you think of this play, my dear?"

"Why, it's absurd. Three months are supposed to pass between the first and second acts, and the heroine's still got the same hat on!"

Why He Likes Wagner.

"Do you like Wagner?"

"Better than I used to," replied Mr. Cumrot. "There's a lot of his music that no one would attempt to dance to." Washington Star.

The Best Man.

Once upon a time in Sweden the best man at a wedding occupied a position that was useful as well as ornamental. In olden days the Swedish bridegroom found it desirable, in fact, to have several "best men" to defend him from the assaults of rivals and prevent them from carrying away his bride. The Scandinavian warrior of ancient times was far too lofty in his ideas to condescend to plead for a maiden's hand. So he patiently waited until some other man who was more gallant had obtained the fair one's consent. Then when all the details had been nicely arranged the proud warrior, with a body of well trained retainers, dashed down on the wedding party and, if strong enough, carried away the bride. The "best men" (and it was very essential that they should be the best men in those days) therefore became necessary fixtures to marriage ceremonies, and they were so well esteemed and their popularity became so permanent that when the reason for their existence was in course of time removed they were still retained.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Meaning of Literature.

When we treat English authors as mere entertainers whose business it is to provide elegant amusement for our idle hours we are guilty of a misconception as to the meaning of literature which is denounced specifically or implicitly by every great critic in our language and which is certain to prevent all or almost all the possible good results of our study. The answer is to get entirely away from that theory of literature and to realize that the poets and novelists and essayists are men who are trying to unify and explain life to us and to give us the zest for it which their divine vision has brought to them. We must face literature squarely, recognize in it a record of the meaning of our civilization and without confusing it for a moment with history or philosophy give full weight to its historical and social and philosophical bearings. Finally, in order to give our students any love of literature which will be more serious than an idle flirtation, we must make plain to them that their first business is not to "appreciate," but to understand.—Atlantic.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Direct Evidence Of German Aid To Rebel Cause

President of the Cuban Administration Says Rebels Must Either Surrender or Be Driven Into the Sea

Examiner Special:

HAVANA, March 7.—Direct evidence of Germany's aid to the Cuban rebel cause was found to-day in the examination of papers found after the arrest of Dr. Luis Octavio Divino, a well-known Liberal leader, and two members of the Cuban Congress. They contained the statement that "Germany has promised to aid."

President Menocal has declared the Santiago rebels "must either surrender or be driven into the sea."

Recognized Their Old Friend.

The late Sir John Steell, who was sculptor to Queen Victoria, was modeling a bust of Miss Nightingale when an officer of one of the highland regiments which had suffered so cruelly in the Crimea heard that the bust had just been completed and was in Sir John's studio. Many of the men in his company had passed through the hospital at Scutari, and he obtained permission from the sculptor to bring some of them to see it. Accordingly a squad of men one day marched into the studio and stood in line. They had no idea why they had been mustered in so strange a place. Without a word of warning the bust was uncovered, and then, as by one impulse, the men broke rank and with cries of "Miss Nightingale, Miss Nightingale!" surrounded the model and, with hats off, cheered the figure of their devoted nurse until the roof rang. So spontaneous and hearty and so inspiring was the whole scene that in after days Sir John Steell declared it to be the greatest compliment of his life.

Pighastied?

It is an interesting fact that the two studies of arithmetic and geography seem to be diametrically opposed to each other in the affections of school children. Pupils who are particularly proficient in one are apt to be backward in the other. A story is told of a little boy, who was slow in arithmetic and whose apparent stupidity in this field was a great source of grief to his father, who had been a mathematician. One day when the father and son were walking out they passed a place where a "learned pig" was on exhibition, and the father took the boy to see this porcine prodigy.

"Just look at that," said the father. "Why, there's a pig that can count and add up numbers! Don't you wish you were as smart as he?"

"Ha," answered the boy, "just let me ask him a few questions in geography!"

Any one—a fool or an idiot—can be exclusive. It comes easy. It takes a large nature to be universal, to be inclusive.—Ralph Waldo Trine.

Stevenson's Cup of Misery.

R. L. Stevenson, writing in 1888 to George Meredith, in an epistle quoted in his "Letters," says, with heart touching pathos:

"For fourteen years I have not had a day's real health. I have wakened sick and gone to bed weary, and I have done my work undaunted. I have written in bed and written out of it, written in hemorrhages, written in sickness, written torn by coughing, written when my head swam for weakness, and for so long, it seems to me, I have won my wager and recovered my glove. I am better now—have been, rightly speaking, since first I came to the Pacific—and still few are the days when I am not in some physical distress. And the battle goes on—ill or well is a trifle so that it goes. I was made for a contest, and the powers have so willed that my battlefield should be this dingy, inglorious one of the bed and the physic bottle. At least I have not failed, but I would have preferred a place of trumpetings and the open air over my head."

Tennyson's Uniform.

The late Sir Arthur Sullivan used to relate this reminiscence of Tennyson.

"The first time Tennyson came to dine at our house," said Sir Arthur, "the door was opened to him by a parlor maid who had been with us many years and was like one of the family. She was fairly staggered by the appearance of the visitor, who always wore a deep, broad brimmed black felt hat and black cape, which made him look exactly like a conspirator in an Italian play. When the guests had departed the maid said to me:

"'Was that really the great poet, Master Arthur? Well, he do wear clothes!'

"'Of course,' I replied with subtle irony, 'all poets do. Besides, you forget that he is a poet laureate.'

"She hadn't forgotten it, for she had never known it. After a slight pause she said thoughtfully:

"'What a queer uniform!'"

Duty First.

The carelessness of danger which characterizes certain soldiers does not always extend to the persons about them. The French marshal Bugeaud was once dictating very near a battlefield a letter to his secretary.

As the general spoke the words of his letter a bomb from the enemy's camp fell just in front of the door of the tent. The general went on talking, but the secretary seized his paper and half rose from his seat.

"Why are you stopping?" asked the marshal.

"The bomb!" gasped the secretary.

"Have I said anything about a bomb?"

"No—but—the bomb—the bomb!"

"Now, what," said the marshal impatiently, "has the bomb got to do with the letter I am dictating to you? Go on with your writing."

He resumed his dictation.

First Reaping Machine.

In Farm and Fireside appears an article about Cyrus H. McCormick—the man who made the first successful reaper. He built it as a boy without his father's knowing it and tried it out one fall. It was not entirely a success, but he made some changes and tried it again. Finally, in 1831, he made his first successful reaper. He kept on making improvements and in 1834 had a machine good enough to patent. He offered them for sale for $30 apiece, but no one would buy. Finally, in 1839, he invited a lot of farmers to see it work. It cut two acres an hour. That was really wonderful in those days, but still no one would buy it. The next year, 1840, a man at Egypt, Va., bought the first machine and paid $30 for it. It worked, and faith in the new invention began to spread.

Quaint Tribute.

The cultivated people have no corner on fine sentiment or its expression. The other day I sat on a log with a big, rough, illiterate backwoodsman. He told me about his wife—what a good woman she is and how much her life has meant to him. Finally it was up to me to say something, so I observed:

"She does look like a good woman."

"Yes, sir, Mr. West, a prettier hearted woman never occurred."—Woman's Home Companion.

He Loved to Beg.

A mendicant who was recently sentenced to five days in the workhouse in New York city for street begging was, it was discovered, the owner of the large and well furnished apartment house in which he lived. It was apparently the pure joy of faking that led him to choose a life of mendicancy.

To The Automobile Buying Public

I am now in a position to offer you the Ford Car either with or without the Self Starter.

Last November I received a Ford Car with an A.B.C. Electric Starter and Lighting System, which was designed by the Head Electrician of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit. This starter has been in continuous use day in and day out ever since, on a demonstrating car, which has caused it to be used an exceedingly unusual amount, and yet it has never been altered or adjusted nor has it had the battery re-charged, and it has started the car each and every time since it was put on, the starting crank having been removed.

From experience I know that this Starter is reliable and effective in every particular and I am in a position to highly recommend it to any person wishing a car with a Starter.

My salesman will be in the Show Room day and evening for the purpose of demonstrating and conferring with all persons interested.

Just as Advertised.

The proprietor of a restaurant had just issued a new advertisement intended to call attention to a reduction in rates. After quoting the prices of various articles to demonstrate the fact that everything was cheap he added at the end of the advertisement, "Bread, butter and potatoes free."

He knows better now. On the third day a solemn looking man came in and after taking his place at a table pointed to the advertisement, asking if it meant what it said. He was assured by the waiter that it was exactly true.

"Then give me some bread, butter and potatoes," said the solemn man.

"Yes, sir. What else?" asked the waiter.

"Nothing else," replied the man. "Is there anything else free?"

The waiter had to call the proprietor to explain matters, but the solemn man pointed to the advertisement, and the proprietor, who was a man of humor, let him have the bread, butter and potatoes free and even threw in a cup of coffee.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Naval Code Books.

On every ship in the American navy the commanding officer and the second in command are each furnished with a copy of the secret naval code of the government. These books are bound not as ordinary books, in cloth covers, but in heavy metal backs. The object is to prevent them from falling in the hands of the enemy, for their weight is so great that when thrown into the water they sink immediately, whereas if bound in the usual manner the spreading leaves might keep them afloat long enough to permit a vigilant enemy to pick them up.

These officers are commanded first of all things to throw these books overboard before surrendering their vessels or whenever there is danger of an enemy getting aboard. The capture of one of these books, it is considered by the naval authorities, would be more disastrous in time of war than the loss of a battleship.—Washington Star.

Made the Most of It.

A famous big game hunter visited the Swazis one winter, and the king took a liking to him and loaned him, on his first hunt, the court praiser. The praiser's business was to laud the king and the king's favorites. The white hunter on his expedition had bad luck. He only shot a rabbit. But as he passed with his retinue through the Swazi village on his return the praiser marched before him chanting in a loud voice:

"The great white huntsman has killed a rabbit! Let all the Swazi people hear. It was as big as an ox, as fierce as a lion and as swift as a buck. The brave white huntsman killed it alone and unaided. He killed it with his thunder tube. Listen, ye people. The white huntsman has killed a rabbit! It was as terrible as a tiger, as large as an elephant, and yet the huntsman from afar, the great white slayer, he alone has killed it!"

An Ice Drydock.

An army engineer once gave a demonstration on the Lake of the Woods, on the Canadian border, of the old saying that an engineer is a man whose business it is to do a task at half the cost others would incur. A dredge locked in the ice needed repairs nearly three feet below the water line. The surrounding ice at the time was nearly two feet thick. A trench eighteen inches deep was cut in the ice round the dredge. The next night the cold froze an inch or two of ice directly under this trench, and on the day following another inch of ice was dug out of the trench. Day after day an inch of ice, more or less, was chipped out of the trench, according to the intensity of cold on the preceding night. In a month the trench was nearly three feet deep, with a safe block of ice beneath it. Repairs to the hull were then easily made.—Saturday Evening Post.

Theory of a Scientist.

I have published for years that mind created electrons and formed them into matter. That mind I call creative mind, for mind alone is able to create. I do not know what mind is, so must content myself with a theory, totally opposite to a belief, of which I have none. My theory is that only one mind exists and that all other apparent minds are parts or fractions of the one original mind. I did not start up this theory. It is one of the oldest known to speculation or philosophy. I heard of it in early youth and have accepted it as a theory since. If humans could force electrons into a straight line side by side in contact, but this is impossible since they repel, then a row one inch long would contain 12,700,000,000,000. My theory is that only electrons have created all else formed.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Verne and His Works.

It was Hetzel, the French publisher, who discovered Jules Verne. Hetzel began with Verne by a life contract, guaranteeing an annual sum of $4,000, which seemed immense riches to the unknown writer. It was not at all proportionate to the rapid success and sale of his books throughout the known world. Jules Verne was content with his bargain and for many years furnished dutifully his two volumes a year. At his death he left several more finished or nearly so, which explains the continued appearance after his death of new works bearing his name. Hetzel took pains to provide the writer who was laying golden eggs for him with a yacht and all other appurtenances necessary or useful to stimulate his inventive powers.

"I want you to tell me what this paper means when it says in its market report that money is cheap," said Mrs. McPee to her husband, who, like all husbands, is supposed to be encyclopedic.

McPee laid down the sporting sheet. "It's simply putting in a briefer form the statement that money talks," he replied, "and that talk is cheap."—Judge.

Australian Market for Canadian Fish

In addition to the great market for Canadian fish which is now being opened up in Great Britain owing to the scarcity of supplies there through war conditions, a valuable export market is now being developed in Australia. A report to the Department of Trade and Commerce from Canadian Trade Commissioner Ross of Melbourne draws attention to the fact that Australia also faces a fish shortage, and that there is a record demand for Canadian fish there.

New Brunswick packers have already taken advantage of the opening and are shipping large quantities of canned sardines and herrings. Preserved fish in tins are reported to be in great demand, with high prices ruling. During the past twelve months Canada has sent more than half a million dollars' worth of fish to Australia.

In Great Britain fish prices have gone up more than 100 per cent., and recent shipments of Canadian fish to the motherland have demonstrated the immense value of the market opened up by the war to Canadian fishermen. Canada possesses the most extensive fisheries in the world, with a catch last year valued at more than $33,000,000 and more than 100,000 men employed in the industry. The ill wind of the war is blowing good to the fishermen of Canada, who are getting ready markets and higher prices.

BRITISH TROOPS APPROACHING BAGDAD

French Troops Capture Many Prisoners

AMERICAN MERCHANT SHIPS ARE TO BE ARMED WITH GUNS IMMEDIATELY

President Wilson Has Been Told that He Has Legal Power to Do This and Order is Executed Within a Few Hours Whereupon the Commanders of Different Navy Yards Will Issue the Guns They Have Available---British Forces in Mesopotamia Are Drawing Near to Bagdad.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The formal announcement by the President that he will instruct Secretary of Navy Daniels to arm American merchant ships is expected within a few hours.

The President, it became known to-day on highest authority, has been told he has power to do this.

Immediately the order is issued Secretary Daniels will instruct the commanders of the navy yards at Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco and other yards to issue the guns they have available.

In the meantime the arrangements for additional armament will be rushed to completion.

The President's decision was reached shortly after a conference at the White House to-day with the Senators. He conferred also with Secretary Lansing to prepare for him a formal opinion as to his powers.

Following his conference, the President is said to have wasted no time in reaching a decision.

The Senate Rules Committee this afternoon agreed upon a two-thirds closure rule. This rule will be reported at 3 o'clock to the Democratic and Republican caucuses.

LONDON, March 7.—British troops have approached almost within range of Bagdad. Official announcement from the Mesopotamian expeditionary force to-day declared that on Monday British cavalry engaged a Turkish rearguard at Lajj, nine miles south-east of Ctesiphon.

PARIS, March 7.—French raids and sapping activities gained many German prisoners, to-day's official statement declared, while German attempts to penetrate to the French trenches were checked with heavy losses. French forces raided German trenches and took prisoners between the Oise and the Aisne, the statement said.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 7.—Calling for a national movement to oust Senator Stone, of Missouri, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, Cleveland newspapers to-day declared such a movement is necessary as a "preparedness measure."

The Cleveland "Plain Dealer," referring to Stone as one of the "Kaiser's dozen," says: "As long as this Senator from Missouri retains the committee chairmanship, America's armour of defence against the aggressions of Germany will be materially weakened."

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 7.—With a view of training an army of a half million men, if needed, the War Department has issued orders to regimental commanders on the border to prepare lists of sixty men in each command who could be appointed to officers' places as high as captain to do training work.

Millions of Belgians in Need of Clothing

Special to The Examiner:

Mr. M. Geor, the Belgian Consul-General for Canada, has received a copy of the following message sent to this continent from the London Office of the Belgian Relief Commission:

"The present supply of clothing material and of clothing for the destitute in Belgium, and particularly Northern France, will be exhausted during the winter, and there will be millions of men, women and children in need of warm clothing and shoes. As it has proved impossible to procure adequate new material and clothing, we have finally arranged to import second-hand clothing. We appeal to our supporters on the other side of the Atlantic to send us second-hand clothing and shoes. It is important the same should consist of substantial material which can be re-made—particularly woollens. We have scores of work-rooms throughout Belgium and Northern France, where thousands of women devote themselves to the preparation and repair of clothing. The general exhaustion has reduced our former supplies from other quarters of the world to a point where we are wholly dependent upon help from North America.

The Central Belgian Relief Committee, 50 St. Peter Street, Montreal, will be glad to receive money with which to buy the necessary supplies to send out on the relief ships which will leave Montreal soon after the opening of navigation. The relief work is falling behind the needs for lack of funds and an urgent appeal is made to all Canadians for subscriptions, no matter how small. These may be sent either to the Central Committee or to any branch committee throughout Canada.

Three Dollars Per Head For Patriotic Fund

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, March 7.—The money actually paid in by the Canadian people to the Patriotic Fund passed the twenty million dollar mark during the month of February. This is an average of nearly three dollars per head for every man, woman and child in the Dominion. Sixteen millions paid out till end of February.

Sergt. Chas. Giorno of the Canadian Army Dental Corps, and assistant to Lieut. Harriman, C.A.D.C., in looking after the dental requirements of the 247th Battalion, was the victim of a very painful accident at the local armouries, this morning. He was working at a vulcanizer when an over pressure of steam, due, it is thought, to a defective safety valve, blew the top of the tank off, the steam and plaster Paris in the vulcanizer, heated to a temperature of 320 degrees, striking Sgt. Giorno in the face and inflicting very painful burns especially around the eyes. Dr. Harvey was called and dressed the burns, after which the injured soldier was taken to Nicholls Hospital. It is thought that his eyesights will not be affected.

Sergt. Giorno had a narrow escape from being killed, as two steel casks in the vulcanizer were hurled in the air with terrific violence by the explosion and had one of these struck him the result would undoubtedly have been fatal.

The injured soldier came from New York some time ago to join the Canadian Army Dental Corps, and has been in Peterborough for a month, boarding at the home of Mr. Robt. Biggs, McDonnel street.

PENNY BANKS IN LOCAL SCHOOLS

Toronto Man Will Be Invited to Address a Meeting in Peterboro'

The matter of introducing penny banks into the Public Schools of the city was brought up at last night's meeting of the Board of Education. It was moved by Mr. Gordon, seconded by Mr. Miller, that Mr. MacKenzie of Toronto be invited to come to Peterborough and give an address on the Penny Bank scheme. Arrangements will be made to hold a meeting in the Collegiate Institute, and the teachers of the city will be invited to attend. Mr. Gordon, who introduced the resolution, said that he thought the members of the Board were thoroughly familiar with the scheme.

"The readers of the Examiner are, too," put in Mr. Eastwood, Chairman of the Board.

"The readers of the Review have not had the same opportunity," countered Mr. Gordon.

The motion was adopted and Messrs. Miller, Eastwood and Gordon appointed a committee to arrange the details in connection with the meeting.

BRITISH FINANCIAL POSITION IS EXCELLENT

NEW YORK, March 7.—A Journal of Commerce London cable to-day indicates that the British Government received $615,250,000 in excess profits and taxes for a year, as against an estimate made by the Asquith Government of only $86,000,000. This stupendous increase in unexpected revenue is a great boost for the Government. In other particulars also the British financial position has developed unexpectedly excellent.

ONE LOCAL SOLDIER DEAD AND TWO MORE ARE SERIOUSLY ILL

Pte. Wilbert John Mallory Passes Away in France From Heart Disease---The Returned Soldiers' Club of Peterboro' to Assist in Recruiting---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

One Peterborough soldier is reported dead from heart failure, and two others seriously ill, according to official messages received from Ottawa this morning:

Mr. W. W. Mallory, 584 Park street, was notified this morning in a wire from Ottawa, that Pte. Wilbert John Mallory, Canadian Infantry, died from heart disease in France on Jan., 20th.

Mr. Edward Finnie, night watchman, received an official wire from Ottawa to-day to the effect that his son, Acting Bombardier George Finnie, who left Peterborough as a member of the 32nd Battery, C.F.A., is reported seriously ill from pneumonia on March 6th at the Military Hospital, Bramshott Camp, England.

Mrs. M. Sharman, 184 George street, is in receipt of a wire from Ottawa to the effect that No. 132120 Pte. Calvin Gould, Canadian Infantry, has been admitted to No. 22 General Hospital, seriously ill.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lieut.
Adjutant, 247th Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

London, March 6—The statement made by a Toronto afternoon newspaper that there were 5,000 Canadian soldiers here who should have been returned to Canada if there were sufficient hospital accommodation, received a direct denial to-day from Surgeon-General Foster. The policy, he said, was to treat as many as possible here in order to return a considerable proportion to France. Only hopeless cases from the standpoint of military fitness were returnable to Canada as the military authorities could not afford to give invalided soldiers a joy-ride. In any case the figures quoted were greatly exaggregated.

Two new recruits were added to the strength of the 247th Battalion, yesterday, in the person of Pte. A. H. J. Wells of Young's Point, and Pte. John Cornellius of Peterborough.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Major O'Flynn, of the 247th Battalion, and Capt. Dancey, of the 2nd Battalion Reinforcing Draft, held a conference last night with the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club in regard to recruiting. The members of the Returned Soldiers' Club have as individuals done good work in recruiting, and it was to secure their co-operation as a body that the officers waited upon the club last night. The meeting was a very interesting one and many problems in connection with the recruiting question were frankly discussed by the meeting. The co-operation of the Returned Soldiers' Club was promised and plans for their share in the work will be discussed later.

There will be a big recruiting meeting in the Armouries on Sunday night under the auspices of the 2nd Battalion Reinforcing Draft, and of the 247th Battalion. The addresses will be given by three officers who have seen service at the front. Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Major O'Flynn, of the 247th, and Capt. Dancey, who is in command of the reinforcing draft shortly to leave for overseas to reinforce the famous Iron Seconds at the front. The band of the 247th Battalion will be in attendance. The meeting promises to be one of the most interesting yet held.

Sergt. Wm. Stanley, of the 256th Railway Construction Battalion, is home from Toronto for a few days on furlough.

SOME PERSONS GOT THE WHISKEY THAT WAS UNDER CONFISCATION

License Inspector Stewart questions the truth of the ancient axiom that there's nothing new beneath the sun. He has been shown a stone jar or demijohn which, when filled with whisky and stored away in a dark cellar, upsets itself when no one is looking. Last week the Inspector apprehended two men who had contravened the Temperance Act. One of them had ordered and received the two gallons of whisky, drank too much of it himself and sold a milk bottleful to a friend. Both the Magistrate and the Inspector extended themselves to let the offenders down as lightly as possible. Accordingly, the two men were given their liberty under suspended sentence, and severely warned that they had better stick to water, or nothing stronger than milk.

Inspector Stewart, following the provisions of the Temperance Act, went, a day or so later, to confiscate the stone jar and its spiritous contents. But beyond a faint and far-away bouquet rising from the mouth of the jar, it was as empty as the Hubbard cupboard. Somehow or another, the Inspector was informed, that heavy earthenware jar had tripped itself on something in the cellar and spilled all the whisky on to the floor. It was a sad story, but not for nothing did the Inspector sherlock on the police force. He pointed out that if the jar had been only upset there should be liquor in it up to the level of the mouth. In other words, no more than half the contents should have been lost. Mr. Stewart became aware that this was no ordinary jar, but in spite of its reputed peculiarities, he also discovered that, following the suspended sentence, the whisky was dispensed with the abandon of a bar keep on the eve of local option. And just for that Magistrate Dumble demanded of the two men that they give bonds of $200 each to observe the law and otherwise keep the peace. Under their new offence they were liable to a fine of $200 and costs each, but the court was lenient, and, taking advantage of the criminal code, was content to have the two men bound over. Mr. Dumble took into consideration what they themselves had overlooked, that neither of them could afford $200, but he stated that if either appeared before him within the duration of the bond the $200 would be enacted at once.

CANADIANS "RAID" ON A WIDE FRONT

Enter German Lines to a Depth of Half a Mile on a Front of Over a Mile — Objective Was Reached and Much Damage Was Done to Enemy's Lines.

50 PRISONERS TAKEN

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 7.—The following communique was issued yesterday by the Canadian War Records Office:

"The main event of last week on the Canadian corps front was a raid of a German line on a more extended scale than usual. In fact the 'raid' was really a 'minor operation,' covering as it did a frontage of nearly 2,000 yards, and penetrating the enemy lines to a depth of 700 yards in one place. The whole affair was carried out with great gallantry, and the 'bag' of prisoners amounted to one officer and 44 other ranks, besides great damage to the defences, dug-outs and trenches, not to mention the heavy casualties inflicted.

"The troops engaged encountered stiff opposition before reaching their objectives. 'No Man's Land' at this particular point is a mass of shell holes, the ground being torn to pieces by months of continuous fighting. The ground rises gently from our right brigade front to the enemy's lines. Over such a terrain the troops on the right advanced despite a heavy rifle and machine gun fire. The enemy front line was reached and crossed, his dugouts were destroyed and such Germans as were left were killed.

Col. Beckett's Death.

"The heaviest fighting occurred when the support line was reached. Here Lieut.-Col. Kemball, C.B., was killed. He was in the thickest of the fighting, leading his men into the disputed trench. Lieut.-Col. Beckett led his men till their objectives were all but reached, but was killed while collecting his men, scattered by crossing the mass of shell holes and craters. Their objective was reached.

"After one and a half hours in the enemy's lines, during which time great damage was done and valuable information gained, our troops retired. During the retirement the enemy suffered heavily from our artillery fire, which closed down behind our men as they left the German trenches.

"In addition to this important operation no less than five smaller raids were carried out with signal success. At 8 a.m. on the 27th of February a party entered the enemy trenches. The net result of the expedition was three prisoners, the establishing of important identifications, at least ten Germans seen dead in their trenches and 11 occupied dug-outs bombed. Our casualties were two slightly wounded.

"On the following day at five in the morning the battalion on the left of that which was responsible for the above enterprise, carried out a raid. Two hundred yards of trench were bombed, four dugouts in which were Germans who refused to come out were blown up, and the enemy trenches were found to be badly knocked about by our shell fire. Our casualties again were only two men slightly wounded.

Imitation That Failed.

"Early in the week the enemy made one or more attempts to imitate these dashing raids which are carried out almost daily at one point or another on the Canadian front. Since the last effort they have been content to act wholly on the defensive, for apparently they are now convinced that raiding the Canadian lines does not pay.

"On the night in question a party of 14 Germans rushed one of our Lewis gun posts. The night was ex-

POISON PLOTTERS WERE TO USE DARTS AND POISONED NAILS

Curare and Other Deadly Poisons, Causing Death in Twenty Seconds Were to Have Been Employed Against Lloyd George

THE CROWN'S CASE

Examiner Special

LONDON, March 7.—Subtle poisons, an infinitesimal drop of which would cause death if introduced in a wound, were revealed as tools by which the four plotters against the life of Premier Lloyd-George and Minister Arthur Henderson sought to accomplish their end, in testimony offered at the Old Bailey trial of the four to-day.

The Crown called a toxicologist and a pathologist, and both delivered a bewildering analysis of the various poisons found in possession of the quartet on trial for the "poison plot."

The Crown will connect these deadly poison carriers with defendants through Inspector Booth, who posed as a friend of Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, and became her confident in the alleged plot.

The Crown is ready to prove by Booth that Mrs. Wheeldon's plan, approved by her fellow-conspirators, was to use "curare," a deadly South American poison, on a dart, mixed with a little of the strychnine powder. An airgun to propel the dart would be sufficient. Poisoned nails were to be driven into Lloyd-George's boots.

Mrs. Wheeldon, according to Booth, boasted that all would cause death in 20 seconds.

Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, the eldest of the conspirators, mother of Miss Hetty and of Mrs. Alfred Mason, was the first witness for the defence. She swore that Inspector Gordon of Scotland Yard approached her as a "conscientious objector" to military service, concealing his true character as a secret service agent, and sought to obtain from her poison with which to kill certain dogs guarding friends of his, other "conscientious objectors," who were imprisoned in concentration camps, that they might escape.

NEGLECTED SOURCE OF BUTTER PRODUCTION.

One of the culminating points of the high cost of living is butter; its price has utterly wrecked the reputation of a dollar, in the matter of its purchasing power. One of the solutions of the high cost of living is greater production to which thoughtful men and women of economic mind are addressing themselves — greater production in home garden plot, vacant lot, field and factory, especially the cheese factory—in the matter of butter production.

Dairymen have set their faces like flint against permitting the importation of margarine as a butter substitute, though it is said to be clean and wholesome and—in these times a high recommendation—cheap. It is claimed that its importation will have a detrimental effect on the dairying industry.

But if there is to be no substitute for butter allowed—for the dairymen and the government seem to be of one mind as to margarine—there can, however, be increased production of butter—real butter—in a way that will largely increase yield and virtually cost prices in two.

It has been shown that there is a large waste of butter fat in the use of the whey resulting from dairy operations. It is now, or has been heretofore largely regarded as a by-product, only fit to be fed to animals.

But it can be made an important source of butter production. Figures are available from an authoritative source that are simply astonishing in regard to the potentialities of whey as butter production. It is estimated that in the course of a year there is whey fat—"butter fat"—contained in whey fed to animals to the amount of nearly six million—5,867,400—pounds, which could be converted into what is called whey butter, of a money value of n million and three-quarter dollars—$1,760,220; and at a price of only 25 cents per pound. Citizens who have used whey butter—selling in summer at 20 cents per pound, say that it is more than a substitute for butter—it is real butter as good as much of the butter made from full cream, and if not quite so good the difference in price would reconcile thousands to its use.

And the patrons of factories should be reconciled to the loss of whey for feeding stock. It has been worked out that corn meal of equal feeding value to the $1,760,220 worth of whey now fed in Canada in a year, could be purchased for $237,429, so that the value of corn for feeding instead of whey it would, with equal feeding value, represent a profit to the farmers of Canada of a million and a half dollars, not to speak of the value of the increase annual amount of butter that would be produced from nearly two millions of whey fat now fed to pigs.

All last summer during the cheese making season a large number of householders in the city were using butter made from whey "butter fat" sold at a cost of 10 cents a pound less than the prevailing price for ordinary butter; and the only reason why more was not used was because of the limited supply.

This brings us to the point where co-operation of the farmers is required. If they can be shown, as is of knowledge declare is the fact, that the farmers of Canada are practically wasting a million dollars and a half in feeding stock money in the shape of whey fat, to the extent of $1,760,220, and that similar feeding value in corn can be bought for a million and a half dollars less, more attention will be paid to the production of whey butter, and a great present waste of a product of large money and food value, be prevented.

PREVENTION OF COAL SHORTAGE

The Commission of Conservation is as a business, on the alert to promote national interests. As its name implies, its watchword is saving and thrift—the prevention of waste, and the proper use of material and financial resources. The recent trouble with the coal supply, has led it to issue the following special bulletin, under the heading—"Prevention of Coal Shortage:"

This winter we have had a coal "famine" and that suffering has accompanied the shortage of this necessity is undeniable. The average citizen has a notoriously short memory, but now is the time to impress upon him that, in many cases, the suffering was due to lack of foresight. In Canada many people buy in small quantities—often only a ton. If for any cause, there is a shortage of coal, improvident householders demand that the coal dealers do the impossible, namely that they supply fuel that is unobtainable. Whereas, had they purchased their coal in the summer or autumn, there would be ample supplies available.

While some large consumers, such as manufacturers, cannot store a six months' supply, most householders can, with their present bins or with enlarged bins, store coal to meet their requirements till March or April.

In recent years, we have had two coal "famines," first in 1901-02, the year of the coal miners 'strike, and, second, this year, when the severity of the weather and the extraordinary prosperity in the United States caused an unprecedented congestion of freight. A survey of conditions in the United States demonstrates that in the future there will be more coal "famines" than in the past and that they will occur at shorter intervals. For this there is only one remedy:

BUY YOUR COAL IN THE SUMMER. IF YOU HAVE NOT SUFFICIENT STORAGE, ENLARGE YOUR COAL BIN.

The injunction and appeal contained in the above bulletin, loses none of point and value because it comes some weeks after a similar admonition and appeal by the Examiner, and endorses its arguments. The lack of popular foresight mentioned by Conservation applies to other articles besides coal. A housekeeper was heard to say last night that she had no more fruit in her cellar—she had neglected to put in an adequate supply, because she was away from home pleasure seeking. In this way we pay for our pleasures doubly—in the actual cost in money outlay and in the inconvenience that comes from failure to put in adequate supply of foods for winter use.

It needs little thought to see how apt is the suggestion of Conservation to lay in a winter supply of fuel in the winter. Even the squirrels act on that principle, and we human beings, with all our twentieth century progress, may take so simple a lesson to heart.

Conservation seems to think that the situation can be solved and its advice heeded by simply enlarging the coal bin; but it forgets that the action it urges as a matter of foresight, may easily be rendered ineffective by lack of exercise of foresight in other ways. Coal costs money, and coal merchants expect their pay. How many who may have coal bins large enough, have been thrifty enough to put by money enough to fill them? We are not a saving people; we are a free spending people. We have not been taught habits of saving or the proper use of money. If for the past thirty years or so we had had penny banks in our schools, the present generation would have acquired habits of thrift and saving, and thousands who now have, thanks to extravagant habits, only money enough to buy coal by the bushel would have had comfortable bank accounts—capital ready for conversion into full coal bins, and been able to look the hardest winter boldly in the face and snap their fingers at traffic congestion and snow-bound coal trains.

A UNIFYING UTTERANCE.

The attention of the public should be cordially directed to the address delivered by Archbishop Sinnott last Sunday evening in connection with the unveiling of an honour roll in the Church of the Immaculate Conception. One hundred and eighteen men have gone from this congregation to serve the Empire. Of these 12 have been killed, 15 others have been wounded, and one is missing. The following excerpts are representative of this address, which was wholly admirable at once in feeling and content:

"It is, therefore, as Catholics faithful to the teachings of our Church that we gather here this evening to honour those of our own kith and kin, our friends and acquaintances, who had such a high sense of duty that they counted all things as nothing in comparison with the traditions and ideals for which their country stood and with the liberty which they enjoyed under her protection. . . . May we not say with truth that in the presence of the enemy and the sacrifices which the war has entailed, there are only in this country citizens of Canada, citizens of Britain, citizens of the Empire."

This is the sort of public utterance that tends to unify the country.—Winnipeg Free Press.

FINANCIAL PHILOSOPHY OF PENNY BANKS IN THE SCHOOLS

At a time when the Finance Minister of Canada, the bank presidents, and all other authorities on such matters, are calling upon Canadians to practice thrift in order to help supply the silver bullet with which to finish the war, it is surprising to find some members of the Brantford Board of Education, and some school officials, hesitating about instituting the Penny Bank system in the schools of this city.

This system is now in vogue in most of the leading cities of Canada and the United States, is to be found in Great Britain and France, and even Japan, and is endorsed by the Ontario department of education. Furthermore, it is manifestly the correct thing if our school children are to be trained to take care of their small sums and to adopt habits which will make them thrifty in after life. For one child who may become niggardly through the adoption of habits of saving, there are a dozen, or fifty, who become spendthrifts because of over-indulgent parents and their own failure to follow the maxim, "Take care of the pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves."

It certainly is rather amusing to read the advice that the children should be taught to give to patriotic funds rather than stow away their pennies, in all conscience, how are they to give to patriotic, or any other, funds if they have not laid by store? What men and women are at the back of the patriotic financial campaigns to-day, or have money with which to invest in war loans? Manifestly, those who appreciate the right use of money and know how to take care of it. People who spend their money as fast as they get it are not the people who build up the industries of a country or help its finances.

It is entirely a misconception to suppose that the Penny Banks make the children who use them penurious. This is not shown by experience, while the danger of building up an extravagant people was never more apparent than in this Canada of ours during war time.—Brantford Expositor.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I read with interest tonight in your paper of the motion passed by the Council last night to give the city power to levy a poll tax of $10 this year: this is a matter that I consider is perfectly just in times like these when so many of us are called upon to pay so heavily to help defray the cost of everything concerned in this great struggle for liberty and justice. Why should only the householders be the ones to bear the burden, when in a lot of cases they are not the ones who are earning the big wages? Plenty of married men who have sons fighting overseas are not drawing the pay that strong able-bodied fellows are making who are working in munition factories, these being the ones who are making the dollars. My opinion is, if they won't fight, make them pay. I know of several young men at munition work who have a nice big bank account. All they seem to have to do is pay for their board. I suppose about 4 or 5 dollars per week, and if it was not for the fact that they were making shells they would not know or care, there was a war on. Yes, Mr. Editor, I say make them pay according to their earnings and this can be found out through their employers.

HOUSEHOLDER

Peterborough, March 6, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—With reference to the letter signed W. H. Merrill which appeared in your issue of March 2nd would say that this gentleman is not known to me personally, but we are pleased to see that he claims to be a disinterested party, yet we were under the impression he had been an agent in the country for the brands of seeds mentioned by him particularly, if this is so he cannot be disinterested.

I cannot therefore conceive of his reason for writing you his letter unless he has still some material interest in the sale of seeds. Assuming then that he has his stocks this season out purchased from the wholesaler previous to the decline in the price of red clover a month or six weeks ago they cannot be sold to-day, notwithstanding their merit and so on, without a reduction below cost in order to compete successfully with supplies that have been purchased since. It is obvious then that Mr. Merrill or through him his principals are anxious to induce the farming community to buy seeds at high prices through the pretence of being a benefactor to them, when, at the same time, it is a well known fact that the corresponding grades of other firms can be purchased almost anywhere in Peterborough at 20 per cent. less money.

Of course, the suggestion that Mr. H. B. Cowan and Mr. Drury should be conscripted to aid the sale of these seeds is rather good, and I trust these gentlemen will appreciate this peculiar reference to themselves, in whatever light the Farmers' Club may look upon it.

In regard to the whole matter I would say, in justice to myself and because I happen to handle other "corresponding grades," that I have this winter installed the very latest machinery on the market for the cleaning of clover and grass seeds of all kinds, and am in a position to guarantee an absolute uniformity in standard of all grades purchased from me. The bags containing the seed which I have for sale are all branded with the government grade and test number, and we hold the certificates ourselves covering the various seeds. These are always available for inspection of buyers—a circumstance which farmers in making purchases should note and govern themselves according ly.

In conclusion I would say to buyers of farm seeds:—Do not allow yourselves to be stampeded into paying ridiculously high prices for your seeds. As a general rule see the seed you buy; see that it is the grade you have come to buy; see the bags the seed you have bought comes from: and then ask for the inspect the Government Certificate. Everything is open to inspection at my warehouse where the seeds are for sale. Thanking you for the space, I am,

Yours very truly

HAMILTON HAVE A FIVE GOAL LEAD ON KITCHENER TEAM

HAMILTON, March 6.—Hamilton's intermediate O.H.A. seven will invade Kitchener next Friday night with the happy margin of 5 goals.

To-night before a crowd that taxed the Arena to capacity the locals outskated, outsticked and outgeneralled the Kitchener kids, having the edge in each of the three periods. There is yet room for doubt, however. On the larger home ice on the form they displayed to-night the visitors can be expected to make things interesting for the Hamilton septette.

Boyd started the scoring by shooting from close range, and then batting the rebound into the nets. Three minutes later Reid and Parker took the puck down the centre, and by a nice combination effort notched another counter. Kitchener was playing purely defensive hockey up to this stage, but Solomon broke away two minutes later and batted one in from the boards. Hamilton counted again just as the whistle blew, making the first period score 3 to 1. Only the good work of Johnston in the nets saved the visitors from an avalanche of tallies in this period.

In the second period the Hams tallied three times, and the visitors once, and in the third period the local septette notched two more. Just before the final whistle Solomon shot Kitchener's last goal, making the final score 8 to 3. Reid, Coir and Boyd shone for Hamilton. Krug, Solomon and Shirk were the best of the visitors. The teams:

Referee—Robert Hewitson, Toronto.

HOCKEY.

Canadian Winter Game Arouses Excitement of Seattle Scribe.

Hockey as played in Canada is still a strange foreign game in the American Pacific States.

Under huge captions, "With Sticks and Razor-bladed Skates as Weapons, Hockey Players Have Bloody Game in Seattle," a Seattle exchange refers to the first hockey match in the Sound City as follows:

"If you have been fostering the impression that American football is a rough sport, see a game of Canadian hockey and cast the idea from you. There is about as much comparison between the two as the gait of a funeral car and a jitney going up Pike street.

"Just up the street from the Arena a few blocks is the Seattle General Hospital. It certainly is going to be handy for the players.

"The game is new to Seattle, and last night's play brought the 2,500 spectators to their feet. The hardest part to understand is how they play it and live.

"Armed with sticks and razor-bladed skates, the players use their weapons in a thrillingly careless manner. Roughing in football is mild compared to roughing in hockey.

"If you accidentally take a swing at the puck and hit a man's head, why it's all right. The man's head didn't have any business there. If, in trying for the puck, a man is sent flying into the side fence, no one worries. The man should have been out of the way.

"Sticks are favorite weapons for close-in work, and short, quick jabs that no one can see. For long-distance attack the puck is provided. The puck, a hard rubber disc, is driven like a bullet across the ice.

"Personally, we would just as soon slap a cannon ball in the face as get in front of that puck when it is driven at the net.

"Two men called goaltenders are offered up in sacrifice to the game. They are stationed at the mouths of the two goal nets, and their principal object in life is to allow the puck to [illegible] them.

"[illegible] can get more shivers out of a gal[illegible] hockey than you can out of a ch[illegible]

"The c[illegible]ties of the evening were: Hol[illegible] cut in lip, two stitches; Wa[illegible] bruised instep; Wilson, cut face. [illegible]e unnamed spectator seated in th[illegible] seats along the wall, eye cut by puck. The injuries were not serious. Dr. Kelton, the club physician, attended the wounded."

A light blanket should be used on the driving and saddle horses now to keep their coats short.

BOWLING

At the Water Street Alleys last night saw the opening of the new bowling league, when the West End met the Printers. The Printers winning three straight games. The West End have a well-balanced team and with more practice will be a hard aggregation to beat. Henderson for the Printers was high score with a 526 count. Chief Thompson being high for the West End with 459, also making a difficult spare. To-night the King Pins meet the Wholesale Grocers when a good game is expected.

JAMES R. ROOSEVELT TO PAY ALIMONY

COURT GRANTS $625 A MONTH TO WIFE PENDING FINAL DISPOSITION OF HER DIVORCE ACTION.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 6.—Mrs. Sadie Roosevelt, wife of James R. Roosevelt, of New York, cousin of Theodore Roosevelt and nephew of the late John Jacob Astor received a grant of temporary alimony in the sum of $625 a month in the Circuit Court at Deland, Fla., while the divorce action is still pending final disposition.

Mr. Roosevelt pays the largest income tax of any man in the State of Florida. For years he has been living at Daytona, Fla., under the name of James R. King, and for many years his wife had been searching for him. On February 1 she discovered him in a hotel in Deland, and immediately entered a plea for alimony, filing a writ of ne-exeat and asking that the bail be set at $50,000 to prevent her husband from leaving the jurisdiction of the Florida court until the case is settled.

Mrs. Roosevelt was obliged to put up several thousand dollars to insure cost and damages, which her husband might suffer from improper arrest. Mr. Roosevelt was arrested in Jacksonville last week.

WITH THE CURLERS

DR. WIGHTMAN WON FINAL

The play-off in the scheduled games last night gave a victory to Dr. Wightman, winner of Group B, over Ray Best, winner of Group A, by a score of 15 to 13.

The scheduled games have been in progress all winter and in Group B Dr. Wightman showed a perfect score, with Alex. Kay getting the second highest aggregate.

In the other group it was a question as to whether Best or McDermid was the winner until Rollie Waddell defeated McDermid this week, giving Best the group honours.

In last night's play-off Best led through the first ends and regained the lead toward the end. Beginning the second last end he was leading by 13-10, but the Doctor slipped over a "four," putting him in front by one shot. On the last end he filled up the front of the rink so tightly that he took the end, and the game. The rinks and score were as follows:

H. Dearle	S. J. Grahm
C. G. Graham	C. S. Browne
P. D. Fitzgerald	Jaack Wiley
Ray Best	Dr. Wightman

Semi-Final Game.

Alex. Kay qualified for the semi-finals in the Consolation round of the Open Bonspiel, last night, by defeating Bob Sturgeon by 12 to 11. It was a ding-dong game all the way, and was tied up in the last end. With his last shot Sturgeon knocked out Kay's stone at the button, and the latter reversed the operation with his last stone, removing Sturgeon's counter and laying shot.

The rinks were as follows:

A. L. Killaly	C. Westbrooke
A. J. Grant	S. M. Lowes
D. Eason	C. J. Sturgeon
A. Kay	R. Sturgeon

DESERTED FROM 93RD IS TREATED LENIENTLY

A young man who had deserted from the 93rd Battalion shortly before it went overseas returned to his home on Smith street yesterday and was arrested in bed last night by the police who had learned of his arrival from the country, where it was stated he had worked all last summer and up to the present. Magistrate Dumble gave him the privilege of joining the 247th Battalion, the O.C. of which was agreeable of accepting him. The youth is back in khaki to-day.

A PIG WITH EIGHT LEGS

A pig owned by Mr. Bert Allan, Lot 18, Concession 6, gave birth to a pig with two bodies, two tails and eight legs. The monstrosity lived about an hour. Such a pig, if it had lived, would help solve the high cost of living, as one pig would produce double the number of hams that a normal pig will.

WINTER DRESSES FOR SUMMER NO DISGRACE

LONDON, March 6.—The German Imperial Clothing Committee has issued a warning that styles in women's clothes cannot be allowed to change every six months, according to an Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The committee says that women may wear winter dresses throughout the coming summer and winter without disgrace, and that drastic measures will be taken against a change in fashion and the consequent waste of materials.

THE TOURAINE, WITH CONVOY, ELUDED PRUSSIAN U-BOAT

NEW YORK, March 6. —How the Touraine, of the French line, under escort of a French torpedo boat destroyer, dodged a Prussian U-boat lying in wait for her off of the mouth of the Gironde was told by officers and passengers when the steamship reached New York.

The Touraine left Bordeaux on February 17, dropping down to the mouth of the estuary during the night. There she was ordered by the Admiralty to halt, and Commander Caussin, her captain, went on board the flagship of the patrol fleet for instructions.

He was told there, it was said, that information had been received that one or more submarines were cruising outside the harbour waiting especially for the Touraine, and he received instructions to remain where he was until further orders arrived.

For nearly forty-eight hours the Touraine lay at anchor until signalled to proceed.

Passengers were then informed of their stations in the ship boats, and, according to the informant, advised to don life belts. The Touraine then got under way, while a destroyer raced down the channel ahead of her.

The destroyer, making sharp zigzags to make sure that no floating mines had been laid, laid a course out into the Bay of Biscay, the Touraine following at slow speed, with her stern gun manned. Not until well beyond the Prussian zone did the destroyer leave her.

The Touraine after that had an uneventful trip until off the Grand Bank, when she passed floating oil barrels. Commander Caussain said that he believed them to be part of the deck load of some vessel and that they had been carried away by storms, but timorous passengers were inclined believe that they were part of the wreckage of a vessel which had foundered. One man felt sure he saw human bodies floating.

Commandant Caussain during the trip over kept well in touch with the news situation by the Herald wireless press, sent out by the Marconi high power station at South Wellfleet, Mass.

Among those on board was Paul Hornung, of Omaha, Neb., who had engaged in ambulance work in France. Mr. Hornung said that when the news of the rupture of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany reached Paris there were scenes of wild enthusiasm. All Americans on the streets were cheered. "The Star Spangled Banner" was played throughout the city, and at the Comedie Francaise that night the appearance of William G. Sharp, American Ambassador, and Mrs. Sharp, was the signal for tumultous applause. The demonstration lasted for several minutes the audience standing and crying "Vive l'Amerque!" while the national anthem was played.

The Touraine had on board 278 passengers of all classes, including French soldiers here on leave.

A good grooming every day will help to keep the coat short and also keep the horse healthy.

Dr. F. C. Neal Favours A Report From The School Principals

Suggests That Too Much Homework is Being Given to the Public School Pupils—Report on Manual Training Will Be Submitted to the Board

At last nights meeting of the Board of Education, it was intimated that the subject of manual training might form the chief topic of discussion at a subsequent meeting of the Board. The Inspector for the Provincial Board of Education was in the city a few days ago and there is reason to believe that when the result of his visit is revealed to the Board, some interesting discussion will follow, or as Mr. Gordon put it, 'the fat will be in the fire.' Both Mr. Gordon and Dr. F. C. Neal presed for a report from each of the principals of the Public schools concerning manual trainin:z and other departments of the school. Mr. Gordon pointed out that such a report was needed to supplement the report which the Provincial Inspector will submit. Mr. Hill and Mr. Crane said that a report from each of the principals would not be of much value in respect to manual training and domestic science, as these subjects are confined to the Central school.

Dr. Neal was in favour of having the principals of each school submit a report at regular intervals dealing with the work of the schools. He pointed out that a more detailed report could be secured from each of the principals whose supervision extended over three hundred pupils, than could be expected of Inspector Mowat ,whose supervision involves over two thousand pupils. Inspector Mowat was in accord with Dr. Neal's proposal. Dr. Neal would give every principal an opportunity of expressing his view concerning the work of the school and the Board would be in a better position to judge of the needs of each school. As an instance, Dr. Neal cited the case of homework. Some pupils are overloaded with homework. In many cases they have so much home work that they dream about it.

It was finally decided to have Inspector Mowat make a report on the special work of the schools, such as manual training and domestic science.

Notice to Janitors.

The janitors of the schools will be notified that they are responsible to the principals of each school between the hours of nine o'clock in the morning and four o'clock in the afternoon. They are also responsible to the chairman of the Supervision committee. Complaints have been heard regarding the disposition of the janitors to regard the school inspector and other officials of the Board as an authority for their activities.

Reverting To Lower Rank Has An Effect On Discipline Says Capt. J. H. Burnham

Explanation Given at a Meeting of the Kitchener Club Held Last Evening—Returning Officers Find Their Positions Uncomfortable--Six Hundred Women Apply For a Chance to Serve.

At the regular meeting of the Kitchener League held last night at the Oriental, Captain Burnham gave a most interesting address on his trip to the firing line.

The regular business was conducted, the President, Mrs. Knox, being in the chair. The reports showed that 476 pairs of socks had been sent during the last five weeks to the trenches from the society, and that $333.50 had been realized from the recent card party and dance held in the Oriental.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Captain Burnham for his splendid and helpful address.

To Mr. and Mrs. Coulson for the use of the Oriental given gratuitously for the dance and card party.

To the Woman Teachers' Guild for socks sent to the society.

To Mrs. McGie, 871 Reid street, for a donation of 10 pairs of socks.

To the young men, the patrons, the press, and all who in any way contributed to making the Valentine entertainment the magnificent success it proved to be.

To Mr. Gillespie and Mr. Lenton for substantial monetary contributions.

In speaking before the Kitchener League last night, Capt. Burnham, M.P., amongst other things, said that the general public did not appear to understand why it was tha so many officers and N.C.O.'s had not gone to France. The reason was that the troops in France thought that since they were doing the fighting they should get all the promotions, and as a consequence men from the ranks wh ohad done well in moments of danger, and who were thoroughly inured to the work and of proven courage, which was a most important thing in warfare, were promted to be N.C.O.'s and often from that to commissions. This did not occur with those who went to France first, but it did afterwards, and the result is that while thousands and tens of thousands of men are going constantly to France, there is a hold-up in the senio officers and even in the N.C.O.'s as well. It is therefore left to these soldiers to either go down into the ranks and start at the bottom or wait for further orders. It is true that in some cases senior officers were allowed to be lieutenants, but even that stopped in time, since the soldiers in France thought that they had a right to fill up the lieutenancies and this fact cannot be denied, although where required, lieutenants of regular training are sent over in large numbers, but the difficulty still effects senior officers and the authorities do not favour the reverting, as descending to the ranks and to lower positions is called, since it does away with that peculiar form of awe or respect, which is called discipline, that is so essential in the minds of the soldiers for their officers.

Expected to Obey.

No on expects the soldier to regard an officer as a superior being, but he is expected to obey him instantly and if he has only the regard for him such as he has for a fellow soldier it can easily be seen that the benefit and effect of discipline will very largely disappear, especially amongst troops who have only recently become regulars. The consequence of all this is that many officers are sent back to Canada. They are still retained on the force and they do not come or go by reason of their own request. They are absolutely under the orders and directions of the authorities who when they send them back to Canada hold them here until such time as they find new employment for them, which now looks likely to develop rapidly with respect to the Militia Act. These officers are often without pay and having given up their business are in a very uncomfortable position and are much to be sympathized with rather than to be abused, especially by people who themselves are not going as far as the station, let alone to France. Sometimes the officers have the pleasure of seeing in the papers that they made every effort to go, as indeed is the case always, but more frequently it is hinted that they only had a trip at the country's expense.

No Joke.

Military life is no joke, but the Canadians are not only adaptable, but adapt themselves, and a grumble or grouch is never heard. They would infinitely rather die than flunk in danger. The conditions at the front are ideal except for the killing. The proof of this is found in the fact that the men at the front keep calling for their brothers to come out from Canada. The extreme kindness of the generals and other officers struck Captain Burnham forcibly. There is no Hun haughtiness or brutality amongst our men. Criticism of the British officers in England is never heard. Capt. Burnham gave a vivid description of his personal experiences with the tanks and gas helmets. At one time he saw fifteen tanks coming down into the Somme, and weird and wonderful affairs they were. They can and have been injured only by direct shots.

The most serious question in the war zone is the gas. Sentries are posted to watch the wind, as a gas attack can be launched 8 to 10 miles away. Every officer and man is constantly ready for an attack, with his gas helmet.

600 Applications.

Capt. Burnham's proposal of a contingent of women to liberate hundreds of fit clerks has been heartily accepted by the British government, and he has already had six hundred applications from Cape Breton and Victoria from women desiring to serve their country as have over thirty thousand women already in England.

A strong appeal for socks and more socks was made by the pitiable tales brought by Capt. Burnham straight from the trenches, but he laid stress on the plea that we should show no distinction and paly no favourites. The men are fighting for us — we should fight for them, and Canada should never make it a question of charity, benevolence or even generosity, but simple fair play.

It is voluntary organizations such as the Kitchener League which show fine examples of single hearted devotion to the great cause.

Correspondence Difficult.

Captain Burnham in conclusion wished that the anxious relatives of the men at the front could realize the difficulty of correspondence in the trenches. There was, he said, so much they were not allowed to touch upon on account of the strict censorship that it is difficult to find anything to write about. The difficulties are many and varied, and it is not the postal authorities who must be blamed for every omission. It is wonderful how fond the fellows are out there of remembrances of home, and we must learn to make allowances for intermittent correspondence.

France Demands Favourable Reply From Germany

PARIS, March 6.—The French Government has summoned Germany to reply favourably without delay to the propositions for reciprocal treatment of prisoners of war made by France.

A semi-official communication given out here denies categorically the German claim that the holding of French prisoners of war in the zone of fire behind the German lines is in reprisal for similar treatment of German prisoners of war in France. The communication puts French families on guard against what it calls a "manoeuvre" of the German Government.

The French Government, it adds, communicated through the American embassy its desire to arrive at a full understanding regarding the treatment of prisoners in the zone of the armies, but no reply was forthcoming from Germany. Meanwhile the threatened reprisals were put into execution by Germany. Therefore notice is given that Germany must reply.

Germany Considers Birth Rate Problems

BERLIN, March 7.—How to solve the problem of repopulating Germany after the war probably will be one of the big issues to be discussed by the Reichstag. First among the concrete plans for increasing the population comes of course the task of decreasing the death rate, which naturally can proceed effectively only when peace time conditions prevail again.

The more complex problem lies in increasing the birthrate. Interest in the question has increased to such an extent that all manner of radical proposals have had to be weighed and studied, and will all come up for decision by the Reichstag itself. The more conservative of the proposals include economic steps that will make earlier marriage possible, cause higher wages, regulate vice, and protect in greater degree mothers and children.

The more radical proposals many of which probably will not at once be adopted, but some of which may, include bachelor taxes, a reorganization of existing vice laws which shall perhaps bring vice more and more under official control, plural voting rights for men with large families, and money premiums for mothers bearing many children.

Higher wages and shorter apprenticeships, enabling working men to achieve independence at an earlier age, as well as shorter courses of education for professional men, so that they may be able to marry before they are in the late twenties or the early thirties as at present, are means of increasing the birth rate that have been under discussion for a long time, and that are becoming increasingly popular as the importance of the entire problem becomes more and more appreciated.

New Milk Condensing Industry Will Be A Boon To Dairymen

Demand Far in Excess of Supply and Better Prices For Milk Are Bound to Follow Its Establishment—This Has Been the Experience of Western Ontario.

The establishment of the milk condensing plant in connection with the recently organized Peterborough Milk Products Company should prove a great boon to the farmers within a radius of ten or twelve miles of this city. To the industries of cheese and butter making, apart from the regular consumption of milk, will be added the new condensing plant, which it is expected will be ready for operation shortly in the factory on Aylmer street, occupied by the Peterborough Pure Milk Company, of which the new company is an enlargement.

In Western Ontario around Aylmer, Ingersoll and other towns, it has been found that the milk condensing plants which are fairly numerous in that section have proved a great benefit to the dairy industry. For miles around these towns farmers have found the milk business so profitable that they have practically specialized in this work. Hence the experience of that section of the province should also follow within the first year of the operations of the condesing department of the Peterborough Milk Products Limited.

The following Government returns indicate clearly the growth and the opportunities of the condensed milk business.

In 1900 there were only four factories in Canada with an output worth $299,520. In 1907 there were seven factories and their output had grown to $910,842; three years later, in 1910, there were 11 factories with an output that brought $1,814,871. The Government has not compiled figures since 1910, at least they have not been published, but it is known that the progress of the condensed milk industry has been rapid and decidedly profitable.

At the present time Mr. Gillespie is receiving 100 cans of milk a day, but it is expected that within a year or eighteen months the new company will be using from 75,000 to 100,000 pounds a day. It has been proven beyond question that a milk condensing plant pays more money for milk than any other industry that utilizes it. And the most encouraging feature is the fact that the demand is far above supply. The armies in the field have increased the consumption of condensed milk to a point beyond the output of the factories, but before the war the industry was well established, and the satisfaction the milk has given to the men at the front has so extensively advertised it that there is bound to be a greater home consumption after the war.

These are some of the promising aspects of the new industry of which Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., is president and general manager. The other directors are Mr. W. G. Morrow, G. Gordon Plaxton, vice-presidents, G. Walter Green and J. A. Morden, secretary.

It may be assumed from the careful manner in which he has developed his business that Mr. Gillespie's confidence in the success of the new company is well founded. He built up the Peterborough Creamery, as it was more familiarly known, and provided for the consumers of milk, a product that was previously only obtainable in large cities. A butter making and ice cream plant was installed with all the latest sanitary devices, and is now preparing to launch into the milk condensing business. The Aylmer street factory is being altered for the new machinery, which it is expected will arive in time for the spring milk.

ENOUGH SEED POTATOES HERE FOR THIS YEAR

(SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER)

TORONTO, March 7.—Professor Zavitz of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, said to-day that from his observations there were enough seed potatoes in Ontario to meet all requirements this year. He strongly urged that no commercial oats from the Western Provinces should be used for seeding in Ontario.

ADMIRALTY ORDER SEPARATES FAMILIES

OTTAWA, March 6.—The British order absolutely prohibiting steamers passing through the Atlantic war zone to carry women is causing considerable worry, and inconvenience to many Canadian families.

The attention of the Ottawa Patriotic Fund committee was drawn to a case. Sometime in 1915 the wife of a soldier overseas applied to the committee for assistance to join her husband in England. All efforts to dissuade her failed and she sailed with her two children.

The soldier-husband has been returned to Canada and his wife and children are held up in England. He appealed to the committee to get them out and became very indignant when it was explained to him that the committee were powerless against the British order.

A well-known Ottawa gentleman has been moving heaven and earth to try and get a relative back to England. With her husband, a Canadian she was living in the Old Country.

When war broke out he came to Canada to enlist, and she, with two children, followed. Now he has gone to England with his batalion, while she and the children are stalled in Canada. She is an English woman.

The British order is absolute. No women except military nurses are allowed to risk passage through the war zone, and the master of any ship carrying them is liable to severe punishment.

"Will the rule be applied when they want to return, to Mrs. Hazen, wife of the Canadian Minister of Marine, and Lady Morris, wife of the Premier of Newfoundland, who recently accompanied their husbands to the Imperial Conference?" asks a curious one.

War Weddings Have Quite Upset Social Lines

Upholders of the social proprieties (of whom there are a larger number left than most people suppose) are becoming much exercised about the extraordinary jumble that has taken place in the ranks of society through hasty war weddings, says the Manchester Guardian. Hundreds of marriages have taken place that could never have happened in any other circumstances. Young men and young women have married very much "above" and "below" their former station in life. A very handsome girl of a notable family was asked the other day who her fiance's people were. "I haven't the slightest idea," she replied, "but I am going to stay there next week and shall find out." Another peculiarity about these matches is that they are so sudden and unpremeditated that it is not to be expected that they can strike very deep roots, and when one is ended—very often by the death of the soldier, the lady not infrequently becomes engaged again within a year. It is not heroic, but it is merciful that it should be so.

Again, the war has been the end of much worldliness. Dukes' daughters are marrying social nobodies, and finding it a delightful innovation, and bewildered parents have given up all attempts to control their children's matrimonial careers. I heard recently of a newly-made mother-in-law who ventured to ask the bride where she had met her son. "At a friend's," was the brief reply. "Why?" One would like Mrs. Proudie's ghost to have been present at that moment. "But what can you expect?" said a disheartened parent, the other day, summing up a discussion on the point, "when any morning a strange flying man may fall into your garden and expect to be engaged to your daughter by evening?"

Cargo Destroyed in Mysterious Fire

Blaze Starts in Hold of Steamship Just Before She Was to Leave Baltimore for Liverpool.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 6.—Seven thousand tons of contraband cargo consigned to Liverpool were destroyed by fire in the hold of the American steamship Carolinian, at Locust Point. In four hours the ship's stern was grounded. The blaze occurred eighteen hours before the time set for the Carolinian's starting for Liverpool.

Men of the crew expressed the belief that the fire was not accidental. Secret Service men were on the pier throughout the night.

Officials of the Terminal Shipping Company, which loaded the cargo of cotton, barbed wire and tobacco, stated they were satisfied that the blaze was due to an accident, perhaps a spark from another steamship's funnel or from a locomotive.

"SWISHY" VERY LATEST BRITISH SLANG WORD

If you want to be "swishy" in your lingo use the new British slang word which is the swagger thing with army officers stationed in France and who occasionally pass a few days in Paris.

"Swishy" is the very latest contribution to the trench dictionary. It means the very best, ultra smart. A woman's dress is "swishy" if it is beautiful and exceedingly becoming. A dinner is "swishy" if it is unexcelled. "Swishy" means tiptop, A1, the finest ever, and then some.

WHAT a waste of time! What usage of space! if we were to describe all that the words "Wall Paper Department" encompass. ¶ If it were possible what a pleasant journey we might start you on—through bowers of roses, soft harmonies of colour, flowers! flowers! flowers! "in fact the entire category" widely diversified in shapes and hues. Who could escape the enthralling freshness of this array that so wonderfully portrays this season of blossom and bloom? ¶ It was surely from Spring that the designers received their inspiration. But we would not call a halt at the vistas of flowers—stripes, simple and elaborate and fantastic scrolls who's course would be difficult to follow, then those who depend alone on a rough surface for enchantment—let us stop they are all indescribable, but captivating when seen. ¶ This section, is on the 3rd floor, will furnish you with as many interesting minutes as you care to spend.

$10.00 to Dr. Haslam's Mission Fund.

$5.00 to Bishop of Algoma's Sustentation Fund.

Money to help carry on the work was raised by a sale of fancy and useful articles held in the school room on Monday, Nov. 27th.

The members met in the Public Library on Thursday evenings for Red Cross work until the rooms were closed for the summer.

Our study this year has dealt with the Why and How of Foreign Missions and Visions.

In April the Society adopted a Prisoner of War, subscribing $2.50 per month. The first six months our subscriptions were sent undesignated. At the expiration of this period, it was unanimously decided to continue contributing this amount, but having parcels sent to Private Geo. Butcher, starting with the November subscription. The secretary handled for the fund $26.05.

Our annual picnic was dispensed with this year and just a tea held in the school room and a collection taken up in aid of the Prisoner's Fund. Amount $5.85.

Previous to Canon Davidson leaving Canada for overseas, the Society entertained Canon, Mrs. Davidson and daughter, presenting the Rector with a club bag, carrying with the good wishes of the Society.

Canon and Mrs. Cornish were entertained to tea on Oct. 2nd.

Much pleasure was taken on Nov. 6th, when a box of Xmas sweets was packed for Nurse Douglas (one of our old members in France).

On Nov. 20th, a combined meeting of the Girls' Auxiliaries (St. Luke's and St. John's) was held in the school room to listen to a very interesting and instructive address given by Miss Summerhayes on the W. A. work. A collection was taken up to help defray her expenses. Amount $1.65.

Canon Cornish gave an interesting discourse to the Girls' Auxiliary on the 18th of January dealing with baptism and communion, which was much enjoyed.

We again affiliated with the Local Council of Women, having as representatives the Misses McKee, Wesley and Kincaid.

In response to Canon Davidson's appeal for flags, etc., to help brighten the wards in his hospital (being No. 8 Stationary, France) six spreads, pennants and flags were packed in two parcels and sent at different times, so as to make sure he would receive one of them.

A banquet was given the Boys' Bible Class in January.

During the year three members of the Society have left the city, the Misses Sharman, McKee and Miss M. Foote, now Mrs. Cummer.

Mrs. McIntyre very kindly threw open her home to the Society on June 12th, when a miscellaneous shower was given for Mrs. Cummer.

The thanks of the Society are due Miss Amy McKee and Mr. Conway who so kindly helped us by donations of money, and also Messrs. Conway and the Green Music Co. for services rendered in helping make sale a success.

At the annual meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Conway.
Vice-President—Miss Wood.
Secretary—Miss Wiltshire.
Treasurer—Mrs. Hutchinson.

E.C.D. Treasurer—Miss E. Rootes.

NOTORIOUS RAIDER NAMED PEUHME, SAY MEN OF YARROWDALE

Dramatic Tale Told By American Doctors

Airplane Attacks on Karlsruhe Not the Least of Dangers.

COPENHAGEN, March 6.—The four American doctors of the Yarrowdale, who have reached Copenhagen, say that the German raider is the Puehme, commandede by Lt. Berg.

Few more dramatic tales have been brought forth by the war than the story of adventure, hardship and peril at sea, shortcomings on land, and the new danger from the sky, which was related by these four professional men. Snapped up by the German raider in midocean, they cruised around for days while the commerce destroyer continued operations. Then they made the voyage in the Yarrowdale to Swinemunde, under such conditions that they expected the ship's sams to open and the vessel to sink beneath them at any moment.

Hadn't Enough Food.

They lived for more than two months in prison camps in Germany on the meagre prison fare provided by the German Government, without food parcels, which lighten the conditions of other prisoners of war. They passed through four airplane attacks on Karlsruhe, during which the bombs intended for the railroad station rained on all sides of their camp. To cap the climax, they were ignorant until the last whether they were prisoners of war or neutrals in detention, whether their Government was doing anything to obtain their release, or whether the United States had not already entered the war.

One of Mount Temple.

Dr. Snyder, until recently a member of the health department of New York city, was captured aboard the British ship Voltaire, the first ship to be captured by the raider, while he was returning to America from France. Mr. Zabriskie was the veterinarian on the same ship, Mount Temple, a Canadian horse transport, which lost three men from shell fire. Dr. Davis and Mr. McKim were on the White Star liner Georgic.

All Prizes Shelled.

They were taken on board the raider and confined in the hold during the chase of each successive prize, wondering anxiously whether the intended victim would show fight and perhaps send the raider to the bottom. Each of the three ships from which the Americans were taken was shelled, and the crew was obliged to take to the boats in high seas. There was no loss of life except in the case of the Mount Temple, on which three Canadians were killed.

The Mount Temple, in addition to Mr. Zabriskie, had on board two American horse foremen, McGreel and Glennon of Boston. Mr. Zabriskie says that there were at least two Americans among the crew of the Mount Temple who signed as Canadians to save trouble.

WANT TO LIMIT POWERS OF THE POLICE COMMISSION

KITCHENER, March 6.—The City Council expressed its dissatisfaction with the refusal of the Police Commission to reduce the police force as requested by a special committee, by authorising the committee to secure the co-operation of the City Councils of London, Stratford, Brantford, Guelph and other corporations to petition the Legislature to amend the present act, and remove the control of the police force from the commission as at present composed, and place the police under the control of a committee to be appointed by the City Council.

It is also proposed that the expenditures entailed by the police force be controlled by the City Council. The object of the Council is to organise a delegation to wait on Premier Hearst to ask for this legislation. The local police commission was severely criticized for refusing to assist in the policy of retrenchment inaugurated by the council.

FUNERAL OF MRS. W. SHEA

The funeral of the late Mrs. Wm. Shea took place from the family residence, 211 Reid street, on Friday morning March 2, and was largely attended. Services were held in St. Peter's Cathedral at 10 o'clock, by the Rev. Father Phelan, after which the remains were taken via C. P. R. to Norwood for interment. The deceased had been a resident of the city for about eight years, and her sudden and unexpected death from heart failure on the morning of Feb. 25th, was a terrible shock to her family and friends, especially to her husband, who had left her only a few hours before, and to whom she cheerfully remarked that she had slept unusually well during the night but would remain in bed, as was her custom, a little while longer. Passing his home, about 9 o'clock, Mr. Shea noticed that the house decorators, who were engaged at some inside work, had not yet been admitted. Somewhat alarmed, he tried the doors, but not receiving any reply from within, he at once forced an entrance through one of the windows and, going upstairs, found his wife in bed as he had left her, and seemingly sound sleep, but on endeavouring to arouse her found, to his amazement, that the spark of life had fled.

The late Mrs. Shea, because of her cheerful, kind, and sympathetic disposition, had endeared herself to a large circle of friends, by whom she was universally respected and esteemed, while her many acts of charity, unostentatively performed, were a source of comfort and solace to many aching hearts.

In the discharge of her religious and home duties, to both of which she was devotedly attached, the same, quiet, unassuming manner characterized all her actions.

She leaves to mourn the loss of an affectionate and faithful wife and a loving and self-sacrificing mother, her husband and two daughters, Miss Geraldine of the Public School staff, Havelock, and Miss Irene of Gravenhurst. There also survives her one sister, Mrs. D. G. Maloney of East City, and five brothers.

On their arrival in Norwood, the remains were met by a large number of old friends and acquaintances, who accompanied them to their last resting place, in the family plot, in the R. C. cemetery, Asphodel.

Rev. Father J. J. McCarthy of Norwood conducted the services. Numerous spiritual and floral offerings were received.

Not only by her immediate family and friends, but by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance, will she long be held in loving and tender memory.

CANADIANS "RAID" ON A WIDE FRONT

cremely dark, and the enemy party managed to elude our patrols. Of the two men on duty with the gun one rushed to the dugout nearby to warn the rest of the post. The Germans were too close for the gunner to train his gun on them, and they were able to overpower the gunner and grab his gun. This success was evidently the limit of their ambition, for without attempting anything further they ran off with the gun. They were pursued across 'No Man's Land' by the gun crew, who threw bombs at them with such success that the Huns dropped the gun and fled.

"Meanwhile a sergeant and corporal on duty in the trench nearby ordered a 'stand to.' The corporal went along the trench to the right and the sergeant to the left. The corporal met three Germans, and was ordered to halt. In his hand he held a pistol used for firing star shells. This he promptly discharged in the face of the leading German and also fired his rifle. He was wounded in the jaw himself. At the same time the party fled, leaving a sack of bombs in the trench.

Canadians Retaliated.

"On March 3 the brigade whose front was raided by the enemy early in the week retaliated with a raid which was distinctly more successful than the spurious attempt of the Germans. A small party crossed 'No Man's Land' at 2 a.m., entered the enemy's lines, bombed half a dozen dugouts and returned within half an hour with 10 prisoners.

"From the above brief chronicle of events it may be seen that the week has been one of continued activity. As the weather improves so the activity increases. The enemy is given no rest, the artillery fires continually, destroys his communications, while almost nightly his trenches are entered at many points on the line."

COL. WILLIAMS IS IMPROVING

LINDSAY, March 7.—In a letter received by his family, Lieut.-Col. C. G. Williams, (who sustained painful injuries on his western trip in the interests of recruiting) states that he is suffering much pain, but hopes to be fully recovered before long.

Lieut.-Col. Williams at the time of writing was on the prairie some distance from Edmonton, and states that there is plenty of snow and the weather is cold and stormy.

DEPUTATION WILL GO TO TORONTO

Members of the School Board Will Support Teachers' Pension Scheme —Board of Education Meeting

A deputation consisting of Mr. V. Eastwood, Mr. G. N. Gordon, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner and Mr. A. Moyes, Inspector of Public Schools, will go to Toronto on Friday, March the ninth in connection with legislation that is being introduced respecting a pension scheme for teachers. Teachers will be present from all over the province, and every effort will be made to convince the law-makers in Queen's Park that such legislation will fill a long felt want. The matter was brought up at last night's meeting of he Board of Education.

Request Granted.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, representing the Playgrounds Association, asked the Board to request the children to bring rags to each of the schools at a time to be selected by the Association. The rags are disposed of by the Association and the proceeds devoted to the development of the public playgrounds scheme.

Mr. G. N. Gordon in moving that the request be granted said that the object was a a praiseworthy one and deserving of any assistance the Board might be in a position to give.

Mr. Gordon's motion was seconded by Mr. J. W. Miller and adopted by the Board.

Defective Children.

Inspector Mowat presented a report on defective children and methods employed in other cities to deal with such children. There are about twenty-five mentally defective children in the Public schools of the city. Mr. J. Crane, Mr. W. H. Hill, Mr. J. W. Miller, Dr. F. C. Neal and Mr. V. Eastwood were nominated a special committee to deal with the matter. Dr. Helen McMurchy of Toronto, will be invited to Peterborough and will give an address on the subject.

Resolutions of sympathy were extended to Mr. V. Eastwood, chairman of the Board, whose mother passed away a short time ago; also to Dr. George Burnham, the "dean" of the Board, in the death of his wife.

Mr. A. A. Fowler was absent owing to illness. This is the second meeting that Mr. Fowler has been compelled to miss owing to illness.

Mr. Howson, Inspector of High Schools, is in the city. The Board will arrange to meet Mr. Howson on Thursday afternoon.

Campbell and Best submitted a report concerning a number of improvements to the heating system of the Collegiate Institute. The matter was referred to the Property committee.

"THE ROSARY"

The Tis-It Theatre will offer the seven-reel Selig Red Seal play, "The Rosary," on Wednesday and Thursday as one of the big features of the year. A more artistic and dramatic photo-play could hardly be imagined than this production by the Selig Polyscope Company. It is based upon the famous drama by Edward E. Rose, and tells the story of the many trying events which fill the life of Father Kelly. From childhood he was told that his calling was the church and his heart directed him that way, but in early manhood when a young girl came into his life he wavered for a short time from his determination. He won the battle which raged in his heart, however, and devoted himself to the church. Later in life a boy—the son of the woman he loved—came to him and Father Kelly cared for the boy as though he were his own. The boy grew to manhood and married. His wife's sister was ruined by a worthless fellow and in protecting the girl's name the wife aroused the husband's suspicion. A separation followed and Father Kelly, heartbroken over the tragedy, did all he could to bring them together. In the end he was successful and happiness came into their lives again.

INDIANS FLOCK TO BE MARRIED.

Chippewas in Large Numbers Obeying Justice's Order That They Must Be Legally Wedded.

DEER RIVER, Minn., March 5.—This village was visited to-day by a large delegation of young Chippewa Indians of both sexes from the Bowstring country, who came here to be married by Justice Ed. Cahill. The Justice a week ago declared he would give them a week in which to get married, subsequent to many arrests made by the Sheriff of Itasca county on complaint of the Indian agent at Bena that young Indian couples are living together without being legally married.

It is not the intention of the department, it is said, to interfere with the marital rights of the older natives who married years ago under tribal laws, but it is the younger members, and in most cases the well educated ones, some of whom have college educations, the department officers are watching.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell to Go to St. Andrew's Church, Toronto

At a meeting of the Presbytery of Toronto, held yesterday, the call from old St. Andrew's of Toronto to Rev. Thomas H. The stipend is $3,300 a year and a proviso is made for an annual vacation of six weeks.

The departure of Rev. Mr. Mitchell from St. Andrew's church will be regretted, not only by the congregation of that church, but by the citizens of Peterborough generally. He is one of the big men in the Presbyterian church in Canada and will be greatly missed in Peterborough.

BRITISH USING A NEW GUN.

Germans Think It Is Pneumatic — Shell Does Great Damage.

AMSTERDAM, March 6.—The German correspondents on the western front report that the British are using a new type of gun and shell. The gun appears to be pneumatic, as it makes no sound when fired, and can, therefore, be used from points very close to the front.

The shell which it carries bursts with an explosion resembling that of a mine, and the destructive area of the burst is large. It is chiefly used against deep dugouts and trench positions.

MR. HURLEY OFFERS 9 ACRES TO TRADES AND LABOUR MEN

Mr. T. Hurley, who holds extensive real estate south-west of the city, has offered eight acres of arable land north of Chamberlen street west, to the Trades and Labour Council for their use in the greater production movement that is being advocated at the present time. This is practically within the city and is only a few minutes' walk from the boundary road. It is believed that the land is very desirable and should yield good crops to those who work it.

Idea Advancing.

It is understood that Ald. Dobbin will ask the Council on Friday night for their sanction to his assumption of the publicity end of the enterprise which it is hoped the entire city will become interested in by the time the snow has gone.

NEW BRITISH ARMIES SET A RECORD FOR EFFICIENCY

LONDON, March 6.—Great Britain's new armies are now so perfectly organized and fitted out that one may be likely to lose sight of the greatness of their creation and the unexampled difficulties that had to be surmounted. There was a sorry tatterdemalion stage, due to shortage of boots, uniforms and so forth.

The tiny army that went out to Mons in August 1914, was probably the best trained body of troops in Europe for its size. Its high standard was that which those training the new armies had before them as an ideal. The first seventeen months of the war—to the end of 1917—was the difficult period. Nearly all the efficient instructors had gone abroad with the men, who added another laurel to England's military record in the great retreat from Mons.

At the outbreak of war the accommodation available for single men in barracks in the British Isles was hardly 175,000 units. Hosts of recruits poured in. At first it was proposed to build huts for 500,000; later, that was increased to huts for 1,000,000, besides large remount establishments, store sheds, aeroplane sheds, hospital huts and rifle ranges. It was difficult to get timber, labour, inspectors; to all the camps water and gas or electric light had to be laid on; old roads were repaired, new ones made and special lines of railroad laid to all the largest camps.

CIVILIAN CLOTHING USED.

In the clothing dilemma, while the dozen makers of khaki cloth were being expanded to two hundred, civilian overcoats were bought up and served out to soldiers. Recruits who could produce a good suit of their own were told to wear it. A co-operative society was found able to provide 400,000 emergency blue suits and large orders for suits and underclothing were placed in America. The early enthusiasm of many recruits was dampened by being obliged to march and drill in public attired in all sorts of garments.

When war started the country had fewer than 800,000 rifles, of which only the authorized reserve of 150,000 remained after the original force, mobilized on August 4, had been armed. And at that time the weekly output of rifles in the United Kingdom was under 2,000. Of guns there were at the outbreak of war only enough for eight divisions, with the authorized reserve for wastage. Even in May, 1915, when full complement of guns had arrived for the first new army divisions the equipment of dial sights, etc., for indirect laying was still deficient.

CONSTRUCT OWN SUPPLIES

The new armies did not sit down helplessly. They set to work improvising. Harness and saddlery would be lent by owners of stables in the neighborhood of a camp, dummy sights were manufactured by ingenious subalterns, flags for semaphore work were made by the men themselves. The officers clubbed together to buy a telephone set, or field glasses, or compasses or a rifles they could find on the market for their own and their instruction.

The great difficulty arose from lack of officers to train the new armies. On the eve of starting an order came to the expeditionary force from the War Office that every battalion should leave behind one captain and one subaltern to assist in training. That helped greatly. But the dearth may be imagined from the fact that at least one officer is required for forty men, that before the war barely 800,000 men were fully officered, and that the army was increased by that amount within little more than a month from August 4, 1914. Some two hundred of the Indian army home on leave were retained for training purposes; retired officers "dug outs" were appointed in large numbers; many civilians over the age of twenty-five received their first commissions lieutenants or captains. The wisdom of providing a method of rapidly expanding the commissioned ranks by means of the Officers' Training Corps became apparent. Within the first year of the war Oxford University O. T. C. provided more than 2,500 officers for the army; Cambridge University O.T.C. more than 2,000; three northern universities more than 1,000 and Inns of Court O. T.C. more than 2,500.

NEW ARMY OFF AFTER NINE MONTHS

Only nine months after emoolment the first new army was sent to the front, closely followed by the second and third. Even some divisions of the fourth and fifth were fit to go to the front barely a year after they had been raised. And none of them gave a bad account of themselves.

The secret of the great triumph over difficulties lies chiefly in the magnificent spirit of all ranks. In the great voluntary armies not a man held a commission or served in the ranks but that he felt it his duty to fight for a just cause and had a love for his country, which spurred him on to fight worthily for her and that cause. They all meant to be soldiers, and of the best, such as their regiments and their army had sent forth in the past. If any special rank is to be picked out it is undoubtedly true that the backbone of these new armies was the junior subalterns.

Mostly untrained or half trained, they came to learn their work with their men, and had no false shame in telling them so—without any prejudice to discipline. Not content with the exacting labours of the parade ground, they sat up late preparing their work for the next day, studying military text books, practicing problems of strategy and tactics; at mess hardly any junior subaltern talked anything but "shop." They put rosers to the majors and the colonels, which these as willingy tackled. They were, in fact, all keen and on their mettle, and as on the whole they had been well chosen for brain power and aptitude to command, they taught themselves and their men too as they went.

The same tribute is applicable in greater or lesser degree to all ranks. There was everywhere a determination to overcome difficulties somehow and to get on with the work.

Was in the Wreck on C. P. R.

Mr. Holden, Grocery Traveller, Tells of His Adventures

Mr. Holden, a well-known figure in Peterborough, as a traveller for a leading grocery company, was one of the victims of last night's wreck on the C.P.R., and is in the city to-day with a badly bruised back, registered at the Munro House. Asked for his story of the wreck he said he had little to tell. He was in the second coach attached to the pullman when he suddenly felt a jar and on recovering from his stunned condition found the train had slid twenty feet down the embankment and his fellow passengers were crawling out of the windays. His most vivid recollection after the special train with doctors aboard arrived, was of an American who sat cooly smoking a cigar and directing a fellow passenger who had to fix the splints on his leg which was badly broken. Another amusing recollection was of a well-dressed young lady who cooly picked up her belongings and said "some dump."

Twenty Passengers More or Less Injured in a Smash-up at Trenton

BELLEVILLE, March 6. — When the eastbound C.P.R. passenger train, due here at 2.50 p.m. to-day, was about two miles west of Trenton four coaches left the rails, three of them rolling over a fifteen-foot bank and the fourth remaining partly on the track. About twenty passengers were injured, for most of the coaches were well filled, the majority of the injuries being about the head and hands, due to glass. Trenton doctors at once went to the scene and bandaged up the wounds of the passengers.

It was not until 4 o'clock this afternoon that the train reached this city with most of the injured on board. Five were removed from the coaches at the station and taken to Belleville Hospital. They were Chief Mechanic Ronaldson of the C. P. R., who was on his way to Smith's Falls Mr. Kirk of Milwaukee; Mr. Jordan, A. E. Stone and P. Merrill, the latter being Americans.

Mr. Ronaldson has a bad fracture of one arm and injuries to one shoulder, while Mr. Kirk had a leg broken. The injuries of the other three were about the head and face but are not very seritous. The rest of the injured proceeded on their way.

At the time of the accident the train was some minutes late, and was running at a good speed. The coaches were badly wrecked. The cause of the accident is given as a broken rail or a run-off is given as a tender and baggage car kept the rails, as did the rear end of the train.

A number of passengers who were on the wreked train were in the city this morning and reported that the wreck was a bad one.

Town Topics.

Now an almost unanimous Congress is back of the President a consideration most devoutly to have been wished for in this crisis and a matter that should have marked bullish importance in the market. Bears have been hoping for some sensational break to cover on. But there would seem many more who were waiting for some such occurrence to buy for long account. Meanwhile holders in general seem to feel that stocks are cheap enough as they stand and think so too, and would be about buying for a splendid recovery, especially those industrials that have been under pressure. Even Mexican Pete may turn up sharply though yesterday's lowest should not be broken. There should be a fine lift in Marines now that arming of ships is announced. Big Copper orders are pending and the copper stocks look very good, especially Anaconda and Inspiration. A. R. issue should respond also. Alcohol seems to have turned and could have a violent recovery while good buying seems taking place at last in distillers. Texas Oil should be picked up on weak places. Steel is in strong hands. Too much fuss is being made of British securities held by our companies. These securities are as good as our own government bonds. And they bear more interest. Republic steel and the whole steel group seem in for a good rally. Rdg., Norfolk Union and So. Pac., Atch. and N.Y.C. may be bought for good turns. We expect a big boost in wheat and probably corn and cotton.

Methods Suggested For Utilizing Vacant Ground For Garden Purposes

An Organization Should Be Formed—Owners of Vacant Land Should Be Invited to Offer Such Property For Garden Making

BOY SCOUTS CAN HELP

From the experience gained in several Canadian cities and towns during the past few years in utilizing vacant lots for garden purposes, the following methods are suggested for those who have not yet undertaken this work.

1. An organization should be formed, on the executive committee of which are, at least, two men or women, who are enthusiastic and will be willing to devote some time to looking after the preparation of the land and the laying out of the plots.

2. Owners of vacant land should be invited to offer such property for garden making.

3. Assuming that a fairly large number of lots have been offered by their owners, it should be widely advertised that one of these is available to any citizen who will be willing to work it, experience having shown that all classes in the community are interested in this work.

4. It has been learned by experience that it is important for the organization to, at least, plough and harrow the land for the plot holders the first year. Few persons who have not done any gardening before can be induced to prepare land for seed sowing on their own initiative.

FOUR METHODS.

5. There are four methods by which funds may be raised to prepare the land.

(a) By an appeal to wealthy citizens for contributions.

(b) By a grant from the city or town council, if necessary, on the understanding that the money will be returned by the plot holders when they have harvested their first crop.

(c) The city or town council might appoint a committee to carry out such work, the city to aid in every possible way. In order that a movement of this kind may have at least the greater sympathy of the civic officials, it would seem desirable for the organization to have a room in the city or town hall for its meeting.

(d) By charging each plot holder a small amount, for preparing the plot for him.

The last method is the one which is likely to be the most satisfactory for most cities and towns and is the one recommended here.

For information in regard to rules or by-laws the reader is referred to the accounts of the work of the several organizations in Canada referred to in a bulletin being printed by the Dominion Government, as in it there will, no doubt, be found sufficient suggestions to enable by-laws to be drawn up for particular needs.

BOY SCOUTS CAN HELP.

Boy Scouts can be made very useful in encouraging garden making and the use of vacant lots. In Ottawa they were employed in 1915 by the Public Health Committee of the Local Council of Women in delivering vegetable seeds which had been donated for the purpose of encouraging the poorer people to make gardens. Seed can be obtained in bulk at a cheaper rate than in packages and can be put up in packages by the Scouts. The Scouts also delivered pamphlets on Vegetable Gardening. This personal touch did much, it is believed, to decide those to make gardens who had been in doubt before, as many people would accept pamphlets if brought to them, who would not take the trouble to get them themselves.

THE BRITISH FORCES ARE NEARING CTESIPHON

Terrified Turks Abandon Guns—Great Rout Continues and British Were Within 28 Miles of Historic City of Bagdad on Monday.

LONDON, March 8.—British cavalry had advanced within nine miles of Ctesiphon and about 28 miles from Bagdad on the Tigris front, on Monday afternoon, it was announced yesterday, the official statement being as follows:

"On Monday afternoon British cavalry were engaged with the Turkish rear guard of Lajj, nine miles southeast of Ctesiphon, Mesopotamia.

"Owing to the fact that the war material abandoned by the enemy is strewn over eighty miles of the country, it is not yet possible to give an accurate and full list of our captures. The collection of booty and the salvage of guns, etc., which were thrown into the river, is being proceeded with, and up to the present 38 guns, including those on captured river craft, have been collected, exclusive of machine guns and trench mortars."

Since the fall of Kut on Feb. 26 the British have advanced about 90 miles. They have pushed forward through country of supreme historic interest towards the great Mohammedan city of Bagdad, terminal of the great Berlin-Bagdad Railway, which Germany designed as a rival to the Suez Canal. The fall of Bagdad, a sacred Mohammedan city, would have tremendous moral effect. The region is one of interest also to Christianity. Fifty miles or so to the southwest lies Babylon. A couple of hundred miles further north, near Mosul, are the ruins of "that great city" Nineveh. The route from the Persian Gulf north, which has been followed by the British, is through the reputed site of the Garden of Eden.

Ctesiphon itself is the scene of ruins celebrated the world over as representing the finest specimen of Sassanian architecture; huge buildings of brick, for there is no stone in the country. It was once reached by the British before, late in 1915. On that occasion Bagdad seemed within grasp, but the arrival of strong Turkish reinforcements sent the expedition hurrying back to Kut, where it was besieged and finally forced to surrender.

On account of the nature of the ground between Kut-el-Amara and Ctesiphon, which is but poorly adapted to defensive purposes, it has been predicted by military writers that the Turks would make no serious attempt to halt their retreat until Ctesiphon was reached, and that a decisive engagement probably would occur at that point.

Submarine Menace Is Under Control

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 8.—Several U-boat crews surrender to the British. The submarine menace is now well in hand. The Admiralty stated that twenty-six merchant vessels were sunk by mines or submarines during the past week. There were 5,059 arrivals and sailings at British ports. Twelve vessels fought off submarines which attacked them.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poisonous waste matter in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Austria Under Prussian Rule Unable To Resist

But Anti-German Feeling Undoubtedly Exists, Although Hitherto It Had No Influence, and Even the Reichsrath May Not Have Courage to Assert Itself.

CORRESPONDENCE IMPOSSIBLE

LONDON, March 8.—The conditions now existing in the Dual Monarchy, the influence in Austria-Hungary of the German military party and how the neutral press is hoodwinked by false correspondence, is the subject of an enlightening letter from a Berne correspondent to the Birmingham Post. Nothing appearing in the Austrian press gives any real clue to conditions in Austria-Hungary. Of this, he says, he is assured by a neutral journalist just arrived in Switzerland from Vienna. "In Vienna, for instance, there are some correspondents of American and other neutral newspapers, but were one of them to attempt to write what he wishes to write and knows is true and of interest he would merely be wasting his time.

"'You may take it from me,' said my informant, 'that everything which appears either in the Swiss or the American press from correspondents in Austria is to all intents and purposes written by the Austrian Press Bureau. As for the Austrian and Hungarian newspapers, from which so many newspapers in belligerent countries compile articles, they are so carefully censored that no real information on any matter of deep interest can be gained from them. It is merely necessary to look at the more independent Hungarian newspapers and see the columns and even entire pages absolutely blank to know the fate awaiting any one who wishes either to express his feelings or publish any salutary criticism of the government or authorities.'

"He also called my attention to certain letters and articles from Hungarian correspondents published in English newspapers.

"'They are nothing but fiction,' he said, which reminds me of what a Hungarian once said to a friend of mine in London, that he went to England because in his own country he could not find fools enough to live upon. Some English newspapers have too great a tendency to do exactly what the Austrian, and to a less extent the German, press does, and that is, publish what their readers like to be told rather than what is true. Very often, moreover, the Austrian and Hungarian press bureaus purposely insert articles or paragraphs in newspapers from which they know that articles about Hungary are composed for the press of their enemies, in which they are merely imitating an example set them by Germany.

CORRESPONDENCE IMPOSSIBLE.

"Not only is it impossible at present to send any manuscript out of Austria-Hungary except such as meets with the approval of the authorities, but even a bona fide neutral correspondent cannot leave the monarchy save with the greatest difficulty. Even I, who have lived in Switzerland since the war and long before it and have had certain means of keeping in touch with events in both the Central Empires since the war, now find it almost impossible to procure any trustworthy news from a correspondent, even verbally, and this because if any one enters Germany or Austria-Hungary he is seldom let out again. Consequently I often wait weeks without learning any news of value.

"Since the death of the old Emperor a remarkable number of changes have taken place in Austria-Hungary. The new Emperor is very nervous and at present seems to be feeling his way. The Empress Zita is generally considered his better and stronger half, and, to use a homely phrase, it is she who wears the breeches or is expected to don them one day.

"The Austrian Foreign Minister and Prime Minister have gone, and the Hungarian Prime Minister, Count Tisza, is feeling somewhat uneasy, and, it is said, is regarded not altogether favourably by the Hungarians as being too pro-German. Herr Sieghart, chairman of the Austrian Land Bank and a pillar of German influence in Austria, has also gone, and at the shortest notice; Baran Macchia, head of the political department at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Count Forgach, who has resigned and whose resignation was accepted without a word, have all left.

Now, Count Forgach was strongly anti-Serbian, and he it was who drafted in 1914 the ultimatum to Serbia. And it may be that Count Tisza will also have to go and be succeeded by Count Andrassy, who, himself pro-German, has a son-in-law, Count Karolyi, who is considered positively Anglophile.

"That an anti-German feeling does exist in Austria and Hungary, a resentment at seeing everywhere some dictatorial Bavarian or Prussian, is undeniable, but I am assured that the anti-Germans have absolutely no influence—or, at any rate, they have hitherto had none. Austria, he says, is now virtually governed by Germany. Whatever government office is entered, whether the War Office or any other, there is some Prussian ready to trample upon every one with his boots, ruling every one and everything.

"Most extraordinary of all, he said, is to see recruits being examined for the Austrian army. Sometimes as many as three Austrian physicians will declare a man unfit. Then comes along one German physician and says he is fit, and go he must, against the advice of three medical men of his own country. This was particularly noticeable early in November last, when the 1866-1871 classes, both years inclusive, were called up. Men approaching fifty, of inferior physique and wearing spectacles, perhaps because of very short sight—men whom the Austrian physicians absolutely rejected—nevertheless had to go because a Prussian or Bavarian physician would have it so.

"So deeply impressed was my informant with the helplessness of the Austro-Hungarian people that he doubts whether even the Austrian Reichsrath, which ought to have been now in session but is not, will have the courage really to tackle affairs, for the life of any individual is of slight value if he opposes Germanization and Germanizing influence. In Austrian homes at which my informant was accustomed to call his hosts frankly admitted in so many words, there being no Germans present, that it was not the Austrian who desired this war, but the German military party which drove them into it.

"'We could have settled with Serbia,' they say, 'without dragging in all Europe, but the Germans would not have it so. The street demonstrations in Vienna in favour of the war and the articles inciting to war which appeared in the Austrian press during July, 1914, were inspired by Berlin.'

OUR SERIAL STORY

THE RED PAPER

By C. HOTCHKISS

He reasoned that without a doubt Wentworth had reached San Antonio, communicated with Miss Meridale, and made a rendezvous in the Alamo. And as undoubtedly as they had met and talked, so undoubtedly was the big Yankee still within the walls of the ancient convent. "Ah-ha! That was the cause of the confusion and the disdain! Caramba!"

He smoked rapidly the cigarette he had rolled, his white even teeth set together as he considered what he should do. And it came to his dramatic soul that there were two things which could be done, and done together: rid his patron and himself of this leech, who would not be shaken off, and free himself of a menace to his more than half formed dream of happiness and wealth. Openly he had never approached the girl on the subject of love, but his Latin nature was patient, albeit it was hot. He had no doubt of his ultimate success. Was not her uncle in his favor?

As the solution of the girl's agitated appearance came to him with the force of certainty he dashed his cigarette to the ground with a Spanish oath, then bent and talked earnestly and rapidly to the officer. Finally he passed something into the man's hand. The officer nodded, smiled and grunted, and Planet, his own face bearing a mirthless grin, turned into the depths of the convent. When he had reached the foot of the stairs he took a knife from his pocket and unclasped its long blade. There was the sinuosity of a prowling cat to his lithe figure as he crept noiselessly up the steps. His conscience did not trouble him over his contemplated act although some thoughts of policy entered his excited brain. But had not his patron told him while he was on board the steamer that he might do as he wished with Wentworth on the land? Would not Bagshot thank him for removing a persistent menace?

Slowly and silently he reached the floor above, sneaked past the packing boxes and through the arch bisecting the room and saw his intended victim. There was no mistaking him for Wentworth stood with his hands on the ragged sill, his gaze turned outward, his back towards the stairs and there was none but himself and this would be assassin on that floor. He was easily recognisable to Planet.

It was fortunate for the unsuspecting man that from the head of the stairs to the window where he stood there was a considerable distance of clear space. He had seen the girl go along the plaza until she was lost among the trees, and was wondering why the Mexican had not followed her, when he heard from behind him the creaking of the ancient board floor. Then he turned around more in curiosity than alarm but in time to see one of the objects of his thoughts sneaking toward him with a bared knife in his hand.

As the eyes of the two flashed a mutual recognition Planet let out a Spanish oath and his crouched figure straightened as he increased his speed—stealth now being useless and deception equally out of the question. His purpose was plain and he must now fight it out.

Midway on the floor he was met by his opponent. Wentworth was entirely unarmed but he hardly needed more weapons than nature had given him. His spirit was buoyed by a great happiness and the sight of his sneaking enemy filled him with an unholy joy. He had not been an athlete for nothing and he read the man and his purpose as though Planet's brain had been an open book. The two clinched on the instant but before the knife had descended Wentworth took hold of the wrist holding it and twisting the weapon from Planet's grasp, flung it to the floor. So far the defense had been easy and the hot-brained Mexican was no match, mentally or physically for his cooler antagonist. As he felt himself disarmed and saw the hopelessness of escape, in a state of desperation he did what he had done once before: grappled Wentworth about the body in an endeavour to throw him, at the same time setting up a wild shout of terror that echoed through the hollow structure and aroused those at the door.

But the American was silent as he tore at the clinging arms in a vain endeavour to loose at once their snake like grasp, then desisting, again got a grip on the lean throat when the Mexican to save himself let go his hold. Wentworth threw him to the floor with a crash. He could not kill him in cold blood. The law was enough for him, and here was one of his birds already captured.

He stepped to where the knife had fallen and picked it up in order to insure his own safety, and at that moment the watchman and the man in uniform came bounding up the stairs. The former, ignoring the prostrate Mexican, jumped for Wentworth, and took the knife from him, the young man making no effort to resist. Planet struggled to his feet, his face livid from passion and defeat but in a flash his wily brain caught the advantage of his position. Pointing to his enemy he screamed:

"Arrest heem! He would kill me! He had me by the thr-roat! He had a daggair!"

"He's a liar!" said Wentworth, turning to the officer who held him by the shoulder. "He sneaked up behind me and I took the knife away from him."

"N—no! eet is a lie!" shouted Planet. "Ask heem if he not hate me! Ask heem if he not follow me from New Yor-rk. I hear he was in these pla-ce—I come up to make peace with heem. But he mur-r-rder me — he try! Take heem to the jail! I make char-r-ge against heem!"

Wentworth caught the situation and grew hot as he began to explain, but the officer cut him short.

"I don't care to know nothin' about the rights of this muss, sir! I didn't see it. All I know is that I see you standin' over that man with a knife in your fist, and him yellin' for help. You had better come along with me. You can explain when you get to the station. And you'll do well to come gently, else you will come the other way, sir. You may talk to the judge later."

"I am perfectly willing to go with you," returned Wentworth. "You'll have no trouble with me, but I insist on the arrest of that man who attempted to murder me. I have that charge to make against him."

"Make what charge you like," was the brilliant rejoinder, "but I didn't see him doin' anything. He wasn't armed like you was. And he'll show up all right; take my word for it. Anyhow he has gone now; I'll get him later."

For with the suggestion of his possible detention Planet had slipped past the figurehead of a soldier, that ornamental guardian of the portal not having spoken a word or lifted a hand and disappeared down stairs; and in a moment later Wentworth caught by the arm of the Law if not of Justice, was marched off.

The mere fact of his arrest did not greatly trouble him. It certainly was an inconvenience but it would hardly be more as he would soon see the sheriff and send for Harper. The thing that vexed him most was the neat way in which Planet had turned the tables on him and the dogberrian brilliancy of the officer who had taken the Mexican's word for everything. Not until later did it strike him that there might be a friendship or at least an understanding between the two. However it would make but little difference in the end as both Bagshot and Planet would be arrested that night. After that there would be an open vista of bliss which would well repay him for all the trouble that he had gone through.

There was no public attention, and consequently no degradation on the way to the police station. The prisoner was ushered into a barren apartment blue with cigarette smoke, and there a man behind a railed desk asked his name, address and business, smoking carelessly the while, and with equal carelessness took down the charge of assault with intent to kill, as given by his captor.

At this plain miscarriage of justice, Wentworth began to grow warm, but knowing the futility of protesting asked if he might bail himself with the money that he had. The lieutenant grinned. No, he could not. Then Wentworth demanded to see the sheriff, unfortunately not mentioning that party's name and was bruskly informed that the sheriff was out of town and would not have seen him anyhow. His final request that he might send word to a friend was granted and on a scrap of paper he wrote a note to Harper asking him to come at once to the jail, and passed the paper and a bill into the hands of the watchman.

After that he was led away to a dingy room somewhere in the rear. It was hot and close and the windows were barred. As the iron door closed on him and he realized the situation the affront put upon him grew to its true proportions. For a few minutes he was controlled by an impotent anger that did not help matters in the least; but finally he quieted down and using what philosophy he could command awaited Harper's arrival. He was of course unaware that his messenger had thrust the bill into his pocket and returned to his post at the Alamo. There he coolly unfolded the note and read:

"Am jailed on a false charge. Come to me at once. Planet is at the bottom of it. Jack.

IF KIDNEY'S ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Arkansaw

He Was a Gentleman of the Southwest.

By F. A. MITCHEL

When boys' summer camps were first established in the United States, at one of them, located in northern New England, were two boys who were chums. They were the very antipodes of each other. Both were of the older boys at the camp, being between seventeen and eighteen. Frank Vinton hailed from Connecticut. He was intellectual and spiritual. Those who knew him best predicted for him a marked career in some intellectual pursuit, probably the church. Edward Davis was from Arkansas and a typical southerner. He was long of limb, large boned and muscular. He was two years behind his chum in fitting for college.

Each was in his way a leader of other boys. Frank Vinton was usually intrusted with the management of the entertainments got up at the camp and was recorder. His camp journal was beautifully written. Davis, who was universally called Arkansaw, led the hikes, the canoeing, the swimming—in fact, all the sports. Naturally the boys, who placed strength and daring above intellect, admired him more than Vinton. But Arkansaw ranked himself far below his chum. What we possess we do not value; what we lack we covet. Arkansaw saw no merit in his diving from a platform elevated forty feet above the surface of the water or being able to throw any boy in the camp. He would have given his strength and daring for the ability to learn Latin grammar, which was beyond his intellectual endowment. For this reason, perhaps, he was pleased at his intimacy with the intellectual Vinton.

When the season was ended and the campers went home the chums regretted that they could not enter college in the same class. Vinton had passed his entrance examination, but Davis had still a long period of study before him. When Vinton became a junior Davis became a freshman. Of course he entered the same college as Vinton. Notwithstanding that they were two years apart in the college curriculum they were still chums. Naturally their associates wondered what was the tie that bound the brawny southwesterner and the polished New Englander. The truth is, persons don't usually make friends with their counterparts. They generally seek what they are not themselves.

Vinton graduated with high honors, and while his chum was struggling through the last two years in college he was studying for the ministry. The Arkansan was wanted on the varsity crew, on the varsity football and baseball teams, but he could not be induced to train with any of them. He had as profound a contempt for muscular as he had reverence for intellectual strength.

Davis pulled through college, being graduated among the "dregs," as he called them, of his class. Vinton studied theology at his alma mater, so that their intimacy was not interrupted. When Davis finished his academical course Vinton was admitted to orders, having taken a three years' course in two. They said goodby to each other, Davis with more regret than his friend, who by this time was beginning to feel the difference between them, for the clergyman belonged to an aristocratic family and was engaged to a society belle. She had met Davis and wondered what her lover could see in him to admire. Perhaps this is the main reason why Vinton parted with his chum without the regret that was to have been expected.

Davis inherited an estate that rendered him independent of work, but it would have been impossible for him to be idle. An office in the gift of the people of his state becoming vacant and it being desirable that a man not stained with political iniquity should be elected, Davis was waited on by a committee from both parties who asked him to run for the office, promising him a sure election. He was too dumfounded for awhile to reply, then said that a better man than he was needed for the duties involved. But the committee would not accept his refusal and left him assuring him that he would be elected whether he ran or not.

This was the beginning of a political career that was thrust upon Davis, but it lasted only a short time, for he became disgusted with politics, and when his friends proposed to nominate him for an important state office he flatly refused.

One summer five or six years after he had parted with Vinton he resolved to go north for a visit, taking in his old chum by the way. The truth is he had learned to love the north in summer while at the boys' camp and longed to get back into the northeastern territory where he could enjoy the cool woods and waters.

One Saturday evening a lanky man with a strong southern accent registered at a hotel in the city where Frank Vinton was rector of the most fashionable church. Edward Davis was the name entered, and his residence was Arkansas. Sunday morning he went to the church in which his old chum preached. He noticed that the congregation was made up of the elite and all were dressed in the height of fashion. An assistant read the service, and the rector preached the sermon.

Arkansaw, gazing for the first time in several years on his old chum, saw that he had grown sleek and parted his hair in the middle. His sermon was on the value of a correct interpretation of the Scriptures, and his interpretation of certain passages pertaining to riches were very comforting to his congregation. Arkansaw was slightly disappointed in his friend's development, but his heart was still with the man who had been his chum till the spell—on his chum's part—had been broken by marriage. At the end of the service he waited at the church door for the rector and his family to come out. Vinton on seeing him grasped his hand cordially, but Mrs. Vinton could not conceal a look of annoyance. Arkansaw was dressed in southwestern costume. His hat did not shine as did the rector's, for the latter was of silk, while Arkansaw's was of felt, with a very wide brim.

"Come to my study tomorrow," said Vinton. "This is, of course, a busy day with me. Monday is for us of the cloth our day off. I shall expect you by 9 o'clock."

Then Vinton was hurried away by his wife lest he should be seen talking to the rawboned Arkansan.

Davis rather expected his old chum to take him home with him to dinner. Vinton did not dare to do so since he knew the guest would be frozen out by his wife. So the man from the southwest was thrown upon his own resources for the rest of the day. After dinner he sat smoking in the hotel office. A gentleman sitting near opened conversation with him.

Before parting with this person Davis learned a disagreeable truth. There was a skeleton in the rectory of Vinton's church. Mrs. Vinton was accepting the attentions of a man of fashion. The congregation would have already brought the matter before the vestry except for their attachment to their rector, who was the only person that appeared to be ignorant of the situation.

The next morning Davis and Vinton met in the rector's study. Vinton, now that he was alone with his old chum, relapsed into the chum of former days. But there was no invitation to the rectory. Mrs. Vinton had put her veto on Arkansaw.

"How long will you stay here, Ark?" asked the rector.

"I'm not decided about my going. I may be here a day or two, and I may go suddenly, so I'll say goodby in case I don't see you again."

Vinton pressed his friend's hand. Davis saw that there was something on his mind, but could not fathom it.

The same afternoon the tall southerner appeared at the office of one T. Robinson Rhodes and sent in his card. The office boy who delivered it returned with the inquiry as to the nature of the caller's business.

"Private," was the reply.

The boy went back and presently returned with the words "Come in" and led the visitor to the office door. Davis saw a man dressed in the height of fashion sitting at a rosewood desk. Looking about to see that they were alone, the southerner closed the door and turned the key. Mr. Rhodes looked at him in surprise.

"What do you want with me, sir?" he said.

"Sign that," replied Davis, laying a paper on the desk before Mr. Rhodes. It read:

From this day I agree to forego any association with a lady to whom I have been paying marked attention, never again to call upon her at her house or to join her elsewhere.

Mr. Rhodes' eyes were fixed upon this paper long enough to have read it a dozen times. He was thinking what to do. He was no coward and resolved to try to dominate the man who seemed disposed to interfere in his affairs. He turned upon Davis fiercely.

"Is this a case of blackmail?"

"You know that it is not."

"I don't know who is the lady to whom you refer, but if you intend to drag any lady into a quarrel you are contemptible."

"There is no necessity for dragging the lady's name into a quarrel. I have not mentioned her in his paper."

"Suppose I refuse to sign it?"

"You shall sign it."

"How do you propose to compel me?"

"There is but one way I can compel you without injuring others. If you refuse I shall seek you out in some public place and insult you. I am not known in this city, and no one will suppose that my real motive is to prevent your bringing ruin upon my friend, his wife and his children."

There was something so quietly determined in the southerner's manner that his adversary saw there was no escape for him. What his course would have been had he not had all to lose and nothing to gain no one knows, but he saw that this man was saving him from himself and yielded.

"I must communicate my reasons to —to the lady for my action," he said after pondering.

"That is admissible."

Davis left with the pledge duly signed and, going to his hotel, departed on the next train.

The Christmas festivities had passed when Mrs. Vinton said to her husband:

"You have been overworked during the holidays this year, dear, and are tired out. Suppose we run down south for the cold season."

"In what direction?"

"We might make a call upon your old friend Mr. Davis."

Vinton looked searchingly at his wife.

"As you like," he said.

When Arkansaw next saw his old chum he was greeted with fervor by his chum's wife. She gave no explanation for the change, but the Dixie man knew that he had saved her from a grievous misfortune. From that day she also was his chum.

ROME, March 6.—"On the Trentino front there was increased artillery activity from the Travignolo valley to the Upper Cordevole, the War Office announced yesterday. Happy Fighter Writes Home

ONE of the brightest and most readable of Canadian writers about the war is "The Happy Subaltern." The identity of this young lieutenant is not widely known for he does not pretend to be a literary man. When he went to the front he wrote letters home to his mother, as thousands of young Canadians in England, France, and Flanders were doing, and his mother found them so entertaining that she read them to gatherings of friends. They advised publication, and the book is now on many a library shelf. All that it tells about the Happy Subaltern is that his name is Billy, and as Billy he has made friends.

Perhaps the best way in which to give an idea of Billy's letters is to give two short extracts from them. One is a characteristically humorous account of an incident in an English barber shop.

"I had rather a unique experience the other day which I want to tell you about. Everyone who has hailed from this insular kingdom was won't to complain in my ear in Canada of the slowness of the barbers over there, and always related how much faster the tonsorial artists of Great Britain pushed in your whiskers. I have proved for myself the why and the wherefore of it. Having to go up to London one day this week I slept in and missed my usual shave, so upon my arrival there proceeded to secure one. Seeing a sign 'Ladies and Gentlemen's Hair Dressing Saloon,' I proceeded therein. A baldheaded person of doubtful antecedents, judging from his physiognomy, motioned me into a chair. Not a white enamel becushioned one with a neck rest and numerous levers, but a plain red plush one showing unmistakably that other thousands had sat on the same seat. It was the same kind that any railroad in Canada issues to its hard worked station agents. I sat me down, not without some misgiving, and grasping 'me noble countenance' he tilted my head rearward until I felt as though I were one of the contortionist acts in a vaudeville show. He smeared my face with lather and proceeded to scrape the protruding hairs off. It was a process greatly resembling a man with a snow shovel removing the accumulation of last week's snow from the sidewalk. Every time he let go of my head I endeavored to raise it, but somehow he always beat me to it, and grabbed it again before I could sufficiently stretch the muscles to erase the crick in them. . . . Upon close examination that I made after a hurried exit I found tiny tufts of whiskers and decided that the reason why they "do it" quicker over here is first, because they don't 'do it,' and second, if they took any longer they would permanently dislocate their customers' necks."

By way of contrast probably there is nothing better in Billy's letters to quote than his description of the death of McCarthy, the wag of the company, and once a camp cook.

"It was a beautiful morning in May. The grass was green and the shrapnel-scarred trees were trying to burst out into a few sparse leaves. A hawthorn bush just to the rear of the trench was white with bloom, as Maeterlinck says, 'Yielding up its soul in perfume,' distinctly noticeable even among the varied smells of the trench. Here and there a swallow flitted in the first smile of Old Sol, and all was still, as still as the first hour of dawn on the Front can be—sometimes. I came to the bay where McCarthy was on duty. Alone he stood watching a mess tin of water heating over a candle. He looked up at the rum jar I was carrying and laughingly asked if he couldn't have his ration, knowing full well that I knew he'd had it, when with a dull boom from the east came the herald of the morning hate. I turned. There stood McCarthy, rifle in hand, face turned to the azure above, and in his loudest tones addressing the screaming shell with 'Good morning, Fritz.' The same instant I heard it burst almost overhead. Its pall of black smoke hovered there, while its rain of death descended with the peculiar indescribable whine of shrapnel. . . . But as they say, 'It didn't have my number on it.' One of the freaks of shell fire, it left me and took McCarthy.

"I saw him slowly sink clutching his tunic. . . . I cut off his tunic and his shirt, only to find his breast and shoulders peppered as a colander. He was gone—I knew that—but I forced a quarter grain of morphia between his lips. The stretcher-bearers came, but McCarthy needed no shell dressings. The ashy gray of his face, the wild stare of his eyes, the convulsive clutch of his hand betokened that death was silently creeping nigh. I gave him a cup of water. As I lowered his head a smile lit his countenance, and he weakly said, 'Do you remember, sir, the night you said "Gunga Din?" That's how the water tastes.' . . . And then with the same smile, 'It's funny, sir, how I spoke to that shell. It ain't often that one calls his own number.' Which was how McCarthy, cook-comedian, in his own way said 'Morituras Te Salutat.'"

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drugstore. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

CARUSO'S SON CALLED TO ITALIAN ARMY

Youth Writes to His Father That Officer Asked Him If He Was Related to Great Singer.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Just before going on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon to sing the role of Radames in "Aida," Enrico Caruso received a letter from his son, Rudolfo Caruso, who has just been called to serve in the Italian army.

"They brought me up for examination," he wrote, "stripped me and tapped my chest to see if I was strong.

"'What is your name,' an officer asked.

"'Caruso,' I answered.

"'Any relation to the great singer?'

"'His son,' I replied.

"That can't be with your voice,' the officer said.

"But they found me muscular and fit and they put me in the best regiment, the one that will have to do the hardest fighting. So you may never see me again when you return to Italy."

The famous tenor hardly had finished reading it when the opera started and with warlike thoughts in his mind he sang the part of the Egyptian prince who fought for Pharaoh and saved Egypt.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Hogs at $15 per cwt. was a feature of this week's prices. The market has been steadily advancing until today Matthews-Blackwell quote an even 15c a pound. At that figure the farmer has apparently the strong end of the market.

Potatoes remain firm locally but eggs are declining, and butter is fairly steady.

MONTREAL CHEESE.

There has been no important change in the condition of the local cheese situation, business on spot being quiet and principally of a jobbing nature to fill local requirements. The bulk of the stock in store here is held for English account and will go forward as soon as ocean freight space is available, and in addition to this there is considerable American cheese held in different positions for the same reason.

The receipts of cheese for the week ended March 3rd, 1917, were 2,912 boxes, which shows an increase of 554 boxes, as compared with the previous week, and an increase of 2,435 boxes with the same week last year, while the total receipts since May 1st, 1916, to date show an increase of 240,847 boxes, as compared with the corresponding period a year ago. Of this week's total there were 2,212 boxes received from the United States, as against 278 boxes for the same week last year.

EGGS ON DECLINE.

Montreal, March 6.

The feature of the local egg situation last week was the decline in price of 7c to 8c per dozen, which was attributed to the weakness in the Chicago market owing to the more liberal supplies of fresh gathered stock coming forward. Canadian markets generally were short of eggs as the supplies of cold storage eggs are about exhausted, consequently there was a good demand from the local dealers for American eggs at the lower prices ruling, and considerable business was done as the receipts of Canadian eggs at present are not sufficient to fill the requirements of the trade. The domestic demand for small lots was good throughout the week and a fairly active trade was done in Canadian freshgathered stock at 50c and in American at 48c per dozen, with sales of round lots of 25 cases or over at 1c to 2c per dozen less. The condition of the market at present is very sensitive and almost entirely governed by the Chicago prices plus the duty and the express charges therefore Canadian shippers generaly would do well to market their eggs promptly as any day may see a further falling off in the price. The consumption of eggs is not as large as usual at this season of the year owing to the high prices prevailing but if the market should drop within the next month to about 35c per dozen retail there would be no doubt be a considerable increase in consumption in it especialy when other food is so high.

SHIPPING EGGS.

An item of interest in the egg trade during the past week was the rolling stock from Vancouver to New York, over the Canadian Pacific, of ten cars of Chinese eggs. These eggs were shipped in heated cars and arrived in New York free from frost, and found a ready sale around 40c a dozen. The shipments of eggs in car lots by express is also a new development this year as far as our Canadian markets are concerned, one car of 600 cases of Petalumas being on the way here.

THE MONTREAL FLOUR MARKET

In sympathy with the strength displayed in the Canadian wheat situation for the most part of last week a firm feeling prevailed in the local flour market. The demand from the local dealers and consumers for spring wheat grades has been ste and a fair amount of business resulted in this respect in first patents at $9.60; second at $9.10 and strong clears at $8.90 per bbl. in bags, and 30c per bbl. more in wood, in mixed car lots, delivered to the trade. There was also a good inquiry from buyers east of Montreal but as there has been no improvement in the condition of transportation in that direction millers still find it difficult to get supplies forward to them. The millers generally are busy filling large government orders but they are having some difficulty in keeping their mills running to their full capacity owing to the fact that the wheat supplies are not coming forward fast enough from the west on account of the continued congested state of railway traffic.

COMPARISON OF PRICES.

The following table of prices is on a Toronto basis:

SHE GAINED 25 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Marlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. had nerve headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a complete invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaint and gained 25 pounds in weight."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS' AND SMALL WOMAN'S LONG WAISTED DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

It really looks as if Paris is of one mind in regard to the open neck on the season's dresses—no doubt because furs are so very fashionable and offer protection against winter's chilling winds. The V shape is by far the most popular.

In the long waisted dress illustrated under No. 8,080 there is a very artistic combination of style features. The design is particularly suitable for a young girlish figure. In bestowing the second look upon the collar that drapes itself at back almost to the waist line one notices the pretty effect achieved by the use of the separate front panel—it is tacked to the waist fronts and joined to the skirt, that has nine backward turning plaits to boast about. The girdle, with ends fastened at either side of the panel and smart cuffs hold attention because of being developed in satin in color that contrasts effectively against the collar in light tone. The panel may be of material to match the girdle if you would prefer it. The long loose lines of this frock are especially good. The model suggests the moyenage silhouette.

Serge, gwbardine, velvet, broadcloth, wool poplin and wool mixtures are popular weaves suitable for this design. You can dress well at the smallest cost if you will use the pattern of such dress as directed.

The dress pattern, No. 8,080, cuts in sizes fourteen to twenty years. To make in size 16 requires 4¾ yards of 44 inch material; ½ yard 36 inch satin; ⅝ yard 30 inch contrasting goods for the collar.

To obtain the pattern send ... to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Wheat Prices Lower Yesterday

Wheat markets reacted yesterday from the recent sharp advances, and general declines were the order. Buyers for export were reported to be re-selling their recent purchases, and other bear arguments were used to pull down the market. Chicago dropped 3 1-4c on the May option, and Winnipeg 1 7-8s. Cash prices are 3c to 4c lower. Ontario flour, 10c lower.

Cattle Market.

Union Stock Yards — Receipts yesterday, 60 cars, with 500 cattle, 100 calves, 1,500 hogs, and 200 sheep and lambs.

The market was very slow and draggy, with receipts dribbling in through the day but not a heavy run. Medium and common cattle were no doubt easier, the decline cariously placed at 25c to 35c. Good finished cattle are holding steady, but evidently prices have been unduly hoisted in the country. The feature of the market is the persistent climbing of hog prices to higher levels, to-day's new high reaching up to $16, fed and watered, a price never before heard of in this or any other market.

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FAREWELL TO 235TH MEN.

Goes Into Quarters at Ottawa— Officers Thank Belleville Citizens.

BELLEVILLE, March 6.—The 235th Battalion, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Scobell, left this city yesterday by a special C.N.R. train for headquarters at Ottawa, where it will enter into quarters. The battalion was given a rousing send-off by the citizens. The unit has been in this city since October last, and had made many friends here. The Cobourg company of the battalion was on the same train.

The previous evening, in the Opera House, the 235th was bidden farewell by Mayor Ketcheson and citizens. Addresses were delivered by Mr. D. V. Sinclair, Chairman; Lieut.-Col. Scobell, Capt. Stewart, Capt. McLean, and Archdeacon Beamish. The officers praised the citizens of Belleville for their many acts of kindness and their patriotic work, and made a final appeal for recruits.

NO LACK OF EVIDENCE RIGHT HERE IN PETERBORO'

To Prove the Remarkable Upbuilding Influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food—Two Good Reports To-day

Peterborough, Ont., March 8.—Day after day we are printing in this paper reports from Peterborough people who have been cured by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

There are in the meantime hundreds of other cases of which we never hear. But you will find that your friends and neighbors know about this great restorative treatment, and have something good to say about it.

If you are skeptical, ask them what you may expect from its use. Then put it to the test. Use the Nerve Food regularly and you will soon find that weakness and disease are giving place to strength and vigor.

Mr. George Lee, 767 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food some time ago when I was in a run down condition, and found them to be just what I required to build up my system. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food also worked wonders for my wife. She had been suffering from nervousness and could not get a good night's rest. She would awake up at different times during the night, sometimes jumping right out of the bed. She tried doctor's medicine without success and finally commenced taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The first box helped a little, the second box benefited her more, so she kept on taking them until she grew strong and healthy. She has recommended this treatment to many of her neighbors."

Mrs. Wm. Herron, 11 Conger street Peterborough, Ont., writes:—"I suffered from nervousness, run down condition, and was unable to get a good night's sleep. The least noise would waken me and then I would lie awake for a long time. Trivial matters used to worry me, and I did not seem to be getting any better. Through a friend, I was persuaded to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I commenced using this treatment, and am now feeling much better. I can get a good night's rest, my appetite has improved; the Nerve Food strengthened my nervous system and now trivial matters do not worry me as they used to. This medicine has done me so much good that I cannot speak too highly of it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50 at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

GRAHAM A PROGRESSIVE

Two Imperialistic Journalists of Power and Similarities

Baron Hugh Graham, may be called the Canadian Harmsworth. He has, indeed, not a little in common with Lord Northcliffe, though he is an older man by nearly a score of years. Both have known the struggles of a newspaper's early days. Both were quick to realise that there is no financial end to journalism at all unless you own the journal. Both have treated the newspaper business as a business, and have not objected to being connected with newspapers propounding conflicting policies. Both men adopted a "power behind the throne" kind of attitude.

Both are also Imperialists—and Imperialists of the practical Kipling school as well as with the Disraelian Imperialist imagination. Both are men of stupendous ambition. Both are men content to remain physically in the background and thereby enhance the weight of the influence they wield. Neither of them cares much to speak in public. Both have made of their newspapers great vehicles for charitable enterprises—and without any detriment to the circulation departments. The day after Lord Northcliffe made Mr. Lloyd-George Premier, he was giving him a "taste of his quality" by bludgeoning him for including Mr. Balfour and Lord Robert Cecil in the Government. Similarly Sir Hugh Graham, after doing his utmost in the Montreal Star to put Sir Robert Borden in office, came out strongly against his Cabinet selections.

It may be that Baron Graham, like his brother Peer of newspaperdom in England, has made something of a fetish of imperialism. But it has been a fetish that has paid—which not all fetishes do. But though the Canadian newspaper baron and the English newspaper baron have much in common in method, and possibly in character, they are very unlike in manner. Lord Northcliffe's manner is massive. Graham, on the contrary, lacks that resolute mien altogether. In fact, they would not chime with his personality. "The supreme pussyfooter," one has heard him called, although that is unkind.

TAUGHT BOYS TO STEAL

Old Woman Who Created Gang of Young Thieves

An extraordinary story of an organised gang of boy thieves, who made daily raids on grocers' shops and sold the proceeds of their thefts to a tradeswoman, was told at Marylebone. Before the court was Mary O'Neill, an invalid woman of 60, who kept a general store at Princes St., Edgeware Road, and was charged with aiding and abetting several boys to steal. She was a portly woman, suffering from chronic rheumatism, and it was stated that the only time she had left her shop during 17 years was when she was arrested on the present charge and brought to court.

A number of boys were concerned in the case, but only one—a lad of 18, named John Hodges, gave evidence. He said he made the acquaintance of the woman about a month previously when he went to her shop to buy candy. In the course of conversation she suggested that he should steal things from shops, and nearly every day since then, up to the time when he was arrested for stealing a piece of ham, he had sold to her articles which he and several other boys had stolen from shops in the Edgeware Road. These articles included tins of salmon, milk, cocoa, treacle, and sardines, pots of jam and marmalade, and packets of candles. She paid him 6d. a pot for the jam, 4d. a tin for the salmon and sardines, 3d. a tin for the milk, 2d. for the cocoa, and 8d. a packet for the candles, and all the money he received he shared with the other boys.

Mr. Paul Taylor remarked that prisoner had actually been creating young criminals wholesale, and in spite of her infirmity and her age he sentenced her to six weeks in the second division, in the hope that the effect would be to warn others, and put an end to the existence of this gang of young thieves.

Schools That Differ

On this continent the idea of absolute uniformity in schools over a large area and amid many diverse interests has had its day. The school in a grazing district must have different work from the school among orchardists or market gardeners or fishermen. They cannot be as "like as two peas," much less can they afford to become just city schools on a small scale. The needs of their communities are different.

The rural school that is merely a preparatory school for the high school of the town and the university of the city may become a factor in rural depopulation.

Experiments with cooling buildings by forcing air through hollow walls with electric fans are being tried in India.

A novel way to trim a large hat is to set medium sized velvet buttons all around the upper edge of the brim.

To MAKE MONEY

go to its extreme limit is the aim of every good housekeeper. That is why she buys Zam-Buk when in need of a household balm—because she knows that it will give better results, last longer, and keep better than any ordinary ointment. A small quantity of Zam-Buk will give better results than many times that quantity of an ordinary ointment. It is, therefore, not only best, but most economical. Besides, as Zam-Buk contains no animal fat it cannot turn rancid, and remains perfectly good to the last application.

Zam-Buk's superiority is due to the fact that it is all medicine, whereas ordinary ointments contain a large proportion of animal fat and a small percentage of medicine. Zam-Buk is not only soothing and healing, but it is germicidal. This makes it invaluable as a "first-aid." An application of Zam-Buk to a wound as soon as sustained will prevent all danger of blood-poisoning.

Zam-Buk is splendid for eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, ulcers, abscesses, old wounds, blood-poisoning, pimples, boils and piles, as well as cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, and all skin injuries. 50c. box, 2 for $1.25. All druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c. stamp for free trial box.

WOMAN'S MUTILATED BODY IS FOUND AMONG PIGS

Ghastly Discovery On Farm Near Kingston—Inquest Is Begun.

KINGSTON, March 7.—A ghastly discovery was made in a barn on the farm of Mrs. Mattie Hill, an aged widow at Seeley's Bay, a small village 20 miles north of here, when the mutilated remains of Mrs. Hill were found in a barn on the property among a number of horses and pigs. The discovery was made by Mrs. Arthur Free, whose husband rents the farm from Mrs. Hill and who at once gave the alarm.

The last seen of Mrs. Hill by the neighbours was on Friday at noon. The Free couple reside in a portion of the Hill home.

An inquest was opened and the jury sat until a late hour. Mr. Free was not present to give evidence, having been absent from home since noon Monday.

Evidently Murder.

Coroner Young, who made the autopsy, said death was caused by a blow on the forehead with a blunt instrument. Judging from the mutilated condition in which the remains were found, the authorities believe the woman was the victim of foul play.

The Best Nerve Tonic

"If people would only attend to their blood, instead of worrying themselves ill," said an eminent nerve specialist, "we doctors would not see our consulting rooms crowded with nervous wrecks. More people suffer from worry than anything else."

The sort of thing which the specialist spoke of is the nervous rundown condition caused by overwork and the many anxieties of to-day. Sufferers find themselves tired, morose, low-spirited and unable to keep their minds on anything. Any sudden noise hurts like a blow. They are full of groundless fears, and do not sleep well at night. Headaches, neuritis and other nerve pains are part of the misery, and it all comes from starved nerves.

Doctoring the nerves with poisonous sedatives is a terrible mistake. The only real nerve tonic is a good supply of rich, red blood. Therefore to cure nervousness and rundown health Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be taken. These pills actually make new, rich blood, which strengthens the nerves improves the appetite, gives new strength and spirits, and makes hitherto despondent people bright and cheerful. If you are at all "out of sorts" you should begin curing yourself to-day by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RINGING WORDS.

Those were ringing words in which that young American whose mother and sister were murdered at sea told Presidents Wilson that if this government was ready to fight he would fight with it but if it was so lost to shame as to submit to such infamies he would seek a man's chance under another flag.

Never before since our nation was born has it failed to protect its citizens. Never before has a President of the United States waited to be urged to defend American lives. Never before in the seven score years of our national existence has the son of a murdered mother been driven to shame a president of the United States, if possible, into standing up man-fashion for American rights.—Rochester Post-Express.

MORE GERMAN PLOTS IN MEXICO

DARDANELLES COMMISSION MAKES ITS REPORT

THE BRITISH CAVALRY IS NOW WITHIN TWELVE MILES OF BAGDAD

Official Announcement to This Effect is Made To-day---More Drastic Restrictions on Imports Predicted by Sir Edward Carson Who States That "The People's Food is Really Threatened" ---French Take Prisoners at Several Points.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 8.—British cavalry is now within twelve miles of Bagdad, it was officially announced to-day.

LONDON, March 8.—More drastic restrictions on imports was predicted by Sir Edward Carson, First Lord of the Admiralty, to-day, in a speech at the Aldwych Club, in stating "the people's food is really threatened."

The Cabinet Minister took a sharp fling at "amateur strategists."

"Disregard those who are impatient and ready to gamble," he said, referring to suggestions as to the use of England's navy. "We cannot afford to gamble with the fleet, if we failed it would mean the end of the British Empire."

PARIS, March 8. — (French Official Communique)—French forces took German prisoners in actions at three different places on the western front, the official statement to-day declared.

"Between the Oise and the Aisne very lively artillery actions continued," it stated. "During the night northeast of Embermenil in Lorraine, the Franch raided the German trenches and brought back prisoners."

LONDON, March 8.—Several London newspapers this morning commenting on the situation which Premier Lloyd George now faces in the Irish question, declared his statement of the Government policy as one calculated to arouse opposition, and attacked John Redmond, Irish leader, for his attitude.

The Morning Post suggests the Nationalists are henceforth in "definite hostility to the Government. Though presumably they will do nothing to interfere with the prosecution of the war, they will otherwise put as much sand in the parliamentary and ministerial machinery as possible."

The Daily Telegraph predicted the Redmond adherents will "go into active opposition to the Government and seek to make it untenable, with a view of bringing about a general election."

LONDON, March 8.—The British War Council which decided upon the Dardanelles campaign "failed adequately to investigate the availability of troops with which the joint naval and miltary attack could be undertaken," according to the report of the Dardanelles Commission issued to-day.

Mr. Winston Churchill's advocacy of a "purely naval attack was based on a certain amount of half-hearted, hesitating expert opinion," the report continued, "the practicability of which was apparently not directly supported or directly opposed by such responsible navy and military observers as Lord Fisher or Sir. James Murray."

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 8.—President Wilson is confined to his bed to-day with an aggravating cold. Upon orders of his physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson, he made no engagements for the day.

MIAMI, Florida, March 8.—In justifying Congress for turning down the "armed neutrality" proposals of President Wilson, Wm. Jennings Bryan, peace advocate and former Secretary of State, said to-day: "The public has such complete confidence in the President, that Congress would not hesitate to confer upon him any power he could himself use. But the President cannot ride on ships or handle guns. The gunners would be under the immediate direction of the ship owner, who may have a large pecuniary interest in landing contraband cargo, and easily make an incident to plunge the country into war.

"A law should be enacted withholding clearance from any belligerent ships carrying American passengers to Europe.

"Why should our Government permit the United States to be drawn into war by the folly of any American citizen, who so disregards his country's welfare as to travel upon a belligerent ship?"

TORONTO, March 8.—In the Legislature this afternoon Premier Hearst's resolution affirming the Government's determination to continue its part in carrying the war to a successful conclusion will be spoken to. The Premier and Leader Rowell will deliver patriotic speeches to some length.

OTTAWA, March 8.—An increase of over fifty million dollars this financial year in the revenue of the Dominion is indicated in the financial statement for February, issued to-day by the Department of Finance.

For February alone the revenue exceeded seventeen millions, an increase of two and three-quarter millions over February, 1916. The March revenue is expected to put the increase for the year above the fifty million mark. Canada's war expenditure up to the present time has been over 217 millions, and it will shortly exceed one million dollars per day. Canada's total debt now exceeds 765 millions.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—That German activities in South America have been so far-reaching as to involve officers and men of the Peruvian navy in plots to raid Allied commerce in the Pacific, was learned officially here to-day.

PETROGRAD, March 8.—The Russians in Persia have made further important progress in their pursuit of the Turks from Hamadan, and on Monday occupied the Town of Kangaver.

Kangaver is on the high road to Kermanshah and Bagdad.

Kitchener Is Blamed For Dardanelles Failure

Examiner Special:

LONDON, March 8.—Upon the late Lord Kitchener, Britain's idol, and the early war council, was fixed the blame to-day for England's Dardanelles expedition. A special investigating committee, appointed in response to parliamentary inquiries and complaints as to the costly experiment against Turkey, made this report to-day.

"Although the main object of the expedition was not attained," the report concluded, "certain important political advantages were secured by the expedition. Whether these were worth the loss of life and treasure involved must always remain a matter of opinion."

Discussing the responsibility for the step, the report adjudged Lord Kitchener responsible for three weeks delay in dispatching troops to the Dardanelles, thereby, gravely compromising the probability of success.

The commission held also that Kitchener did "not sufficiently utilize the services of the general staff, resulting in confusion and lack of efficiency."

Y. M. C. A. LOOKING FOR VACANT LAND TO BE CULTIVATED

Production Campaign of Local Association Promises to be Great Success--It is Expected Prizes Will be Given

ADDRESS BY MR. ELLIS

Mr. F. E. Ellis, of the Farm and Diary, spoke to the boy's groups Wednesday evening on Canada's Agricultural problems. Mr. Ellis stated that farm labour is now very scarce and that unless city residents can help to produce the staple vegetables this year some lines of produce will not be available this coming fall. Many of the farm labourers before the war were Englishmen, who enlisted at the first call for men. Munition work had also attracted many other men from the farm to the cities, so most farms were now undermanned, this being especially true of the larger farms. The speaker gave one instance that had come to his attention. A farm of 200 acres formerly worked by the owner and three hired men was now dependent upon the efforts of the owner alone, the result being that fifteen horses stand idle and the production of the farm will be lessened more than one half. Mr. Ellis most heartily commended the efforts being made in Peterborough and elsewhere to cultivate city lots and urged the boys to enter heartily into the Y.M.C.A. production contest which is being set up as the main programme of the Association for the Summer.

Several vacant lots have been listed with the Association up to date and the leaders are now looking for a piece of land of from five to ten acres which can be plotted out in connection with the effort. A field near the river or canal is most desired so any owner of such a piece, who would give the free use of the same, or allow it to be used for the taxes or a moderate rental, is invited to communicate with the Y.M.C.A. this week.

About five prizes of five dollars each, one of ten and one of fifteen dollars are needed to obtain the best results in the garden plot contest, so the friends who will set up these prizes are requested to communicate with the Y.M.C.A. officers in the near future.

Mr. F. S. Shepard, of the National Council was a visitor in the city Tuesday, enroute to Campbellford where the overseas work of the Y.M.C.A. will be presented in the churches next Sunday. F. D. Kerr, Esq., will address two of these meetings in our neighboring village.

The meeting in the local Y.M.C.A. Sunday afternoon will be devoted to music. Several new hymns will be tried out and special patriotic selections will be rendered on a phonograph.

Joseph Wearing, Esq., will address the Senior Collegiate Club Friday on the Law as a profession. Every member of this club should be present.

LONDON NEWSPAPERS CUT DOWN CIRCULATION

LONDON, March 8.—London newspapers, suffering from a shortage of paper, insist now that unless the public can be content with fewer papers it presently will get none at all. The circulation departments are fighting harder to lessen their circulation than they ever fought to increase them.

There has been some talk of reviving the old custom once in vogue among readers of the Times. Years ago when the Times was higher priced the paper was "circulated" by carriers and one copy was read in as many as a half-dozen homes each day. This lessened the cost to the individual reader.

CONFIDENCE.

That is why his business is increasing every month, because he gives satisfaction. See Him and See Better. 416 George street.

Over 187,000 Widows On The Pension List

LONDON, March 7.—Minister of Pensions Barnes gave some astonishing figures in the House of Commons to-day when he came to review the operations of the Pensions Department. He explained that the Ministry had charge of the following:

Disabled men	140,275
Children of disabled men	157,544
Widows	62,796
Children of widows	128,294
Dependent on deceased men	29,832
Total on books	518,741

Besides these there were 125,000 widows who are now drawing separtion allowances, but will soon go on the pension list; 65,000 men in hospitals, and 65,000 men medically unfit. Those figures brought the total number of men, women and children to 773,741. Medically unfit, of whom over 100,000 were not to be granted pensions, were to be put back where the State found them. In exceptional cases there would be a gratuity of £100. The scheme in its entirety would involve a capital charge of £3%,000,000, and for the first two years £25,000,000.

Manufacturers And Merchants To Confer On Recruiting Matters

Meeting To Be Arranged by Speakers' Patriotic League ---247th Battalion Has Passed the 200 Mark and Shows a Strength of 202 This Morning---Militia to Be Reorganized---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

A conference between the manufacturers and merchants of the city and the Speakers' Patriotic League to go into the question of recruiting, is being arranged and will likely be held on Monday night next, when it is expected that Major Campbell, C.R.O. will be in attendance. Lt.-Col. Ackerman has some interesting information to lay before the conference. The get together meeting should help recruiting considerably.

The public is reminded of the big recruiting rally in the armouries on Sunday night, when Lt.-Col. Ackerman, Major E. D. O'Flynn and Capt. Dancey, of the 2nd Battalion reinforcing draft, will deliver addresses.

The 247th Battalion added six men to its strength this morning and have passed the 200 mark, the parade strength to-day being 202. Besides the recruits whose names were given yesterday, the following have been added to the strength:

George Henry Townsend, Norwood.
Neil Francis Porter, 538 Chamberlen street.
George Joseph Russell, Peterborough.
Jim Russell, Peterborough.

A letter received from Capt. J. E. R. Munro, formerly adjutant of the 93rd Battalion, states that he has been attending the Canadian Military School, recently moved to Beckshill. Capts. Bygott, Eastwood and Marling, of the 93rd Battalion, are also in attendance there, as is Sergt. W. Leader, who is qualifying for a commission.

The Kingston Standard says:

Major Campbell, C.R.O., M.D. No. 3, who returned this morning from Ottawa, has called a meeting of all O. C's and representatives in charge of recruiting office at 5 p.m. to-day to make plans for a definite canvass of eligibles in the city as shown by the National Service returns. New lists received to-day of those in Class 1A and Class 11 give upward of 1,000 names in the city and 7,000 in the district. Major Campbell believes that many of these men will sign up when they know their names are on the cards. The duty of every eligible man is to serve his country and he hopes these men will sign up without being canvassed. An effort will be made to report the answer "Yes" or "No" of those canvassed.

Major Campbell is giving all his time for the next two weeks to this matter. He is leaving for Belleville to-night.

To-days' Orders.

Peterborough, Ont., March 7th, 1917.

Daily orders by Lieutenant-Colonel C. H. Ackerman, Commanding 247th O. S. Batt., C.E.F.:

Orders for Thursday, March 8th, 1917.

Change of Address.— It is notified for general information that officers or other ranks of the Regiment changing their address, or whose next of kin has changed address, will notify the change through the proper channel of communication, so that Regimental Records may be kept correctly.

Duties.— Orderly officer for Thursday, March 8th, 1917: Lieut. J. M Shook. Next for duty: Friday, March 9th, 1917, Lieut. T. W. Quinn.

A. E. Brittain, Lieut.,
Adjutant 247th O. S. Battalion, C.E.F.

The Kingston Standard says: It is understood that Major Thompson, who has been temporarily placed in command of the 252nd Battalion at Lindsay, succeeding Lieut.-Col. Glass, will be permanently appointed as O. C. of this unit. Since taking over the duties of his temporary appointment, Major Thompson has given excellent satisfaction and the authorioies feel that they would make no mistake in placing him in permanent command.

REGINA, Sask., March 7—The Act to provide representation in the Legislative Assembly for the members of the overseas forces was distributed in the Legislature to-day. It provides for three members to be elected by the persons who, at the time of taking the poll, shall be qualified as stipulated. One member shall be elected by the soldiers in England; the other two by those who are in France or Belgium. The election shall take place at such time or dates as may be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, provided that the election shall be completed on or before Dec. 11, 1917. Candidates for election must have served at least six months with the expeditionary forces. Appointment was made to-day of those who are to comprise the commission to operate the Act, which incorporates the Saskatchewan Returned Soldiers' Employment Commission.

OTTAWA, March 7.—The Department of Militia and Defence has announced that for the twelve months ending December 31st, 1916, 167 cases only of typhoid fever were reported as having occurred amongst the many thousands of men of the C.E.F. in Canada, and this, notwithstanding the fact that typhoid fever is a disease especially affecting young adults from seventeen to thirty years of age, and a disease which is endemic in all parts of Canada.

This comparative freedom on the part of the C.E.F. is seen to be most striking when it is recalled that during the Boer War one man out of every nine in the British forces in South Africa was invalided through this disease, and that in the Spanish-American war of 107,000 men in the camps at Tampa, Florida, and elsewhere, who had not left the shor-

Nationalists Walk Out of the Commons

Lloyd George Makes Declaration That Government is Prepared to Grant Home Rule Now to the Irish Provinces That Demand It

NO COERCION FOR ULSTER

LONDON, Thursday, March 8—The Parliamentary correspondent of the Times wires: "The Irish debate in the House of Commons, last night, culminated in a dramatic scene. John Redmond regarded the Prime Minister's reply to the Nationalist demand for an immediate settlement of the basis of Home Rule as so unsatisfactory that he declined to take any further part in the debate, and led his followers from the Chamber.

"Lloyd George's declaration was to the effect that the Government were prepared to grant Home Rule now to that part of Ireland which already demanded it, but would not take action to enforce Home Rule on that part to which it was repugnant.

The crowded appearance of the House showed the importance that the members, British and Irish alike, attached to the occasion. The Prime Minister, looking far from well, was in his place on the Treasury bench between Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson. Mr. Asquith was present, and there was a full muster of ex-Ministers on the opposing bench. Augustine Birrell reappeared after a long absence. Among the distinguished listeners in the galleries were the Primate, the Lord Chief Justice, Lords Fisher, Pirrie, Beresford and MacDonnell, the High Comissioners of Australia and New Zealand, and Sir Joseph Ward.

"There was a great press in the Irish benches, and excited cheers were raised when Mr. Devlin informed the Government that the Australian Senate had passed resolutions by 28 votes to 2 in favour of Home Rule for Ireland. A moment later T. P. O'Connro was on his feet moving his resolution in favour of the conferment without further delay on Ireland of 'the free institutions long promised her.' It was a quiet opening, with Mr. O'Connor in a reminiscent vein, that he presented to the Government the alternatives of immediate settlement and coercion.

"William Redmond, the Nationalist leader's brother, who is fighting gallantly with the Irish troops in France, followed with a moving appeal. With great eloquence and earnestness he besought the House to let the dead past bury its dead and make a new start in the relations between England and Ireland. He made a personal appeal to Sir Edward Carson to come to some arrangement with the Nationalists, and offered to go to any length to meet the objections and secure the confidence of Ulster. Claiming to speak the thoughts of the Irish soldiers at the front, he made an impression on the House.

Position of Ireland.

"The difficulties inherent in the Irish situation became apparent when Sir John Lonsdale rose to state the case of the Ulster Unionists. Avoiding any reference which would cause embittered feeling he said he had been charged to declare that under no circumstances would the Ulster Unionists consent to go under a Home Rule Parliament."

"Two hours had passed before the Prime Minister intervened to state the policy of the Government. He obviously had not recovered completely from his indisposition, and was hardly at his best. He opened by saying that a settlement which would be acceptable to the people of Ireland as a whole would be welcomed with delight by the rest of the

POSITIONS FOR RETURNED MEN

The breaking up of the winter will afford much more of employment than during the winter. So the calls are coming in for men, and returned men have the preference so long as they will try to make good.

Most, nearly all, of the men returned disabled with hurts or wounds received in service are placed. But those who return "medically unfit" and who have to go back into civil life will have to be placed.

There are openings for men having knowledge of carpenter work, tinsmiths and iron work. Men who will pay attention to instruction will be taken on and trained. Once trained there is the new trade available. Now is the chance to acquire something that will give an earning power for the balance of life, instead of labourer's work.

A painter is wanted at the Canadian Canoe Co. Four men wanted to sell goods on commission, though this latter occupation does not promise very well to the man who needs a stated wage. Try it if you like.

GERMANY PLAYS CARRANZA AGAINST VILLA IN MEXICO

Seeking to Again Incite Bandit Leader, to Raid Borders of U. S. A., While at the Same Time, Huns Have been Trying to Work with Carranza

MORE GERMAN PLOTS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By Webb Miller)

LAREDO, Texas, March 8.—Germany is playing Villa against Carranza. Great sums of German money are pouring into the bandit leader's hands, inciting him to again raid borders of United States, and against German agent's work through officials of the Carranza government seeking to align that side against the United States.

Just back from a trip into the interior of Mexico I can state these facts on the highest authority.

Agents of the German government in Mexico approached Francisco Villa at his headquarters at Bustillor ranch about February 12, with a proposition to renew his raids on the border in case of a declaration of war between the United States and Germany. Two German agents reached the bandit leader. The conference extended over two days and the Germans got their way. Among officials in Mexico City stories are afloat that two Government officials in the first chief's immediate circle of influential men were co-operating directly with German agents.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon. At 3 o'clock a public service will be held in Broadway Methodist Tabernacle, conducted by Rev. Dr. W. R. Young. The Board of Control and City Council and civic departmental heads will attend in a body. BRANTFORD'S BACKYARD GARDENS.

The Brantford Expositor thus writes upon the vital and universally advocated and commended and important idea of intensified production in the interests of patriotism and public welfare:

With all the resources of the British Empire needed to win the war, the campaign to be conducted in this city to encourage thrift, and to increase production, should meet with the hearty support of every citizen. Few homes are there here which have not some spare land, which could with little difficulty, be turned into a backyard garden, and sufficient raised thereon to keep the family supplied with greens for the year, while with the larger plots sufficient potatoes could be raised to last for some time. With some 25,000,000 men in arms, the world records a scarcity of food, and though a backyard garden may seem in itself but an insignificant fraction, yet the aggregate in a city the size of Brantford would prove an eye-opener. As with increased production, so with increased savings. The one who produces reaps, and the Empire benefits. The one who saves has a bank balance, and because of that the monetary resources of the Dominion for the carrying on of the war are increased.

Almost every newspaper one opens day by day contains references to the desirability of utilising home gardens and vacant lots for greater production. No thinking journal or thinking individual can be found who fails to recognise the importance of the movement in the interests of the citizens themselves and the alimentary resources of the country and Empire.

True we find some weak-wit, some "sharp-alec" to air his bumptuousness in making sport of a national movement looking to greater production. It is not surprising that such individuals are found in the community but a self respecting journal that gives place to and comments approvingly upon unpatriotic attacks upon national service by production, is not easily understood. In so doing it not only antagonizes the demand of both of the governments its supports, but runs counter to the public appeal of its managerial head to greater home production.

The question of the public duty of cultivating to the limit of production every back garden and every vacant lot is not even arguable. It is too self-evidently in line with public duty in connection with the national struggle. It may be said that too much is expected, and that statistics of production of small plots are over-estimated.

This is not the case as far as any figures of yield given by The Examiner are concerned. Farmers' production of vegetables are a by-industry, incidentally and often carelessly conducted. There are market gardeners in this vicinity who raise more in bulk, more in money value, off eight or ten acres than many farmers with ten times that area available. There are farms of fifty acres, intensively cultivated, that yield more crops than farms of two or three times the area carelessly and scratchily cultivated.

So with the home garden plot. Its limited size and convenience to the home, make it possible to cultivate in the closest manner and make productive every square foot, abundantly.

Vacant lots present a good field, too, for enlarged production. They will need little fertilizing, the first year anyway; they have lain fallow a generation or more and have acquired fertility.

A prominent gentleman, a solid and sane-thinking professional gentleman, in heartily commending the idea of increased production, suggested that there were many promising plots that could be advantageously cultivated. He said there are idle lands in connection with our big industries—he cited the Canadian General, that might be turned over to the employees, for cultivation.

He also suggested that the Agricultural Grounds—thirty rich acres—could be put to crop with certainty of a large yield. Of course there will be objections. But such objections lose force when King George recognizing the national necessity of greater food production, puts the plow to the turf of royal parks that has not been broken for centuries.

This is a time when every resource should be employed in helping win the war, and the value of little contributions in making tremendous aggregates, should not be overlooked. The millions of men battling in Europe, were enlisted and equipped one at a time, and the products of our little garden plot added to millions in Canada, would mean ship loads and fleet loads of food material.

Why Canada has not done more, and does not do more, is because individuals minify the value of their efforts. A hundred thousand young men acting, or failing to act, on the idea that their individual presence won't mean much to the army, explains why Canada is that many short of the quota of recruits Sir Robert Borden pledged the honour of Canada to send to the fighting line.

A million or more Canadian men and women thinking—and acting accordingly—that their little contribution to patriotic and national purposes won't count, rob patriotic and national funds of millions of dollars.

Millions of people in Canada individually thinking, with shallow thinkers, that the cultivation of their backyard garden won't amount to much, deprive Canada of millions of dollars worth of food at a time when food is one of the great needs of the battling Empire.

Judging by indications, the food yield of universal cultivation of Canadian garden plots, would more than counterbalance the submarine destruction of food supplies in order to starve Britain.

"The more we produce out of the ordinary course, the more non-producers now, become producers even in a small way individually, the more food we shall have to send to Britain and her allies.

There is a call for more soldiers' socks. The millions of pairs that have been sent were made stitch by stitch. If the women who have knit them, and the women who are to knit more, had been or were deterred by the thought that one stitch did not count, then nothing would have been done.

This war calls upon us all to do our bit and no individual effort or action or contribution is too small or insignificant to count in the grand aggregate of results, that Canada has contributed and is contributing to the victorious ending of this war.

PRESS COMMENT ON HOLLAND'S PLIGHT

"Holland Will Not Forget."

Columbia State:—"So Holland will simply have to bear its anger and its privations as best it may. But it will not forget."

"Absolute Disregard."

Cleveland Plain Dealer:—"Without directly attacking an American vessel Germany thus advertises to the world its absolute disregard for American sentiment and American protests."

"A Meaningless Term."

Providence Journal:—"The freedom of the seas has become a meaningless term. There is no such thing where the Kaiser's reckless and undiscriminating U-boats operate in defiance of the law of nations and the honourable maritime practice of the past."

"Unbridled Arrogance."

Springfield Republican:—"The assault on innocent Dutch shipping presents in a very aggravated aspect the unbridled arrogance of Germany in sinking inoffensive neutral merchantmen on the high seas."

"Known in Advance."

Hartford Conrant:—"Probably the Holland government knew as well then as it knows now that German promises are always subject to revocation, for Holland's government had before it some experiences of its own, as well as the experience of the United States."

"Reaction of Ruthlessness."

Troy Record:—"There is a possibility that the submarine campaign may react upon the chief exponent of ruthlessness. The patience of the neutrals is no proof against the high handed acts of Germany. A week or two more may find Holland, Switzerland, Denmark, Norway, Spain and possibly Sweden morally, at least, behind the Entente Allies."

"The Inevitable Blunder."

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: — "As Germany is conducting her ruthlessness in this fashion, it will not be long before she blunders against the strongest of neutrals."

Mr. R. C. Strickland's Pointed Appeal to the Industrial Committee

He Urges Development of the Great Stock-raising Resources of Peterborough County

150,000 ACRES WAITING

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir: I see in your issue of the 27th February, that the young business men of your city have formed an Industrial Association. Would they kindly take a pointer from an old man.

Assuming they would, I suggest to them that they should keep in view the idea of some day in the near future establishing live stock yards, not necessarily in the city. The Union Stock Yards of Toronto are seven miles from the centre; and if the Industrial Committee took the trouble to acquire the statistics of the volume of business done in these yards annually they would be more than astonished. Besides, the business in these yards attracts moneyed men from all parts of the continent.

The live stock industry of Eastern Ontario is fifty years behind Western Ontario, owing to lack of enterprise. Peterborough is better situated for a live stock centre than any other city in Ontario. With her three railways and the Trent Canal, she can attract cattle shipments in and out from all parts of the province. She has millions of acres to the north of waste land, well adapted to stock raising, and ample natural hay for the cutting to winter feed all the cattle that the high lands will graze during the summer months. Again, there are thousands of acres covered with thick foliage of bracken fern which smothers out the pasturage.

The head of the Animal Department of the Agricultural Farm, Ottawa, informs me "that this is the case on the government ranch in British Columbia and they discovered that hogs thrived well on the bracken root, and consequently it was an asset, and they ran herds of swine on the ranch which did remarkably well."

Last year I wrote to the late Mr. Duff, the Minister of Agriculture, pointing out to him that in the county of Peterborough there were 150 thousand acres of waste lands that have been lying dormant for years from lack of enterprise of the government, at the same time pointing out to him how all the waste lands in Eastern Ontario could be utilized productively to the great advantage of the province; and that his department should move in this direction or give good backing to capitalists. His reply gave hearty approval to my suggestion, but he said, "the difficulty of the government taking hold was in securing good management." Canadians don't lack brains; they would be easily trained to be managers.

Toronto has business men that can see a thing or two and look ahead for years. All their cry has been develop New Ontario. Why it is the little springs (production in the North) that fill the ocean (Toronto) to the South. What has ever Peterborough done for the northern country? I now tell your city that if this vast country was properly developed by capitalists it would bring more wealth to Peterborough than all the pine timber taken from it ever did. And if my suggestions were carried out by the Industrial Committee of your city your citizens would get larger ideas because they would be encouraging enterprise beyond their own city limits, and at the same time drawing wealth to their coffers.

Yours truly,
R. C. STRICKLAND.
Burleigh, March 5th.

Rise, Britons Rise

Specially written for "The People" (England) by Mr. Granville Cooke.

"Every man, every pound, and every effort will be needed."—The Right Hon. David Lloyd George, Prime Minister.

Rise! Britons, rise! from sloth's disabling sleep,
England appeals to you her guard to keep!
To arms! To arms! the dream of peace is o'er,
Nought now remains but vassalage or war!

Rise! Britons, rise! with one sublime accord,
For all you have, and are, take up the sword!
In mart and mine and school and forge and farm.
Arise! Arise! Unite, and toil and arm!

Rise! Britons, rise! and strike the common foe—
Ne'er be it said we struck a traitor's blow!
For Life and Liberty, for God and King!
Strike on until the bells of freedom ring!

Rise! Britons, rise! Salute the battle call—
Kaiser or God! who stands if England fall?
There's but one choice, for each, one life to give,
Praised be the Lord!—who dies if England lives?

Rise! Britons, rise! the hour of sleep is past,
Faith's stirring battle cry rings out at last!—
"Thy will be done." Not mine, but Thine, until
The Christ is crowned at last with "Peace—goodwill."

Rise! Britons, rise! to that immortal fame,
That ever sanctified your glorious name!
Tread now the path Crusades nobly trod,
That leads to Victory and leads to God!

Rise! Britons, rise! in this titanic fight,
'Twixt the protagonists of Wrong and Right!
With measured strength and steadfastness repel
The brutal might and tyranny of Hell!

Rise! Britons, rise! Defend your Motherland,
That Truth and Honour, God and Freedom stand!
Obey the Call, e'en every man to-day!
Lest England fall and victory pass away.

Heavy Movement of The German Troops

SLIUS, Holland, March 7.—All traffic across the Dutch-Belgian frontier has been stopped by the German military authorities because they wish the movement of their troops to be kept secret. Refugees and deserters bring the news that enormous masses of troops, artillery, and munitions are being moved to the front, while transports of wounded keep arriving at Ghent, or are moving farther on toward Germany.

The new regiments arriving for the front keep the numbers of their regiments covered, but it is evident that they are composed of very young recruits, many being about 17 or 18 years old. They are mixed with older men, who are already war hardened. Some of the troops come directly from the Russian front or the Balkans. All the infantry is being sent to the front, cavalry now doing the patrol duty in Belgium. The landstrumers, who did duty along the Zeeland-Flanders border, and who for the most part were men recovering from wounds or sickness, have also been ordered to the front.

Rather than face the enemy many of these men escape into Holland, where they tell of extesive revolutionary propaganda among the German troops. They have also brought some of the literature which is being circulated. One pamphlet of a blood red colour denounces the German military rule more vigorously than anything written by the belligerents or neutrals. Men pass these revolutionary pamphlets from hand to hand. One entited "Hunger," accuses the German Government of following an Imperialistic policy, of unchaining a world war, of misleading the people, and leaving them a prey to famine. Another leaflet is a letter from Germany full of complaints by women of hunger, cold, and misery.

GERARD'S HIGH-PRICED EGGS

Berlin Dispatch Dilates on "Revelations" of "Illicit Traffic."

BERLIN, March 6.—Prussian vigilance has not been able thus far to suppress much illicit traffic in farm products, which is being carried on in devious ways in the rural environments of Berlin.

In the course of revelations which have been made involving country landlords who had been doing a profitable business in eggs and bacon it was discovered that James W. Gerard, then American Ambassador, paid farmers in the vicinity of his hunting grounds 75 pfennigs for eggs. As the mark stands to-day that would be a trifle over twelve cents each.

The man who speaks softly and pays a big price has had little difficulty in discovering farm sources where he has been served readily with delicacies not available in his markets in town. This species of shopping, however, is now being discouraged effectively through confiscation of food packages arriving at local railway stations.

Mr. Gerard's price for eggs was not the high water mark. A woman who presides over an estate in the vicinity of Berlin admitted in a private letter, of which she received an offer of $2 a dozen for eggs.

Toronto Engineer Investigates the Collapse of the Quaker Oats Flat Slab Fire-proof Warehouse

T. D. Mylrea, Assistant to the City Architect of Toronto, Investigates Collapse of Reinforced Concrete Building at Peterborough and Reports That Structure is Completely Ruined Owing to Extremely High Temperatures Maintained For Unusual Period ---City Architect Says Impossible For Any Material to Resist Fire of Such Intensity and Duration

Fig. 1—General View of Quaker Oats Plant Before Fire.

(From the Canadian Engineer.)

T. D. Mylrea, engineer in charge of tests for the city architects department, Toronto, has made a report on the destruction of the flat-slab type, reinforced concrete warehouse at the Quaker Oats fire, which occurred December 11th, 1916, at Peterborough, Ont.

"As thirteen buildings of the flat-slab type were erected or started in Toronto during 1916 (with a permit value of $1,872,000, W. W. Pearse, the city architect and superintendent of building, was naturally anxious regarding the fireproof quality of the flat-slab type of construction, in case any serious deficiency in that type of construction should have been shown by the Peterborough fire. Mr. Pearse states the flat slab type of construction was recognized in a building by-law by the city of Chicago in 1914, which was the first time that type of construction had been officially recognized in any city by-law, so far as he is aware. The fact that this recognition was so recent, increased Mr. Pearse's anxiety to know the full facts in regard to the failure at Peterborough, which was undoubtedly the worst of its kind in the history of reinforced concrete construction, and the first in the history of this particular type of reinforced concrete design.

Mr. Mylrea's report, which is thorough and exhaustive, and which is accompanied by a number of plates and fifty-two photographs, proves conclusively that the Peterborough fire was a most unusual one, presenting conditions not likely to be duplicated very often, viz.:

(1) The fire raged simultaneously on all seven floors (including basement) of the building.

(2) The oats and feed, which were piled high on each floor, burned fiercely but slowly, retaining a very high heat for a long period. They produced the effect of an intense coke fire.

(3) The fire raged in full blast for seven hours before any part of the building fell.

Mr. Mylrea's conclusions are as follows:

My. Mylrea's Conclusions. — "The first lesson to be drawn from this conflagration is that absolutely 'fireproof' construction is a chimera, for if heat is sufficiently intense and long-enduring, no material can withstand it. This fact has been demonstrated in fires upon practically all the materials of 'fireproof' construction, and now the latest type of building succumbs to it.

"The fact that concrete stood so well in the Edison fire has been hailed far and wide, and the severity of that fire was so great that it has become somewhat of a criterion of fire intensity. It seems almost sacrilige to say that at the Quaker Oats fire, we had a more severer fire than at the Edison. Yet, in the press of the time cuts were printed which show that not one of the large concrete buildings of the Edison plant had all the floors in full blaze at the same time. Nor did the fire remain in full intensity for more than an hour or two at any one place. Neither are there more abundant proofs of intense heat.

"But in the reinforced concrete warehouse at the Quaker Oats plant a fire occurred upon all floors at the same time, of an intensity at least equal to that developed in the Edison fire, and it was seven hours after the fire started before collapse occurred. Even after two months there is considerable heat in the debris, and in some places there is fire still.

"It is not to be considered to the discredit of flat-slab construction that a building of this type failed under such extraordinary circumstances. There was no fusion of the concrete, but the fusion evident at the Edison fire may have been due to the nature of the combustible materials at the point where this occurred.

"A point emphasized again by this fire is that hazardous features should be isolated, preferably in buildings with large window areas. In this case the large blank wall areas of the dry-house tended to hold the pressure. Consequently, not only were the walls wrecked but the fire was flung far into the mill. In several small explosions in Toronto, wired glass has had the effect of holding the pressure, with consequent damage to walls, so the window areas recommended should preferably be glazed with plain glass.

"As far as the matter of fireproofing is concerned, if a fire is of sufficient intensity to heat a nine-inch floor slab through, it is evident that four and one-half inches of fireproofing would avail nothing. Moreover, if it is merely covered with mortar, the reinforcing will not oxidize. In the usual design of flat slab, the steel is not stressed to more than about one-third of its elastic limit under design load, so it could readily stand a temporary reduction in strength of 50 deg. This would correspond to a rise in temperature of about 1,250 deg. F., at which temperature the cement in the concrete would be completely dehydrated. There is nothing to be gained therefore, by excessive fireproofing of the rods."

Mr. Pearse's Conclusions.— In an interview concerning Mr. Mylrea's report, Mr. Pearse said:

"In my opinion, it would be impossible at the present time to erect any building that could resist a fire of the magnitude and duration to which this building was subjected.

"The building apparently was constructed in what is known as the 4-way reinforced concrete type of construction. It will be noted that on the first four floors there were no drop panels at the columns, and also that there was more steel put in the diagonal than there was in the straight or direct strip. This is not in accordance with the more recent by-laws which usually put more steel in the direct and less in the diagonal strip. Judging from the report, however, the building apparently had stood up under quite severe loading, and due to the fact that the different by-laws covering this type of construction vary as much as 100 per cent., it seems out of order at the present time to pass any criticism on the way this building was designed."

Fig. 1 is a general view of the plant, all of which was of brick or mill construction, with the exception of the one warehouse which was flat-slab type, reinforced concrete construction, and the circular concrete grain bins, which were of reinforced concrete construction. The grain bins are at the extreme right of the plant, the concrete warehouse at the extreme left, in the rear of Fig. 1, running from the left end of the plant almost to the wooden elevator building on which there was a large "Quaker Oats" sign, and paralleling the mill construction building which burned first and which set fire to the contents of the concrete structure.

The eighteen storage bins were practically uninjured by fire, and represent the only portion of the plant which is not an absolute wreck. Fig. 2 is a general block plan of the plant. The portion of the concrete warehouse which collapsed is indicated, but the remainder of the warehouse is gradually breaking up and is so badly injured that it will be torn down, says Mr. Mylrea.

Fig. 3 gives a typical cross-section of the reinforced concrete warehouse showing the general constructional features. Fig. 4 is a horizontal section showing the kind and amount of reinforcing on the various floors.

The concrete warehouse was approximately 60 ft. wide, 200 ft. long and basement and six stories high. The Leonard Construction Co., Limited, were the engineers and contractors for both upper and lower sections of the building.

The first four stories were built in 1910 and the two upper ones in 1916, and the common practice at these different dates is well represented in the details of construction. The floors were designed for 200 lbs. per square foot, live load.

Following is an abstract of Mr. Mylrea's detailed report:

Mr. Mylrea's Report. — From the structural details as shown in Fig. 3, it will be noticed that in the first four stories there are no drop panels at the top of the columns, and that the column caps decrease in diameter with the columns. There is also more steel in the diagonal bands of reinforcement than in the direct bands. The circular reinforcement of the column shafts consist of separate steel hoops about 1 1-2 ins. x 1-4 in. in section spaced about 8-in. centres. As the theory of flat-slab construction was not understood at the time these stories were built, these are features that contradict the facts brought out later by extensometer tests, but they represent the best construction known at the time.

The upper two floors show the column capital of constant diameter, the drop panel, the correct distribution of the slab steel, and the spiral form of circular column reinforcement. For some reason or other, the drop panels were omitted from around the caps of the wall columns in the two upper stories and a bracket substituted. On the corner columns even these brackets are lacking.

Since a drop panel would not have interfered with the windows, it is hard to tell just why this was done, for at these places the bending moments are most severe. It might have been that the type of construction adopted required less work on the forms. It might be fair to state, however, that up until quite recently another American firm had this bracket system as one of its standards, in which case they used four brackets round the interior columns, and no flaring heads.

When the two upper stories were erected, it was decided to increase the diameter of the columns on the third and fourth stories to aid them in carrying the additional load. This was accomplished by wrapping them in expanded metal and pouring a rich grout around them. The fifth floor — the former roof—was increased from 7 ins. to 9 ins. in thickness by laying expanded metal upon it and pouring another 2 ins. of concrete on it. The aggregate used throughout was a local gravel of good quality.

The north wall of the building was blank. The east wall, facing the lane between the reinforced concrete building and warehouse No. 1, had a large number of windows with metal sash and wired glass. The sash and frames in the first four stories were of hollow metal, and in the upper stories were of solid metal. On the other two sides of the building ordinary wood-en frames and sash were used, with the exception of the north bay on the west side, which was the same as on the east side.

All the buildings, with the exception of the concrete ware house and the concrete grain bins of elevator B, were equipped with automatic sprinklers. All the buildings, with the exception of the circular grain bins, are now ruins. The lower 15 feet of two of the tanks was somewhat spalled and on the easterly of these two tanks one small hole was burned through the wall. As this was below the level was filled with fire on all floors at the same time.

There was a fair easterly wind which drove the flames across the bridge into the cleaning building and elevator A; and when the mill and warehouse No. 1 were on fire, subjected the concrete warehouse to a fearful exposure. About 11 a.m. the contents of the reinforced concrete warehouse began to blaze, the fire starting on the third and fourth floors where there were large piles of box shooks. Owing to the lack of pressure, the firemen were forced to leave the building to the mercy of the flames.

Early in the fire the wired glass in the east face of the building was hanging in sheets down the wall, and the wooden frame and sash from the south wall were completely incinerated. It was in the west and middle windows of the second and third floors, that cast-iron sash weights were found partly fused.

The fire raged in the concrete warehouse without one drop of water being pored on it till 6 p.m., when 6 2-3 bays north of the centre of the building fell.

In falling, the north wall of the dry house buried the boiler room, and the east wall carried with it a 6-inch sprinkler riser, at the same time burying the valve controlling this riser. The fire in the mill opened up the sprinklers fed by two 6-inch connections, with the result that with three six-inch streams drawing from one 8-inch main, the pressure was reduced to practically nil. Thus the private fire protection was put out of commission at the very start, and during the early stages of the fire the city system was badly crippled.

Toronto Engineer Investigates the Collapse of the Quaker Oats Flat Slab Fire-proof Warehouse

Damage to Building.— So intense was the heat that not even one charred stick of wood may be found on the plant. Fig. 5 gives a general view of what remains of the concrete warehouse. As shown on Fig. 2, most of the concrete building north of its centre collapsed and Fig. 6 gives a view taken from the fourth floor of the south section looking towards the standing 1 1-3 bays to the north. Portions of the floor slabs hanging by their reinforcing rods are plainly visible. A closer view of this wreckage is given in Fig. 7, and a view from another angle is given in Fig. 8. The brick wall in the foreground of Fig. 8 is not a part of the concrete warehouse.

From the distribution of the debris it may be concluded that in collapsing the building settled straight downward.

Fig. 9—Melted Brick Ran Out Up on Floor for Distance of Eighteen inc hes.

Temperatures Developed.—Eloquent testimony as to the temperatures developed in the reinforced concrete building is given by expansion cracks. Owing to the heating of the floors and their subsequent expansion, the length of the building considerably increased, and caused peculiar diagonal cracks to appear in the brickwork. One curious effect of expansion due to heat was found in the elevator penthouse. The upper end of the elevator guides came to within an inch of the ceiling formed by the pent-house floor slab. Due to expansion, these guides pushed two holes through this slab.

In the dry-house the limestone has been calcined to a depth of nearly a foot. This is evidence of long-continued heat. At many points about the plant freight cars were standing and all but the metal parts were entirely consumed, and wheels lost nearly all sembance of their original shape. On the rim of one wheel noted by the writer is a fused mass of metal where this wheel and the rail upon which it was standing were fused together. Outside the walls of the building a temperature sufficient to melt cast iron was developed in many places.

The temperature in the interior of the building in places must have been very intense, for melted parts of machines may be found here and there in the ruins. In the front windows of the second story and in the front and and some of the west windows on the third story of the concrete warehouse were found melted sash weights. In some cases they were but slightly fused, in other cases two or more weights had run together, and in several places on the third floor the weights were reduced to shapeless masses of cast iron.

On the inside of the walls of all the buildings may be found large patches of fused brickwork of which Fig. 9 gives an example. This view was taken on the third story of the reinforced concrete warehouse. The melted brick ran down the face of the wall and out upon the floor like molasses for a distance of about 18 inches, and over the doorway it trickled across the face of the concrete lintel and dripped from there to the floor. Upon breaking off some of this fused brick from the lintel, it was found that the concrete had been badly calcined beneath the running brickwork. From the fact that cast iron melts at about 2,200 deg. F. and that brickwork reaches the stage of incipient fusion at about the same temperature, it must be concluded that at many places during the conflagration, temperatures in the neighbourhood of 2,300 deg. F. must have been reached. Fig. 10 shows a group of samples collected as evidence of the heat existing.

Cement Dehydrated.—That the concrete building became such a wreck is something that may cast grave doubts upon the fire-resisting qualities of flat-slab construction. Six and two-thirds bays out of fourteen have fallen in an almost shapeless heap of debris. The cement in the floors of the parts still standing is dehydrated completely through, and when a block of the floor slab, such as may be seen hanging from the reinforcing rods, is detached, it may be broken easily by dropping it on the ground or rapping it against another such block. The floor slabs practically everywhere sag somewhat, and in many places are at the point of incipient failure. Fig. 11 is a view illustrating this condition.

Fig. 10—Evidences of Extreme Temperature.

A is partly fused sash weight. B is a piece of iron from a completely fused sash weight. C is a bit of glass from one of the wired glass windows which was sprinkled on the floor. D is a piece of melted brick broken from a wall. E is a piece of brick from a window sill where brick surface and wired glass were melted into one mass.

If we consider the effect of heat upon concrete it may shed some light on the subject. Experiments upon the heat conductivity of concrete are rather few, but from those of Prof. Ira H. Woolson we learn that when subjected to a temperature of 1,500 deg. F. for two hours, a point 2 inches from the exposed surface of a block of concrete had its temperature raised between 500 deg. F. and 700 deg. F. We learn also that dehydration of the cement crystals begins about 500 deg. F. and is complete at about 900 deg. F. Thus we may reason that dehydration has reached a point of 2 inches below the surface of a piece of concrete after being subjected to a temperature of 1,500 deg. F. for two hours.

In the reinforced concrete warehouse under consideration, we had a temperature that, according to those who saw it, "was like a blast furnace by 1 o'clock," and which at the time of the collapse at 6 p.m., and lasted five hours. We have seen that it must have reached 2,300 deg. F. and that owing to the great quantity of fuel, must have been maintained practically constantly. The fact that the floor slabs are completely dehydrated is therefore not beyond comprehension, nor does it contradict the evidence of the experiments quoted.

In addition to this, Prof. J. B. Johnson, in his "Materials of Construction," states that the working strength of steel decreases with a rise in temperature, and that this decrease takes place at the rate of approximately 4 p.c. for each 100 deg. F. increase. If we take the evidence of the brick shown in Fig. 9, which shows that a temperature of over 2,000 deg. F. penetrated two inches into a material of just about the same conductivity as concrete, and, from this assume that the slab rods reached this temperature, it is evident that their working strength was reduced by about 80 p.c.

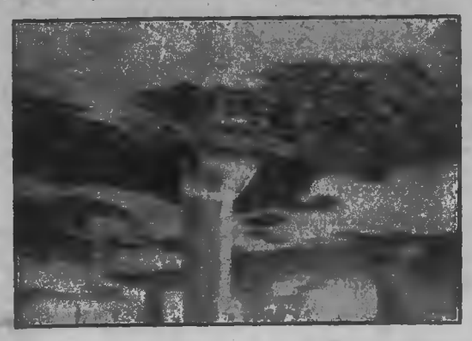

Fig 12—Probably the Result of Excessive Compressive Stress.

Fig. 13—View in Basement W here Premiums Were Stored.

For steel with an elastic limit of 35,000 lbs. per square inch, this would mean that the available working strength was less than 7,000 lbs. per square inch. In the columns this would not be of such grave importance as in the floor slabs, but in the slabs the stresses developed were in access of this reduced allowable stress, as will be shown later. It is therefore probable that owing both to the weakening of the concrete in compression and the steel in tension, the floors failed first and carried the columns with them.

Whether any other type of construction would have stood the fire better is, of course, a matter of conjecture, but the shipping shed, which was of beam and slab construction, was wrecked when under no load.

Some Details of the Wreck.—As mentioned above, blocks of the concrete may be readily broken. At a depth of about an inch the aggregate thus exposed shows no noticeable effect, unless it be of some coarsely crystalline structure, such as granite. One such piece of granite as big as a man's fist was easily crushed by the grip of one hand. Closer to the surface the aggregate calcines. The surfaces, being directly in contact with the fire, were everywhere calcined from 1-4 in. to 1-2 in., and on those blocks which fell into the fire in the collapsed portion calcination is practically complete.

At no point is there any evidence of fusion of the aggregate in the concrete. Particular care was exercised in verifying this fact, for the fire at the Edison Phonograph Works at West Orange, N.J., in 1914, such fusion occurred. At first glance, material hanging from cracks in the ceiling might be taken for fused concrete, but chemical analysis makes it practically certain that this is phosphate material from "Quaker Oats" which was piled in cases on the floor above. In the exact centre of Fig. 7 is the head of the basement columns, and it looks as though fusion had occurred at this point. It was largely for the purpose of determining whether or not this was fused concrete that occasioned my second visit to Peterborough, and I found that conditions had changed considerably since Fig. was photographed. No fusion was evident, but the large calcined masses are rapidly air slaking. This slaking process had already started at the time of my January visit.

All floors had been given a 1-inch wearing surface and practically everywhere throughout, the standing portion of the building this 1-inch surface has left the main slab. The ash from the burning box shooks protected some parts of the floor surface during the fiercest part of the heat. Although the wearing surface did not leave the floor slabs so noticeably under the box shooks, it is nevertheless calcined and can be readily separated from the rest of the floor by tapping with a hammer.

There is in this fire much to cause doubts whether gravel aggregate (other than possible quartz gravel) reduces the fire-resisting properties of concrete. The aggregate is exposed over practically the entire ceiling of the third story and also on other stories in places, and patches of the remaining smooth surface are constantly dropping off. It would seem perhaps more correct, in the case of this building at least, to attribute this appearance to the calcination of the cement and gravel at the surface, which allowed it to fall of its own weight.

In the case of the deeply affected part of the slab around the column head in the foreground of Fig. 12, the result is more than likely due to the compressive stress that existed in this locality. Exposed corners on horizontal surfaces suffered everywhere.

The reinforcing rods, even though protected in some cases with a very thin coat of concrete, were not oxidized until exposed. This might have been inferred from the fact that a thin coat of cement mortar will prevent rust, which is somewhat analagous to the black oxide formed on metal when subjected to fire; and wherever a slab failure occurred the broken ends of the rods were drawn down as in any typical tension failure.

The shape of columns seems to have something to do with the damage they sustain. With the exception of two, square ones appear not to be badly affected. But the appearance of all the columns is very deceptive except perhaps those of Fig. 13, which are not so bad, being in a part of the basement where there was less combustible material (premiums such as china bowls, etc.)

The dehydration spoken of before has affected the columns as well as the slabs, and extends to well inside the circular hooping. A month ago this was scarcely apparent. The protective effect of the coat of grout given to the columns on the third and fourth floor was very misleading. The weather in the meantime, however, has caused the appearance of the concrete to change. A month ago a freshly fractured piece of dehydrated concrete could scarcely be distinguished from a good piece, but the weakness is now apparent, the mortar amongst the aggregate having more the appearance of dried blue clay.

It is altogether possible that the hooping on the columns is largely responsible for their not failing. On all columns a few light blows with a hammer will detach large pieces of the concrete outside the hooping, as may be seen in Fig. 14.

Naturally, in heaps of combustible material burning on the outside, gases were formed within the pile and slight explosions thus occurred. There could not have been any explosion of magnitude. The building apparently settled straight downward. A number of columns apparently dropped directly down. As much of the brickwork appears to have fallen inward as fell out.

As to some of the details of construction, the solid metal fire doors stood the heat much better than the wood tin-clad doors when subjected to about the same heat condition. The door shown in Fig. 15 is a total wreck. The other half of this door cannot be found anywhere. The trap doors in the stairway are complete ruins. From this we may reach the conclusion that trap doors can never take the place of a proper stair enclosure.

Early in the fire the wired glass was completely gone, and may be found hanging in sheets down the outside of the walls or running down the brick inside. It must have kept the fire out of the concrete warehouse a little while, for the first fire to gain admittance did so through an open window near the north end of the building; but as to resisting severe exposures its value is not great. It is possible that iron shutters if they had been in working order, would have afforded much better protection; for even if they were not of the automatic closing type, the employees had time enough to close them by hand, as they did the openings in the wired glass windows. The metal window sash and frames withstood the heat very well. The wooden frames were, of course, quickly consumed, and the plain glass was worthless.

Loading of the Building.— In the sixth floor the sacked Vim feed was piled 13 sacks high, each sack weighing 70 lbs. over the whole area north of the elevator shaft. Therefore there was a load of over 175 lbs. to the square foot. The fifth floor loading, Quaker Oats in cases, was comparatively light; and on the third and fourth floors, occupied by the package department, there were were no great loads except in a few bays in which were rolls of paper. The second floor was probably the most heavily loaded, for here sacks of oat hulls weighing 98 lbs. each were piled 13 high, and sacks of rolled oats weighing 90 lbs. each were piled 11 high. This loading occupied most of the floor with the exception of a trucking space down the centre. The first floor occupied by the shipping department, had practically the same loading as the second floor. In the basement were some cases of dishes, some bales of scrap paper, and a large quantity of sacked oat hulls. While this material added no weight to the floors the ground oat hulls in burning must have helped to weaken the first floor. That the excessive sagging is confined entirely to the wall panels is therefore not at all surprising, nor is it any wonder that in areas of excessive compressive stress the concrete has fallen as shown in Fig. 12. The interior panels all sag somewhat, but the deflection in them is not comparable to that in the wall panels.

Russian in fit, falls full but with a slight curve, patch pockets, lock stitching in white, belted style and fastens with a series of loops—a huge overlay of white with notched edge—ball pearl buttons. Price $35.00.

You want some suit that primarily will have a claim on modishness, something irrepressibly smart, but not extreme? This black and white shepherd check will satisfy anyone with such a desire. Semi-tailored, patch pockets and back is side pleated, but the pearl buttons and additional collar of cerise corded silk gives to it that which the garments of a lesser price lack. Price $35

NOTICE:

This month is the last opportunity to secure the DELINEATOR at the half-price rate of 75c. Increased cost of production prevents such an offer being repeated after March 31st.

Police Intercepted A Keg Of Lager Destined For a Social

Yesterday it was a crock of whisky, this morning an untapped keg of Copeland lager that occupied the attention of Magistrate Dumble. On Saturday evening Detective Meagher and P. C. Blade, watching a house on Rubidge street saw an express man drive away from the house with the keg done up in a bag with the general appearance of a shantyman's "turkey." They confiscated it at the corner of King street. On the witness stand this morning Chief Thompson stated that the owner who was charged with keeping liquor for sale had called at the police station shortly after the seizure and explained that the lager was on its way to a house on Lafeyette Avenue, where a little entertainment had been planned. Some of the guests were to furnish the "eats," others music and the keg contained the liquid refreshments. It was evidently not a rare occasion for the coterie who enjoyed these little socials. The Chief has received information of the visits of the express waggon to the Rubidge street house and had sent the detective and constable out to investigate. In addition to the keg of lager, Detective Meagher said he found fifteen bottles of porter in the pantry of the Rubidge street residence.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, who appeared for the defendant argued that there was no evidence that the lager was kept for sale or that it had left the possession of the defendant. Magistrate Dumble dismissed the case and ordered the lager to be returned to the owner. It is all there and will doubtless be doubly appreciated at this week end's "sing song."

NATIONALISTS WALK OUT OF THE COMMONS

United Kingdom, and reminded the House that the British people also felt that a dominant consideration in the settlement of all such questions must be its effect on the conduct of the war. It was the duty of the Government to see that there were no attempts at settlement which would provoke civil disturbance.

"'We must face the facts,' the Prime Minister insisted. The fundamental facts in his judgment were that centuries of ruthless and often brutal injustice had driven hatred of British rule into the very marrow of the Irish race, and that in the north-eastern part of Ireland the population was as hostile to Irish rule as the rest of Ireland was to British rule. These fundamental facts raised two questions: Were the people of this country prepared to confer self-government on those parts of Ireland which unmistakably demanded it? Were the people of this country prepared to force the population of the north-eastern corner to submit to government by a population with which they were completely out of sympathy? He answered the first question in the affirmative, the second in the negative.

Nationalists Impatient.

"The Nationalists became noisily impatient as the Prime Minister proceeded to define the attitude of the Government. He put his points more clearly in the second speech. The effect of it can be stated here. The Government were prepared to grant Home Rule immediately to that part of Ireland which clearly demanded it; they could not take action to force Home Rule on that part of Ireland to which it is repugnant. There were two ways of arranging details, either a conference of Irishmen or setting up a commission to consider the adjustments necessary to put those principles into operation. In order to make the standpoint of the Government clear the Prime Minister moved an amendment welcoming any settlement which would not involve coercion of any part of the Irish people.

"Although the Prime Minister's manner throughout was conciliatory, the Nationalists greeted the end of his speech with jeers.

Consult Dominions' Premiers.

"Mr. Asquith followed. He asked with all solemnity if a united effort could not be made to throw off the Irish burden. While fully recognizing the difficulties of the situation, he made a practical contribution to the debate. He declared the only practicable course was to invite the intervention of some outside impartial authority and entrust it with the ask of adjustment as between all interests and sentiments concerned. Such a proposal might be facilitated by the presence within our borders of a number of distinguished Dominions statesmen. He added the qualification that the decisions of such body would be subject to the final approval of Parliament.

"Next came John Redmond with a bitter, uncompromising speech, which was loudly cheered by his followers. He described the Prime Minister's policy as one of wait and see, and refused to discuss Mr. Asquith's proposal. After announcing that he would not agree to any more negotiations he painted a gloomy picture of the rise of a revolutionary party in Ireland, and charged the Government with playing directly into their hands. In fact, the burden of his speech was that the Government is making the constitutional movement more and more difficult.

"Mr. Redmond ended his speech by declaring that the debate necessitated reconsideration by the Nationalist party of thir position. To continue the debate he insisted would be futile. With a dramatic gesture he appealed to his colleagues to withdraw and take counsel on the next stp.

"The House was somewhat taken aback by this development of the Nationalists, who did not seem unprepared for such a challenge, and hailed it with great rejoicing. Mr. Redmond walked out of the House, and about 60 Irish members filed after him, shouting and cheering as they went. The demonstration would have been more impressive if a few Nationalists as they passed down the floor had abstained from hurling taunts at the Prime Minister and Sir Edward Carson.

"The house on the whole kept its feelings well under control. When the last Nationalist passed through the swing doors Mr. Wardle resumed the debate for the Labour party, and it was continued to a late hour."

Bulbs For Spring Planting

We are through with the planting of bulbs for winter and early spring blooming, but there are delightful ones which may be put in in the spring for summer and early autumn blossoming.

The first that suggest themselves are lilies, which are yoked with roses in tradition and have lent their glory to gardens through all times, having been sung by the poets and loved by gardeners. Not every one can grow all lilies successfully in one garden. They have temperament and some of them will do well in one place and refuse to accommodate themselves in another.

If you can try for only one I should select the exquisite Lilium auratum, the golden rayed lily of Japan. It is one of the double-bulbed lilies and should be planted at least eight inches deep. A peaty soil with sand and leaf mould, well drained, is best for this lily. It should not be exposed entirely to the sun. Indeed, most lilies like partial shade.

More easily cultivated is the speciosum, which has white, orange, and red-spotted varieties and blooms late in August. The Henryi is one of the best lilies for garden culture, and effective for massing. The flower stalks, which rise from three to five feet, carry from five to eight large flowers each of a beautiful shade of yellow with brown spots.

Do not fail to appreciate the tiger lily because it is common. It is so reliable and will send forth its stalks of flowers so unfailingly that it should find a permanent place in the garden. Clumps of tiger lilies look well with delphiniums or other deep blue flowers.

The Hyacinthus candicans has been finding favour in many gardens, although a few who have experimented with it have expressed their disappointment. It is a hardy bulb from South Africa, with spikes of drooping, ivory white, bell shaped flowers. It has been found hardy as far north as Mount Desert, Me.

Probably the most popular gladiolus grown is the America, a rich soft pink, with a deeper rose in the throat. A seedling of the America is the Panama, a charming rose pink with markings of purple deep in the throat. Its sister, the Niagara, has immense yellow flowers, toned with lemon and times with a rose blush on the tips, the throat touched with carmine. Probably the finest white gladiolus is the one named Peace, which has violet marking far within the throat. The flowers keep well in water and the buds will open the entire length of the spike.

The blue and purple gladioli are comparatively new. They are most effective when planted with the yellow and cream shades. The Baron Hulot and are splendid for cutting for the ones of purplish tones. Blue Jay is mauve, the lower petals purple edged with cream. Gladioli are easy to grow and are splendid for cutting for the house. Those which lend themselves to twining around the handles of ornamental baskets or fit in with other flowers are especially prized.

ERNIE MARKS CO.

The old favourites, the Ernie Marks Stock Company, with the strongest caste they have ever offered in Peterborough, opened what promises to be a record five days' run in Peterborough on Tuesday night, delighting all their old friends and making many new ones.

Last night the company pleased a big audience with a clever presentation of the play, "The Girl and the Game," which was admirably staged and acted and which did much to add to the already splendid impression the company has made in this city. Kitty Marks, who plays the leading feminine role, is as charming and capable as ever and the other ladies in the caste give her splendid support. The leading male roles are admirably handled by Norbert E. Dorente and D. D. Benn, while Ernie Marks is responsible for much of the comedy and is as funny as usual.

The specialties are away above the usual standard, which is saying a lot. Neil Benzie, Al. Perren and the Durands are all clever and their work is clean cut and enjoyable.

The company should play to capacity business for the balance of their run.

LIKE ELECTRIC BUTTON ON TOES

Tells why a corn is so painful and says cutting makes them grow

Press an electric button and you form a contact with a live wire which rings the bell. When your shoes press against your corn it pushes its sharp roots down upon a sensitive nerve and you get a shock of pain.

Instead of trimming your corns, which merely makes them grow, just step into any drug store and ask for a quarter of an ounce of freezone. This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. A few drops applied directly upon a tender, aching corn stops the soreness instantly, and soon the corn shrivels up so it lifts right out, root and all, without pain. This drug never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin.

New, Positive Treatment To Remove Hair or Fuzz

(Beauty Notes)

Women are fast learning the value of the use of delatone for removing hair or fuzz from face, neck or arms. A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface. In 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed and every bit of hair has disappeared. No failure will result if you are careful to buy genuine delatone.

PROBE INTO GRAIN PRICES.

Saskatchewan Legislature Asks Dominion Government For Inquiry.

REGINA, Sask., March 7.—Declaring that middlemen and manipulation were causing the spread in grain prices between the East and West, J. K. Johnston, member for Pelly, yesterday in the Legislature dealt at length with the grain prices situation. A resolution was passed by the House asking that a commission be appointed by the Dominion Government to inquire into conditions of agriculture in Canada, and to institute an inquiry concerning the cause of the spread in prices as between East and West, with a view to ascertaining whether a combination of elevator firms or of exporting firms is any factor in said cause.

LABOUR CONDITIONS AS REPORTED TO GAZETTE

The Labour Gazette gives the following report of Labour conditions in Peterborough in January:

At Peterborough the Canadian General Electric Company was very busy on electrical machinery; all other metal and machinery plants were active and there was a good demand for toolmakers, machinists and fitters. Flour and oatmeal mills were working night and day and meat cutters and packers were active. In textiles the woollen mills were working overtime and the carpet factory was stalling new machinery. All the woodworking plants and planing mills reported a good month. Railroads were active, about 100 cars of grain per day passing on the Midland division of the Grand Trunk Railroad. Lumbering operations were not so extensive as in former years; very little lumber was being cut, although a number of jobbers were getting out pulp wood; labour in this line was in demand. At Lindsay employment in the building trades was good. Horn Brothers' Woollen Company was enlarging its plant and in-

GRAND JURY INDICTS HOGUE AS SLAYER OF WINNIPEG DETECTIVE

WINDSOR, March 7.—John Hogue, alias James Steward, was indicted by an Essex County grand jury at Sandwich, for the murder of William Marshall Jackson of Winnipeg, Canadian immigration officer whom he is accused of having shot and killed on the night of January 26, while travelling on a Canadian Pacific train near Windsor depot of the Michigan Central.

Hogue heard the return of the grand jury without a sigh of emotion and gazing about the courtroom as if trying to locate friends. He was well-dressed, clean shaven, and in a clear voice entered a plea of "not guilty" on the advice of his counsel, Barrister F. C. Kerby of Windsor, who was retained by Detroit friends just before the case was called.

Mr. Justice Sutherland did not take kindly to the suggestion of Barrister Kerby that he be given at least 24 hours to prepare Hogue's defense, declaring that it was regrettable that arrangements of the court had been interfered with by something which could very well have been done before.

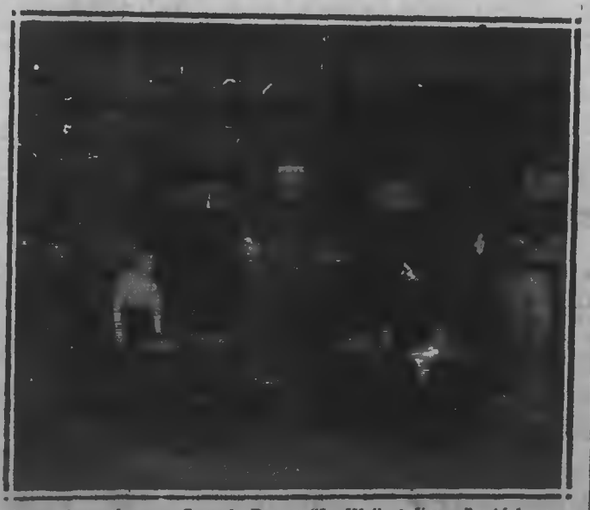
Barrister Kerby declared he had applied at the office of the crown attorney for a copy of evidence taken at the preliminary trial, but said he was unable to obtain the necessary documents. He stated that Hogue had not been able to engage counsel before, indicating that he was without funds.

"If that is the case I will allow you time to look into the evidence in possession of the crown prosecutor." Justice Sutherland said, "and I will schedule the trial for Wednesday morning at 9.30 o'clock. In the event of the crown prosecutor and yourself coming to an agreement, the trial may be brought on in the morning."

In charging the grand jury Justice Sutherland explained the various degrees of murder, and instructed the members that, if the evidence presented by the crown justified such action, they might reduce the indictment to manslaughter.

THE WEATHER

Dawson City, with 58 degrees below zero, was the lowest point touched by the thermometer in Canada during the month of February. A few other cold figures are: Edmonton, 50 below; Winnipeg, 34 below; Qu'Appelle, 42 below; White River, 50 below; Huntsville, 38 below; Haliburton, 40 below, and Kimsount, 42 below. These are all official figures. Victoria, B.C., had 11 inches of snow, while Vancouver reported 32 inches. The snow in these two places seldom remains long. The western provinces are this winter covered with a heavy mantle of white; in fact all Canada, with the exception of some portions of Nova Scotia, and some small sections of British Columbia, have been continuously snow-covered this winter. The greatest depth is in some sections of northern Ontario and Quebec, where in places it lies 50 inches deep.—W.P.



Scene from the new Comedy-Drama "In Walked Jimmy" which comes to "The Grand" next Monday, March 12. The seat sale opens to-morrow (Friday) morning at 10 o'clock.

REFERRING TO THE APPEARANCE OF THE ABOVE PRODUCTION AT "HIS MAJESTY'S" THEATRE, MONTREAL, THE HERALD OF FEBRUARY 27, SAYS:

When the moral of a play is so forceful as to send an audience home with an inspiration to emulate its teachings, then the stage is fulfilling its highest mission, and the purpose of the play has been realized. And the fact that practically everybody left His Majesty's Theatre last night after witnessing the performance of "In Walked Jimmy," with a smile on their faces and the determination in their minds to keep on smiling, even in the face of adversity, is evidence that they caught the infection of Jimmy's smiling countenance, his irrepressible spirit, his confident optimism, his sound philosophy and his forceful business principles.

If a play can win disciples, then it is a great play—and "In Walked Jimmy" is a great play in this respect, and Mrs. P. H. Joffa has achieved a triumph in her book for seldom has a production the power to force its way into the hearts of a people as has this play of smiles. The play is about smiles; it made smiles; it sustained smiles; and emphasized the teaching that a smile could make the rough places smooth, and bring the sunshine from behind the clouds.

IDEAS OF LABOUR COUNCIL RE GREATER PRODUCTION WILL BE PRESENTED TO FINANCE COM.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, President of the Trades and Labour Council stated this morning that the working men are reserving their ideas until they meet in conference with the Finance Committee. It is important, Mr. Hartley observed that not only must the vacant land be secured but also the workers, and that there must be no loose ends lying around to prevent the scheme reaching its fullest effect.

ANOTHER IDEA

Mr. M. J. Maher, who is also interested in the movement suggested that when the plans are being mapped out the city especially in the outlying sections might be considered in its subdivision for the municipal elections. The residents in each section could get together and thus there avoid waste of energy. Mr. Maher felt that if a spirit of co-operation could be aroused this summer, it might be applied even this year to the long desired improvement of the residential streets, and particularly would the way be opened to concerted effort next year.

MUST FACE FACTS.

One of the C.P.R. land officials speaking of the big movement for production in Montreal counselled against too much hopefulness as to the results of the campaign. He had no doubts about the success of the working of back gardens, but when vacant lots were planted there was the danger of the produce being stolen. It is regrettable that such a consideration should have to be taken into account, but if land on the outskirts of the city should be planted it is without the protection of the Vigilance committee, who may be depended to guard the city plots planted.

FARMER KEPT HIS CATTLE BETTER THAN HIS CHILDREN

Mr. Spence Visited Harvey Farm and Reported Conditions Worst He and Mr. A. Moore Had Ever Seen.

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, agent for the Children's Aid Society, accompanied by County Constable Moore, visited a home in Harvey a few days ago, where they found conditions, of which they both said were the worst they had ever seen. Outwardly, the house and barns appeared to be the home of a fairly prosperous farmer. There were twenty-six head of cattle on the place, but it was manifest that they had received more care than the farmer's children. In the words of the officers, there was scarcely anything in the house, and one little boy was wearing only a suit of overalls. The sleeping quarters were filthy, and a little girl who returned from school while the officers were at the home, would have been more comfortable with a bag of the camphor on her person the soldiers at the front use. It is understood that Mr. Spence is considering the advisability of bringing this farmer before County Magistrate Langley, and might ask that the children be made wards of the Society.

Bryant, Dunn & Company's closing letter:

New York, March 7.—Early strength in stocks with new high prices for some of the leaders was followed by a moderate setback shortly before noon, in connection with German reports that their submarines returning this week reported sinking a great deal of tonnage. They did not, however, mention the time in which this occurred. Most submarines stay out one to two weeks. The market rallied again but was irregular during most of the session. We think stocks acted extremely well, considering the amount of profit taking. This afternoon advices came from Washington purporting to say that President Wilson is advised by counsel that he can arm merchant ships, without seeking the approval of Congress. It was intimated that he would act very soon. Traders were somewhat nervous as to what effect it would have on stocks. Considering that bad news has generally been ignored, it would appear that action to protect our shipping would be favourably regarded even though it might result in a clash at sea. Business conditions continue highly favourable. It was reported that the Government is quietly letting large contracts for supplies and the rising prices seem to bear out this view. Continue to buy good stocks on moderate setbacks.

TOWN TOPICS.

There is nothing in the news this morning to quell the ardor of the bulls, or dissipate the fear of the bears that they have overstayed their market. The short interest is large still and quite stubborn. There is nothing for it to do but keep on retreating. When shorts have quite covered and earlier buyers take profits in plenty will be time enough to speak of the chances for any really material reaction, unless of course there be some unusual development of the terror striking variety. War with Germany or Mexico, or both, would not be such for the time being, at least, we trust not ever. The Rubber and Pennsylvania statements are two splendid documents, the former likely to have real market influence. Reports of a big deal by Great Northern Ore is significant of the times. Iron ore, Iron and Coal are the things this year in an industrial line that are bound to make money. Pittsburg Coal is well bought. The Steel group generally is cheap. Va Coals advance shows how little stock there is afloat. It should do better. Coppers are still cheap. Central Leather is in the hands of a strong pool that expects to take it up ten points or so, in a jiffy. We would have some. Steel foundries seem about ready for a fly-away performance, cheap stock having been absorbed. Beet Sugar should do better. Crucible should be watched for a big rise. Car Foundry and Locomotive issues are all right and Republic Steel is essentially a bargain. Rails will be taken up when the eight-hour law matter is adjusted. Independence Lead is ready for a big rise on the Curb. We look for further strength for a day or two. Protecting profits on bulges in Grains and Cotton may be wise.

Gerard Warns of Panama Canal Plot

NEW YORK, March 7.—Carl Ackerman, with the Gerard party on the Isobel, wirelesses that the vessel has changed her course to avoid possibility of attack by raiders. He hears that the ex-Ambassador is slated for the War Secretaryship. Mr. Gerard is said to have warned Washington of a plot against the Panama Canal.

Should Increase Crops of Oats and Beans This Year

TORONTO, March 7.—Dr. C. A. Zavitz, of the Ontario Agricultural College, gave a lecture this morning before the Agricultural Committee of the Parliament Buildings on suggestions for improved crop production for the coming season. He showed that it was necessary to get the right class of material to get a larger crop, and that, owing to the scarcity of labour, the farmers should economize on labour as much as possible.

He suggested that preparations for the coming season should be made before the snow disappears, and recommended that better crops could be obtained by planting seed grown in the locality.

He advocated a greater production of beans throughout Ontario, and also of peas. Regarding oats, he pointed out there was need for a greater production of that for horses and for oatmeal. This crop was valued at $50,000,000, and was double the market value of products from cheese factories and creameries combined, and it was worth half the combined value of the live stock in Ontario.

Potatoes gave a better yield, he declared, when the seed used was the immature potato, which had not been able to get its full growth, and that the more immature the potato the larger the yield. The seed potatoes should be got from Ontario, and he believed that there were plenty of seed potatoes here.

British Contracts In United States To Be Finished Soon

NEW YORK, March 7.—Inquiries among local manufacturers of munitions yesterday failed to confirm reports heard on Sunday that the British Government would close out unfinished contracts on March 31. As far as could be learned, the unfilled orders will be carried through to completion, except for a few, perhaps, which contained cancellation clauses when they were signed.

A survey of the munition situation indicates that there are not many important orders placed here by England for the use of her own armies, which have not been completed for the most part. The odds and ends of shrapnel and fuse orders probably will be filled before midsummer. This applies only to English contracts. The Bethlehem Steel Corporation is working on a Russian order estimated at $90,000,000 worth of shells, and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and the Remington Arms-Union Metallic Cartridge Company have still to finish big rifle contracts for the Czar's armies.

The Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company, the Remington Arms-Union Metallic Company, and the Winchester Repeating Arms Company made a special arrangement two months ago with the British authorities in regard to rifle contracts. It was announced then that the work would be carried forward under the immediate direction of British army experts, and as the companies had fallen behind in deliveries, it was indicated that extra time would be allowed for the work. As far as can be learned, the rifles will not all be ready by the end of this month, and their manufacture will be continued.

The American Locomotive Company expects to complete the last of its shrapnel orders within a few weeks. Afterward all its shell business will be conducted, in Canada by the Montreal Locomotive Works. Great Britain has placed no new orders here for many months, and manufacturers took it for granted as long ago as last July that the bulk of munition making on this continent would thereafter go to Canada.

Belgian Industries Are to Be Shut Down

AMSTERDAM, March 8.—The Telegraaf says there will be an almost complete stoppage of industry in Belgium within a few days, the German authorities asserting that this is necessary owing to the lack of coal and transport facilities. Practically the entire population of Belgium will be thus unemployed, with such few exceptions as receive special permission from the civil authorities to continue their businesses.

Policeman Meets Death in Hotel

Demonstrates "Safety" of His Gun With Fatal Results—Daniel A. Stewart Sends Bullet into Brain—Companions Were Arrested

WINDSOR, March 8.—Daniel A. Stewart, 48 years old, recently employed by the Grand Trunk Railway as a special officer, and for several years a member of the Windsor fire department, was found dead in a room in the Wabash Hotel, corner of Brush and Atwater streets, Detroit, a bullet through his head. An empty automatic revolver lay at his feet. Alex Sova and Charles Slaght, two other Grand Trunk employees, both of this city, who had been with Stewart a part of the night, were seen leaving the hotel immediately following the sound of the shot, and were placed under arrest on suspicion of having knowledge of the crime.

Was Demonstrating Gun.

A rigid investigation by detectives, resulted in the complete exoneration of Slaght and Sova, it being determined that Stewart's death was the result of an accident. The man had apparently been exhibiting his gun to his friends, and to prove its trustworthiness, with the safety catch on, fired at his own head. In some way the safety device failed to operate promptly, and the bullet crashed through Stewart's head, killing him instantly.

Was on Force Here.

Daniel Stewart was some ten or twelve years ago a member of the London police force and was a patrolman here for some time.

Hector Stewart of Belmont, a brother, was notified of the detective's death in Detroit.

THINKS ARMSTRONG BEST PLAYER IN O.H.A.

The Hamilton Herald says:

George C. Dawson, of Sarnia, a member of the O.H.A. committee, was a spectator at Tuesday night's game. He is making the rounds of the towns where the championships are being decided.

During a conversation after the game he voiced the opinion that Bobby Armstrong, the Peterborough centre player, who was unable, owing to injuries, to play here last Friday night, is the best player in the O.H.A.

"He is fast, has a wicked shot, and everything else that goes to make a real star. He is not quite as speedy as Box, of the Dentals, but I regard him as the best boy in the O.H.A.," said Mr. Dawson.

There is no better posted hockey man in the province, so there must be something to what the Sarnia official says:

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Hamilton Herald says: Hamilton Hockey club has a nice five-goal lead to work on in Kitchener on Friday night, but they must not run away with the idea that they already have a strangle hold on the championship. Peterborough apparently had the Hams down and out last Friday night, but the locals came back and nosed them out. The same thing is liable to happen in Kitchener, so it behooves the Hams to pay strict attention to business.

Fortunately Hamilton came out of the struggle unmarked, and will be quite fit for the final effort on Friday night. There will be no changes with the possible exception of at left wing. Alex. Murray may replace Grant McEwen, but this is even doubtful. The officials do not deem it wise to allow Murray to take a chance of getting his injured eye battered in again, and are quite pleased with the manner in which McEwen has been attending to the duties. Kitchener, although defeated Tuesday night, are not yet out of the running. We hope and believe that they will be after Friday night's final game, but it is realized that they will be hard to beat on their own ice. The players of the visiting team were quite confident last night that they would overhaul the red shirts, just as the Hams did to Peterborough.

Kitchener brought down close to 200 supporters, but they were so much scattered about the arena that they didnt make much noise when the visitores scored their three goals. The Kitchener crowd also brought along considerable money and left some of it here. They offered 6 to 5 on the round, but would only bet on Tuesday's game when given a margin of three goals.

A Friendly Game.

The rink was rather quiet last night with the exception of a game in which Tom Brightman bet F. M. Dela Fosse the cigars he wouldn't touch the chalk, and Dela Fosse counted up 10 to Brightman's 11, losing by only one shot. The rinks were as follows:

W. B. Warnie	H. Dearle

OTTAWA, March 7.—Col. S. C. Mewburn, assistant adjutant-general for Militia District No. 2 and Col. C. S. McInnes, first assistant adjutant-general at militia headquarters here, conferred with Sir George Foster today. It is understood that the subject under discussion was the reorganization of the Canadian militia, which, it has been officially intimated, is under consideration. None of the parties to the conference was willing to afford any information regarding it. They all stated that the plans for filling the ranks of the militia, which have been depleted by enlistments for overseas service, had not yet been matured. Sir Edward Kemp is in Toronto, and no announcement will be made until after his return to the capital.

Carter Kept Sofa For Moving Furniture

When Thomas Hubel, a carter, moved the household effects of Mrs. Elizabeth Steele, he presented a bill for $5. Mrs. Steele was willing to pay what she believed a fair price, but $5 was considerably beyond her figure. Hence, Hubel kept a sofa and sold it for $5. Hubel claimed that it took him 15 hours to remove the goods, but Chief Thompson was informed that there was only a small quantity in the whole lot. Mrs. Steel had thought $1.50 or $2.00 sufficient for the work. It is understood that she supports herself by knitting socks and selling them.

In police court this morning it was agreed that Hubel should return the sofa and that Mrs. Steele pay him $3.

FARMER CHARGED WITH SEDITION

The Accused was Committed for Trial—Bail Allowed

GUELPH, March 8.—For the first time in the history of the County a citizen appeared before Magistrate Watt yesterday, charged with sedition. The name of the accused is Alexander Stewart, a Canadian-born citizen of Scotch parentage, fifty-two years old, a prosperous and highly-respected citizen of the Township of Minto, about a mile from the town of Harriston. He was given a preliminary hearing and committed for trial at the coming Spring Assizes.

The alleged offence was committed at the public market place at Harriston on Thursday, Feb. 1. The chief witness was Mr. John Rowland of Walkerton, a well-known drover, and there was but one other person present, a young farmer named Pridham. The following is the text of the charge laid against Stewart: "That on February 1st, at Harriston, he spoke seditious words with intent to cause dissatisfaction and discontent among his Majesty's subjects, and promote public disorder, to wit, when referring to a certain load of old rags then present. 'No doubt they'll make them up for clothes for the soldiers (meaning thereby the soldiers of the Crown), and it's too damn good for them at that.' Then referring to the soldiers he is alleged to have said: 'They are only a lot of bums and loafers and I have to help keep them,' and further, in reply to a question as to what he had done, 'I would not send any of my sons to fight for England,' and further, in answer to the question to him whether he did not know that England had protected him and given him all the liberties and freedom he had and that he ought to be ashamed to talk so, he said, referring to the said soldiers, 'I can fight my own battles and get along without the Old Country or any of the soldiers helping me because they are no good.'"

Stewart admitted saying some of the things attributed to him, but declared that he had reference in his remarks to some who had enlisted around Harriston, whom he said were anything but creditable to the town. Stewart was released on substantial bail being given.

TO MINT MEXICAN COINS.

Carranza Said to be Sending $20,000,000 in Gold Bars.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—Financial agents of the Mexican Government, it was learned here, have made inquiry at the Philadelphia Mint regarding prices and facilities for minting Mexican gold coins. Within the last ten days a representative of Stallforth & Co., New York, bankers, asked the price per thousand pieces for coining cinco pesos, $5 gold pieces. He was told the mint could manufacture 60,000 pieces a week. The price was not made public.

Authority to do the work must come from the director of the mint at Washington. It was said at the mint that unofficial information had reached there that master dies, made at the Philadelphia Mint for the Mexican Government ten years ago, are on the way here. It was reported that Rafael Nieto of the Mexican Treasury is bringing $20,000,000 in gold bars here, but nothing was known of this at the mint.

Turks Preparing To Leave the City of Bagdad

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 9. — General Maude's British forces are prepared to enter the city of Bagdad. Turks are removing their stores from the city. The Russians are pressing on to join the British at Bagdad.

Bagdad, singularly enough, has been long known as Dar-es-Selam (city of peace.) During the last few weeks it has been menaced in two directions by allied forces —by the British pushing forward from the south and from the Russian forces of Grand Duke Nicholas, who are now around Hamadan to the west of the Turkish city.

If Bagdad falls, the victory will be a tremendous blow at Turkish prestige. This city is the very centre of Arabic tradition, having been founded early in the eighth century. It has remained unbrokenly Arabic and Turkish through all the centuries since that time, except for a brief period in the thirteenth century, when the Mongols seized it. Bagdad is where the famous Haroun Al Raschid, famed in song and story, once held forth.

The Dardanelles Inquiry Brings Warm Criticisms On the War Council

Commission Finds Kitchener Responsible For Three Weeks' Delay in Despatching Troops—Undertook Too Much Personally—Result Was Confusion and Inefficiency

WAR LORD FAVOURED THE NAVAL CAMPAIGN

LONDON, March 9. — Upon the late Lord Kitchener, England's idol, and the early War Council, was fixed the blame for England's Dardanelles expedition. A special investigating committee, appointed in response to Parliamentary inquiries and complaints as to the costly experiment against Turkey, made this report yesterday.

"Although the main object of the expedition was not attained," the report concluded, "certain important political advantages were secured by the expedition. Whether these were worth the loss of life and treasure involved, must always remain a matter of opinion."

Discussing the responsibility for the step, the report adjudged Lord Kitchener responsible for three weeks' delay in despatching troops to the Dardanelles, thereby "gravely compromising the probability of success."

Undertook Too Much.

The commission held also that Kitchener did "not sufficiently utilize the services of the general staff, resulting in confusion and lack of efficiency."

Censure was expressed at the War Council's failure to hold a meeting between March 19 and May 14, 1915, and discussed Winston Churchill's advocacy, as First Lord of the Admiralty, for purely naval expeditionary forces.

"Lord Kitchener," the report continues, "favoured a purely naval attack. The commissioners think the First Lord of the Admiralty (then Winston Churchill), the Premier (then Mr. Asquith), and other Councillors, should have required the naval advisors to submit clearly expressed views regarding the practicability of the plan."

Church Initiated Scheme.

The Dardanelles expedition, as far as Great Britain was concerned, was undertaken on the initiative of Col. Winston Spencer Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, according to the majority report. The report summarizes the conclusions reached as follows:

"The question of attacking the Dardanelles was, on the initiative of Mr. Churchill, brought under the consideration of the War Council on November 25, 1914, as the ideal method of defending Egypt. It may reasonably be assumed that inasmuch as all the authorities concerned were prima facie in favour of a joint military rather than a purely naval attack, such an attack, if undertaken at all, would have been of the former rather than of the latter character, had not other circumstances led to a modification of the programme. A communication from the Russian Government of January 2, introduced a fresh element into the case. The British Government considered that something must be done in response to it, and in this connection the question of attacking the Dardanelles was again raised.

Should Have Made Inquiries.

"The Secretary of State for War declared that there were no troops immediately available for operations in the East, and his statement was accepted by the War Council, who took no steps to satisfy themselves by reports of estimates as to what troops were available then or in the near future. Had this been done the commissioners think it would have been ascertained that sufficient troops would be available for a joint military and naval operation at an earlier date than supposed, but this matter was not adequately investigated by the War Council. Thus the question before the War Council on January 13 was whether no action of any kind should for the time being be undertaken, or whether action should be taken by the fleet alone, the navy being held to be the only force available."

Political Arguments Counted.

"Political arguments which were adduced to the War Council in favour of prompt and effective action, if such were practicable, were valid and of the highest importance, but the practicability of whatever action was proposed was of equal importance. Mr. Churchill appears to have advocated an attack by ships alone before the War Council on a certain amount of half-hearted and hesitating expert opinion which favoured a tentative or progressive scheme, beginning with an attack upon the outer forts.

"This attack, if successful, was to be followed by further operations against the main defences of The Narrows. There does not appear to have been direct support or direct opposition from the responsible naval and military advisers, Lord Fisher and Sir James Wolfe Murray, as to the practicability of carrying on the operations as approved by the War Council, viz., to bombard and take the Gallipoli Peninsula, with Constantinople as the objective.

Naval Experts Did Not Object.

"The First Sea Lord and Sir Arthur Wilson, who was the only adviser present at the War Council, expressed no dissent. Lord Kitchener, who occupied a commanding position at the time the decision was taken, was in favour of the project. Both Lord Fisher and Sir Arthur Wilson would have preferred a joint naval and military attack, but they did not express to the War Council, and were not asked to express, any opinion on the subject, and offered no objection to the naval operations, as they considered them experimental and as such could be discontinued if the first results obtained were not satisfactory. The commissioners think that there was an obligation, first, on the First Lord, secondly, on the Prime Minister, thirdly, on one other member of the War Council, to see that the views of the naval advisers were clearly put before the Council, and that the naval advisers should have expressed their views to the Council, whether asked or not, if they considered the project which the Council was about to adopt was impracticable from a naval point of view."

War Council Not Justified.

"Looking at the position which existed on January 13, 1915, the commissioners do not think the War Council were justified in coming to the decision without much fuller investigation of the proposition which had been suggested to them. The commissioners hold that the possibility of making a surprise amphibious attack on Gallipoli offered such great military and political advantage that it was mistaken and ill-advised to sacrifice this possibility by deciding to undertake a purely naval attack which from its nature could not obtain completely the object set out in the terms of the decision.

"The decision taken on the 16th to mass troops in the neighbourhood of the Dardanelles marked a very critical stage of the whole operation. It ought to have been clear that when this was once done, even if troops were not actually landed, it would be apparent was intended, and a withattack was intended, and a withdrawal could no longer be effected without running serious risk of loss of prestige. At that moment, as time was all important, no compromise was possible between making an immediate and vigorous effort to ensure success at the Dardanelles by joint naval and military occupation, and falling back on the original intention of desisting from a naval attack, if the experiences gained during the bombardment were unsatisfactory.

Despatch of Troops Delayed.

"On Febraury 20th Lord Kitchener decided that the Twenty-ninth Division, part of the troops which by the decision of February 16 were to be sent to the east, should not be sent at that time, and Col. Fitzgerald instructed the director of naval transport that transports for that division and the rest of the expeditionary force would not be required.

"This was done without informing the First Lord, and the despatch of troops was thus delayed three weeks. This delay greatly compromised the probability of success of the original attack by land forces, and materially increased the difficulties encountered in the final attack some months later.

"We consider that in view of the opinion expressed by the naval and military authorities on the spot, the decision to abandon the naval attack after the bombardment of March 18 was inevitable. There was no meeting of the War Council between March 19 and May 14. Meanwhile important land operations were undertaken. We think that before

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Investigation Shows No Shortage Potatoes

Hon. Martin Burrell Conducted Enquiry Which Revealed Fact That There is Sufficient For Use and Large Surplus for Export—What About Excessive Price?

ONLY ONTARIO SUFFERS

There are plenty of potatoes in the Dominion. So many, in fact, that there are two million bushels for export when the average annual export has been only 1,130,000 bushels. This was made clear yesterday when the Hon. Mr. Burrell was asked for further information about the alleged shortage. What, then, is to be done to bring down the price to normal on the Ottawa and other Ontario markets?

Shortage Story Upset.

A few weeks ago there was a report in circulation that there was grave danger of a shortage of seed potatoes in the Dominion and that unless some strong step was taken the country would face a crisis so far as this very necessary commodity was concerned. It was stated that many farmers had lost caution in cupidity and had sold those potatoes they were keeping for seed.

Hon. Mr. Burrell got into touch with all the Ministers of Agriculture of the Provinces, and with all the business men and trading centres not only in Canada but on the American side also along the border.

The very first returns they received showed that there were no grounds for fear, and when all their inquiries had been completed they found that there was far from being any scarcity of potatoes in the Dominion. In fact, as Mr. Burrell stated, there is an abundance of potatoes yet for export over and above all that are required for home consumption and for seed purposes. Mr. Burrell says that from the very latest information he has secured, and that takes in the communication which he received on the subject up to yesterday there are in the Dominion no less than from one and a half to two million bushels of potatoes over and above the domestic requirements. The Minister of Agriculture emphasized that this was a "very conservative" estimate. When securing his information he asked for conservative estimates, and so when he states that this is the quantity in sight for export it may be understood that when the actual figures of sale come to be registered the estimate will be far below the realization.

Made Careful Estimate.

To secure data concerning quantities of potatoes is much more difficult than to collect facts concerning grain. It is an almost impossible task to compile figures regarding the quantity which individual farmers have in their "pits" but the estimate has been made locality by locality as carefully as anything of the kind can be done, and every commercial source available was also sought for its information.

It may be said that the members of the New Brunswick Potato Exchange, who were in Ottawa the other day, gave their estimate of the potatoes in the country over and above what is required for seed and food as 2,400,000 bushels, which shows how conservative is the estimate of the Minister of Agriculture.

Only Ontario Suffers.

Mr. Burrell has arrived at the interesting conclusion that the only province in which there may be a shortage of potatoes is Ontario, but he will not declare definitely that there is a shortage even in it. It is impossible to say how many potatoes are being held by farmers. However, the full extent of the shortage, if there is one, is not more than half a million bushels. Now New Brunswick alone has a surplus of more than that. The lowest estimate of the surplus in New Brunswick which Mr. Burrell has received is 750,000 bushels. It is probably about a million.

Blame Car Shortage.

The shortage in Ontario brings forward two interesting questions—the price, and what is to be done to relieve the shortage in Ontario.

As to price, Mr. Burrell was very emphatic in talking to The Journal. He mentioned that in some of the cities of the United States the price had risen to $7.50 a barrel. "That is far above the food value," he commented. "Potatoes are simply a luxury at that price."

Then as to the shortage in Ontario, he was asked by The Journal if anything was being done by the authorities to bring in a supply. "Doubtless," he replied, "the Ontario authorities are watching the situation so that they will be taking care that they get some potatoes where there is a surplus. Probably a lot more eastern potatoes would have found their way into Ontario if it had not been for the car shortage."

Rocky Path Indicated For The Government

Henceforth, Premier Lloyd George Will Find Himself, Like President Wilson, Confronted With a Band of Wilful Men in the House of Commons

NATIONAL SERVICE OPPOSED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 9.—Henceforth Premier Lloyd-George will find himself, like President Wilson, confronted with a band of "wilful" men in the House of Commons.

The decision of the Irish members to oppose the Lloyd-George ministry in all matters save the prosecution of the war, was universally accepted by the public to-day as indicating a rocky path for the Government from now on.

Editorial criticism of the ministry, which has heretofore been withheld, began showing to-day. Even some editors heretofore enthusiastically supporting Lloyd-George have declared cautiously that some features of the previous ministers might well be approved against the newer procedure.

In addition to criticism of the Government's stand on the Irish question, the National Service scheme fathered by Neville Chamberlain is under heavy fire editorially.

LONDON SHORT OF COAL AND SUGAR EGGS AND FLOUR

By Lady Mary.

LONDON. — We are really learning the hardships of war time in London at last. Up to the end of 1916, We talked about it and wondered what it would be like. Now that we are well launched into the eighteenth year of the twentieth century, we are samplin some of the practical results of these troublesome times.

Coal and eggs, sugar and flour seem to be the chief miseries of the moment and speaking from the purely domestic point of view and leaving outside the broader question of national economics, I can assure you that the ordinary well to do family is having a rather hard time of it in London.

HAUL COAL IN TAXICABS.

I remember an old song that had a refrain about men who were digging dusky diamonds down beneath the ground," and really coal seems almost as difficult to obtain as the most sparkling jewels that were ever set in a crown of beauty.

Taxicabs such as can be obtained, are hired by the most elegant looking people who embark upon a tour of the various coal depots in and around London begging that they may be allowed to take a couple of sacks of fuel on board in order to "keep the home fires burning."

Private motor cars are also no infrequent coal carriers these days, and just this week I saw a large private horse drawn omnibus such as used to be used for conveying servants and luggage to trains in peace times with its interior occupied by sacks of coal.

GREAT DEED NOBLY DONE.

On a box seat beside a soiled looking driver was a most immaculately attired and distinguished looking old gentleman who had obviously been trying his apprentice hand at coal shifting. Both master and man however radiated an atmosphere of conscious pride as in a great deed nobly done.

I can imagine that ancient gentleman being received within his lordly mansion by a cold bitten wife and family, who would at once greet him as a her onworth owning in a family circle.

He had brought home the coal and no man who is not fighting or putting up money for the war loan could possibly be expected to do more, except perhaps procuring a few extra pounds of sugar.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE DEVIL CARES FOR HIS OWN.

In the meantime Mr. Deputy Sheriff Harper was having a series of disappointments.

The first thing he did was to learn in a quiet way that Bagshot and his party were yet guests at the Menger Hotel. This gave him great satisfaction, taking away his only fear, though never having seen any of the trio he could not identify the men, and kept wondering if they were among the numerous characters who lounged in and out of the building.

As soon as he had washed away the grime of his journey he found his way to the jail only to find that Sheriff Thorp would not be in town till the following day, he being in chase of a criminal who had fled into an adjoining county.

This was Harper's first set-back. He decided to inform Wentworth of the hitch in his plans and to consult him as to the wisdom of awaiting Thorp's return, or by demanding assistance from a lesser authority, proceed without him.

But to his surprise in the face of the admonition to remain in-doors, Wentworth was out, and had neither left word as to where he was going nor when he would return and Harper, not dreaming that his friend's absence would be protracted, decided to wait. Taking off his coat, he threw himself on the cool wicker lounge in Wentworth's room and fell asleep with a promptness that was not remarkable considering his lack of rest on the train the night before.

When he awoke it was pitch dark. Striking a match he looked at his watch and, discovering it was past nine, he could hardly realize the flight of time. And Wentworth had not returned.

Scribbling a hasty note which he left on the table, Harper went back to the Menger Hotel and was seized with something like consternation on discovering that no word had come from his friend.

He was now certain that something had happened and his mind naturally turned to Bagshot and Planet as the cause of his companion's sudden disappearance. Wentworth was not the man to be beguiled by one of the blatant and open dives that liberally besprinkled San Antonio. He had not been lured away by viciousness—that idea was nonsensical.

Being a total stranger there was but one thing for Harper to do—and that to appeal to the police. For some time he hesitated at taking the step even returning to Wentworth's hotel, but finding him still absent, in deep worry he set out for the jail once more. Entering the dimly lighted and barren room he accosted the half-dressed man who sat with his feet cocked on the pine desk.

"A friend of mine has disappeared from his hotel. I am getting anxious about him. Can anything be done to find him? He is a stranger here, so am I."

"Where's he from?" asked the man slowly taking his feet down and flicking the ash from his cigar.

"From New York."

"New York, hey! What name?"

"John Wentworth."

"Tall chap? Broad shoulders, with a dinky mustache an' a lot of hot talk?"

Harper looked at the fellow in astonishment.

"I think you refer to the man I mean. What do you know of him?"

The officer reached for a dilapidated book lying on the desk and opened it running a dirty finger down the page.

"Wentworth, John. New York. Arrived from Galveston this afternoon. Tourist, he calls himself. Yaas! that is him! I think we have your friend in the cooler, stranger."

"What has he done?"

"Charged by a greaser. Assault, intent to kill. This here town has got to be kept peaceful, stranger! Case may come up to-morrow, sometime, ef the judge ain't too busy."

Harper was stunned.

"Can I see him?" he asked.

"Not on your life—at this hour. Come in about sunup. Ye wouldn't disturb a man's sleep would you?"

"I think he would be glad to be disturbed by me."

"Well, he won't be. Ye needn't be worrying about him bein' lost no more—he's safe enough!"

"Can't I bail him out?"

"Probably — to-morrer; that the judge's business, not mine."

Harper fairly staggered from the place. What had Wentworth done? What would be the result of this? A greaser! He stopped in his walk as light came to him. Had Wentworth tried to capture Planet single-handed?

He did not sleep that night, and early the next morning he was at the jail though it was nearly ten o'clock before he was admitted to his friend. As the turnkey was about to unlock the door Harper asked him if Sheriff Thorp had yet arived.

"No, sir! but we expect him back shortly. Had a phone from him late last night. He got his man."

"Ah!" Harper took a bill from his pocket and held it out to his conductor. "Will you take this and let me know as soon as he arrives? I wish to see him."

The turnkey looked a bit suspicious, but took the bill. "Who shall I say wants him?" he asked.

"Deputy Sheriff Harper of New York."

The expression of indifference fell like a mask from the fellow's face.

"Yaas, sir, certain'— sir; I'll let you know at once, sir; you was gave an hour in here but you can stay as long as you like. Yes, sir." And he swung open the door.

Fortunately Wentworth had been untroubled by a companion. Hag gard-eyed, dirty and disheveled, he saw Harper enter and his rage burst forth. Briefly he told his story, leaving out the warmth of his interview with the young lady his big friend listening with mingled feelings of anger and relief.

"Why in the name of common sense did you not send for me at once?" he asked.

"Send for you! I did—by the man who arrested me—and wondered why you did not come! I gave the scoundrel two dollars."

"You were probably outbid by Planet. I'll make it hot for that Alamo chap—if we have the time; for this thing will hurry them. But, thank Heaven, it is no worse! I've imagined horrible things! Have patience, Jack, it will soon be all right! No one but a fool will believe Planet's story, and when the sheriff comes the thing will be set straight in a jiffy. They are here and we will have them!"

"And, have you seen—"

"No, my son; not to be sure of her. There are several beauties at the hotel and—"

"Never mind your nonsense," interrupted Wentworth, who was not to be chaffed into good humour. By the Lord, I'd almost sacrifice Bagshot to get hold of Planet!—where we would not be disturbed."

"And would you also sacrifice Miss Merridale's interest—to say nothing of the lady herself?"

"I've been an ass!" was the disgusted rejoinder.

"In what way, Jack? Not regarding her?"

Wentworth looked seriously at his big friend. "Perhaps you would think so if you knew. No, I did not refer to her. Quite the contrary that is the only part of the day I am proud of!"

"I grope, Jack."

"Well, I haven't been honest, Tom. She was and is the crux of the matter. It is she I find I am chasing. I fess cold. I'm in the race for her—and now she knows it. I told her—and by all that's holy I'm going to get her and relieve her and myself of the two villains who have outraged and robbed both of us. If you must have it—I love her!"

Harper bent forward and reached out his hand. "I congratulate you, old man, but the last is no news to me, however!" He was interrupted by the door being opened by the turnkey.

"Sheriff Thorp just arrived this minute, sir. He is in front of the jail now, if you want to see him you had better take your chance while you can get it."

Harper waited for no more. He jumped up, running out of the cell, and so into the jail office in time to see a mounted man swing himself from his horse and enter the building. Covered with dust he was dressed after the fashion of the traditional cowboy and conspicuously armed with two revolvers. Harper went straight up to him as he entered the office.

"This is Sheriff Thorp?"

"Yes, sir," was the answer given with a snap.

"I am Deputy Sheriff Harper of New York. I have a letter for you, and wish to have a talk with you as soon as possible."

As he spoke he looked sharply at the Texan and saw a stocky man of about his own age whose face was deeply tanned, and whose hair and small moustache had been faded by long exposure to the burning sun until they had the tint of hay. The whole color of the man was faded, but through this neutral tint there shone a pair of lively black eyes that commanded instant attention. Harper considered him a large copy of Bunsen, only more nervous, more intense, and entirely lacking in the latter's boyish expression and height of color. Thorp seemed to take in the New Yorker with a flash of his eye.

"Very good, sir. I'll see you within ten minutes, and give you all the time you require. Please step into this room."

In the meantime Wentworth was waiting. He sat unmoving on the edge of the board which had been his bed. His spirit was not in the least broken by his hard experience but the anger that still gnawed at his heart was now largely directed against himself. Harper had been gone for two hours and high noon had struck. The impatient was wondering what had become of his chum when he heard a heavy footstep accompanied by the clank of spurs coming down the stone corridor, and in a moment Harper entered with Sheriff Thorp. The latter went straight to the prisoner and held out his hand.

"I'm Sheriff Thorp," he began quite abruptly and without waiting for Harper to speak. "I have become a little familiar with your case, sir. It is interesting from the start, and you have been outraged. There's going to be a damned hot time in this ranch over your affair, when I can see to it. Sharp dodge on the greaser's part! Quick wit, I must say! But I've got to hang to the letter of the law an' get you out in the regular way. I reckon you'll be free as soon as court sits—say about three o'clock. In the meantime, Mr. Harper and me will jest walk over to a hotel on a little matter o' business—though I have an idee—I have an idee!"

He stopped and drew his brows together as though in deep thought. "I will have to get you out of here anyway," he went on abruptly. "Come up stairs to my room. You'll stay there until out of limbo. Great pity Bunsen couldn't ha' come with you—great pity! Come on, sir."

There was a burst of spontaneity about the man that carried Wentworth before it. He felt that here was competency and that with such a backing he could obtain both justice and revenge. Revenge! Wentworth was only human, and he was still suffering.

It was nearly three o'clock and San Antonio, no longer entirely wedded to ancient customs, was coming early out of siesta. For something like two hours Wentworth had been in a large cool room in the sheriff's quarters, that official and Harper having gone to the Menger Hotel. The young man had washed and refreshed himself with a good meal and now in improved humor was leaning back in a big caneseated chair, smoking a cigar and awaiting the return of the sheriff with his prisoners, and the opening of the court.

His fancies flew lightly. With her uncle arrested what would become of Grace? Not that he asked himself the question for lack of knowing. He knew well enough. He smiled to himself.

Weak From Birth

Harriston (Ont.) Child Saved by Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

MR. CORBY, HARRISTON P.O., ONT., writes: "Just a few lines in praise of Dr. Cassell's Tablets. Our little girl was weak from birth, and though we tried doctor's medicine and other things she got no better. She just lay in her cot and cried, and neighbours all said we could not save her. Then I read about Dr. Cassell's Tablets. I said to my wife, 'while there's life there's hope'; we will try these Tablets. We did, and from the first box we could see a change in the child. She seemed to rest more comfortably, and slept well at night. We kept on giving Dr. Cassell's Tablets till she was 18 months old, and now at three years I don't think there can be a healthier child in the whole Dominion.

Little Miss Corby.

The doctors said she had stomach trouble, and that her chances were small, yet Dr. Cassell's Tablets cured her. They have been worth their weight in gold to us, for we were just giving up hope of saving our little daughter. I don't think there is any other medicine for children like Dr. Cassell's Tablets. I may say my wife has taken them—for nerves, and they have built her up splendidly. Publish this letter if you like; it may help others as the Tablets helped us."

Bright, healthy, happy children, full of life and activity—every mother wants her babies to be like that. Are yours? If they are not, if they are weakly or fretful—we say it in all sincerity—the surest way you will ever find to build up strength and vitality in their little frames is a course of Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomain-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels.

SAILORS UNDER FIRE.

With Enough to Keep Them Busy They do little Thinking.

The question of what a man is most likely to think about when under fire or in action, has been much discussed since the battle of Horn Reef. Much evidence has been collected and many theories advanced. Obviously, the answer will depend very much upon the man, what sort of fire he is under and—especially—what his duties are. Generalising very broadly from the conversations I have had with and letters I have read from men who went through this greatest of naval battles. I should say that, so far as the British sailor is concerned, the concentration of mind in action the duties which he had trained so assiduously for during many years of peace pretty effectually kept his thoughts from wandering far afield. The following extract from the letter of an officer whose ship gave and took some of the hardest knocks seems to me to indicate a state of mind fairly typical of the average British sailor in action.

"I suppose I was too busy to think. We just got on with the work and that kept us stretched. When we got a German cruiser, I said 'Our bird,' and I have an idea we passed a word or two when a shell gave our turret a rap that made our teeth grind, but as for 'happy memories of boyhood days' and 'The Little Gray Home in the West'—nothing doing. You've got to keep your mind on one thing, and that isn't memories of home,' but your work.

"If a sailor [illegible] with shells exploding [illegible] when he's [illegible] killed around him, he was thinking of a girl at home, don't believe him, especially if he is telling it to the girl. One does a [illegible] the way home after the battle, and that's when the sailor gets soft and imaginative."—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

PACKERS WOULDN'T PAY.

$15.05 Cwt. for Hogs Is Too Much, They Decide.

CHICAGO, March 7.—The ascent of the price of live hogs to $15.05 to-day brought on something like a strike of packers. At this price also eastern bidders withdrew 20,000 out of total receipts of 33,000 hogs remaining unsold, and quotations dropped back to yesterday's average. Yesterday's top was $14.75, brought by choice heavies. The packers have followed the increased demands of growers from $12.50, February 17, to present quotations, owing to an unprecedented demand.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS' AND SMALL WOMAN'S REDINGOTE.

By Anabel Worthington.

One of the most popular and most talked of styles of this season is the redingote. No one questions that it will remain a favorite for a long time, since it is becoming alike to the woman of slender proportions and to her sister who needs to counterbalance width with length.

In the illustration No. 8094 is shown a stunning model designed especially for misses and small women. The waist is in cutaway or vest effect below a single button closing and shows decidedly the charm of simple lines. In contrasting goods the collar makes direct appeal and the sleeves are smartly cuffed to correspond. There is a separate two gore skirt to which braid gives the fashionable finishing touch as well as to the redingote. A raised waistline adds to the spark of youthfulness expressed by this design.

Broadcloth and serge are excellent materials, and black satin for the collar and cuffs against the white vest that frees itself above and below the waist closing will give an effective costume. Fur banding will be ultra smart in place of braid if you would rather have it. By making this redingote from the pattern you can cut your dress expense in half and double your dress distinction.

The redingote pattern No. 8094 cuts in sizes 14 to 20. To make in size 16 requires 5⅞ yards 44 inch material, ⅝ yard 36 inch satin, ⅜ yard 27 inch linen for the undervest and 12 yards silk braid.

To obtain the pattern, send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

THE MINISTRY UNDER CHURCH UNION

By Major The Rev. R. Bruce Taylor, Montreal.

Considerable misunderstanding exists as to the status of the ministry in the United Church. The permanence of the tie between ministers and people has always been a strong point with Presbyterians. They have felt that the itinerating system of the Methodists was justified mainly where the ministry was of a less highly educated type than the Presbyterian ministry, and where there was danger that a man might say all that he had to say in a limited term of years. The system hardly gave a minister time to settle down before he was once again on the move, and it prevented that close personal relation between minister and people which subsists when the minister has held his pulpit for many years and has seen half his congregation grow up from childhood. Such a man has a hold that no mere preaching gift can give. He has proved himself in all the intimacies of the pastoral relation. He knows his people in their joys and sorrows. He remembers the hard and wounding places in the lives of these before him. He never can preach in the void, for every condition and circumstance of life he has known to be represented in the stories of some of his people. Our Presbyterian system has been preserved practically intact in the United Church. The ministry is to be without a time limit. The itinerating system is to be dropped.

At present when a charge becomes vacant the congregation fixes its choice on some minister, and the matter has to come before two Presbyteries, the Presbytery under the jurisdiction of which the minister has been working, and the Presbytery to which the congregation that is giving the call belongs. In the United Church the congregation in the same way will send a call to the minister, and this call will come before the Settlement Committee, which in this manner takes the place of the Presbytery.

The special paragraph in the Basis of the Union dealing with the congregation's choice of a minister runs thus: "Any pastoral charge in view of a vacancy may extend a call or invitation to any properly qualified minister or ministers, but the right of appointment shall rest with the Settlement Committee, which will report to the Conference for information only."

Two innovations have been made in the procedure with reference to the supply of men for the ministry, and in both cases they seem to meet felt wants. Only those who are in the work of the ministry know how often men feel that they have reached the limit of usefulness in a particular charge. They may have been so pressed with labor that their book work and hard study have got behind and their freshness is gone; or some issue may have arisen which has introduced unpleasantness in their lives and rightly or wrongly set the congregation against them; or some sorrow may have come into their home and they feel that a change would take them away from painful associations and give back to them their joy. Under the present system they can get a change only by entering into public competition, and so their secret becomes known to everybody. They are put in the humiliating position of candidating against other men who may be twenty or thirty years junior to them. Under the new system such a man can intimate to the Settlement Committee that he would welcome a change. And a congregation can act in the same way. One great problem of the Presbyterian Ministry has been to reach the man who has been inefficient or indolent. Inefficiency acts have been passed and have been found difficult in operation. In the United Church when a congregation is able to intimate that on its part it is ready for a change, it will avoid tedious and invidious process. The second innovation that has been introduced has been borrowed from the practice of the Established Church of Scotland. There, if a vacancy is not filled up within six months, the Presbytery must intervene and fill up the vacancy itself. There are few evils in congregational life greater than a prolonged vacancy. The provision in the United Church following these lines is that "when a pastoral charge about to become vacant at the end of the conference year fails to give a call or invitation within the time specified by the General Council, the Settlement Committee shall make an appointment."

The government of the United Church is to be in the hands of sessions, presbyteries, the conference and the general council. Sessions and presbyteries are just what we have been used to. The conference is practically a strengthening of the synod which in Presbyterianism has never been of much service. The conference is to meet once a year, and is to have oversight of a great deal of matter that at present overloads the general assembly; broadly spaking, is to have the oversight of the religious life within its bounds and to deal with matters arising out of the pastorate. The general council, which will correspond to the general assembly, will meet once in two years and will deal with the general policy of the Church. Such a policy is a better thing than we have at present.

UNDERGROUND BRACE FOR WOODEN GATEPOST

Gateposts sagged so as to make the gate ineffective are quite common, largely because of poor bracing. The method illustrated of bracing the posts underground is simple and substantial. It leaves the exit clear of surface braces and provides a rigid support for the gate even when the posts are sunk only 15 inches in the ground. A cross brace is housed into the gateposts at the surface, and another binds the posts at their lower ends. The joints should be spiked together strongly, and the portion underground should be tarred to prevent it from rotting quickly.—Popular Mechanics.

"TELL HIM HE'S DINED"

Absent-Minded Peer Believed the Lying Waiter

Among the many excellent stories which Mr. Leslie Ward, the famous cartoonist "Spy," tells in his reminiscences are one or two concerning the absent-mindedness of Lord Crewe's father, the poet-peer, better known as Monckton-Milnes.

"I remember," says "Spy," "the eccentric lord coming into the club one evening looking tired and hungry. On the mantelpiece a white paper gleamed. It was a list of the Derby lottery. Something stirred in his mind, which was far away on other subjects bent, and reminded him that he was hungry. He scanned the lottery list. . . . and at last he was heard to murmur in dissatisfied tones: 'Waiter, I don't see anything to eat here.'" On another occasion, after careful scrutiny of the actual menu, he ordered a herring.

Monckton-Milnes used to dine at the Athenæum, and usually at the same table. Another member came rushing in one day to obtain a place for himself. But every seat was occupied save that reserved for Lord Crewe. "Tell him when he comes," said the would-be diner to the waiter, as he sat down, "that he's dined!" It is to be supposed the waiter found the deception worth while, for when Lord Crewe arrived he was met with surprise and quiet expostulation. "You dined an hour ago, my lord," said the unscrupulous servant. "So I did," murmured the poor victim, as he retraced his steps.

GROWING WITH CANADA

Enormous Expansion of Railway Company Reflects That of Dominion

If all the trackage over which the Canadian Pacific has control—that is, all the leased lines, or lines taken bodily over, or with running rights—be included in a grand total, the company operates to-day 20,000 miles of tracks. This fact alone would tell of the bigness of the corporation which, thirty years ago, issued its first annual statement on a sheet of note paper. The company owns 100,000 miles of telegraph; 10,000,000 acres of unsold lands, worth $200,000,000; and controls shipping to the extent of 400,000 tons. One of the notable features of the great corporation is, that it takes account of so many things, which, at the first blush, might not seem to be related to railway transportation. The company milks its own cows, and makes its own soap. It bakes its own bread; and it grows its own potatoes.

Governor-General For Mayor

Owing to the absence of the Duke of Devonshire in Canada, Buxton had to choose someone else as first mayor. Lord Hartington was asked, but was unable to accept, so Mr. William Fenwick Mill has been elected mayor of the newly-incorporated borough. Buxton is so closely associated with the Cavendish family that all news of the doings in Canada of the Duke and Duchess is received with interest.

ECZEMA ON FACE
WAS SO BAD HAD TO STAY IN HOUSE

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of all its impurities, and by this means cure all skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got so tired of their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me, so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin.

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

OFFICER ON WATCH THINKS OF FAIRIES

Meanwhile German Machine Guns "Rip" Like Woodpeckers—Montreal Journalist Pens Letter

Lieut. C. J. ("Jimmy") Hanratty, a former Montreal sporting writer, pens the reflections of a soldier in a dug-out at 2 o'clock of a foggy November morning: The one thing I am certain of is that it has gone two of the clock on a foggy morning. Another thing of which I also possess a reasonable certainty is that both Fritz and ourselves are quiet except for a little machine gun activity. Also that the wind is not in a quarter for gas.

Alone With a Mouse

The further fact is that I am on duty alone in the battalion headquarters dug-out. I have just inspected things in general, and now I can safely proceed to write a stray line, provided this inquisitive mouse, which persists in hopping on the table, will let me alone.

This is a nice quiet job, rather like the old dog watch we were once wont to serve in the days when reporters drew down large salaries, and we were happy mortals—if not wise ones. Except for the machine guns you would think that it was the abode of peace. Even they only tell their story to the initiated. To untrained ears they would only suggest a nocturnal woodpecker.

That Silvery Moonlight

The trench mortars were busy earlier on my watch, but they have let up. The place looked even more peaceful a few minutes ago when I was out handling traffic on a famous road. There was a full moon which shed its soft light over the country. It was a high ground, with a little knoll at my back. The moonlight crossed the back line of trenches, and mercifully mantled the ground until one thought of fairies, lovers and folk of such ilk to whom the moon is kind.

During one quiet spell I had fallen into a reverie, and my mind wandered, free from this poor war-torn section of France, until the spatter of bullets nearby awoke me to the fact that some of Frits' machine gun chaps lacked my poetic imagination.

SHIPPING AND DRINKING

Risk of Sailing Short-handed Discussed by an Officer

Lieutenant T. W. Moore, R.N.R., secretary of the Imperial Merchant Service Guild, states: "For nearly twenty-five years we have agitated in vain for effective measures of discipline. Through over-indulgence in strong drink it has very commonly been the case that well over half the men who have signed articles have failed to turn up and any sort of quite inefficient substitutes known as "pier-head jumpers" have been engaged to take their places. Ships with cargoes of immense value, especially at this critical time, may be well out to sea before their crews become really sober. True, the Defence of the Realm Act provides for failures to join, but in most cases, owing to the lack of effective and prompt measures, the delinquents go scot-free.

"I am not an extreme prohibitionist, but I concur in stricter limitations, particularly on the gigantic 'home bottle' business and also the sale of pernicious spirits. Crews should be compelled to join, say, forty-eight hours before the vessel sails. Severe penalties should be visited on those not doing so, and in any case there would then be some assurance that all hands would be sober on putting to sea.

"Our transport officers could tell an amazing story. I believe that some time ago the Admiralty had under serious consideration the adoption of the Naval Discipline Act in respect of all merchant vessels, but I think they abandoned the idea owing to the attitude of the men's leaders. But surely these leaders, if informed of the tremendous loss the country suffers, would not be averse from disciplinary measures."

"NOBLE BLOND BEASTS"

Reversion to Worse Than Savagery Boasted by Germans

How many people who use the term "the blond beast" to describe the Teutonic butcher can say offhand in what connection and by whom it was first used? The question was raised in a well known London club, and the Erudite Member told his hearers to look in "The Genealogy of Morals," by the German philosopher Nietzsche. Due search led to the discovery of the passage in which this truthfully descriptive epithet first appeared.

When the Germans discard the last traces of superficial civilization "they revert," says Nietzsche, "to the beast of prey's innocence of conscience, and become rejoicing monsters, who perhaps go on their way, after a hideous sequence of murder, conflagration, violation, torture, with as much gaiety and equanimity as if they had merely taken part in some student gambols. . . . Deep in the nature of all these noble races there lurks unmistakably the beast of prey, the blonde beast, lustfully roving in search of booty and victory. From time to time the beast demands an outlet, an escape, a return to the wilderness. . . That the lambs should bear a grudge against the great birds of prey is in no way surprising; but that is no reason why we should blame the great birds of prey for picking up the little lambs."

WATCH ON CITY'S MILK

No Half-Measures When Inspectors Find Dangerous Practice

"Dump that milk out!"

"But—"

"Don't argue. Out with it!" And out it went, right into the sewer—a can full of the cleanest-looking milk that ever came to the dairy—all because the farmer had stopped a leak in the can by rubbing soap over it. Toronto's milk inspectors object to soap when served in that connection. The farmer was the loser.

This is only one illustration of the precautions taken and the penalties imposed by the Department of Public Health to ensure a pure milk supply for a big city. From dairy farm to doorstep the milk is subject to official supervision and control; and the man who would "slip something across" on the department needs to be smarter than a politician. Not even the wicked little disease germs can get through any more; they are cooked to death in the pasteurizing plants.

Even before the milk leaves the cow the department has something to say about it. Twice a year, under the authority of the Ontario Milk Act of 1911, its veterinary inspectors—there are four of them—visit the dairy farms supplying Toronto. They test the herds for tuberculosis; observe the general cleanliness or otherwise of herds, stables, milking utensils, and the milkers themselves; point out, sometimes enforce, necessary improvements; and report to the laboratories in Toronto. In the laboratories a card index record of every farm is kept, on which is noted the condition of that farm at each inspection. If it fails to conform to the standard its milk supply is excluded from the city.

NEEDED MISSING WORDS

Languages Have Roundabout Ways of Saying Things

It is a strange peculiarity of almost every language that there are certain words which are entirely missing in it, so to speak, and which have to be indicated by roundabout methods. The French, for example, have no verb "to stand," nor can they speak of "kicking" anyone. They have to say that So-and-so "gives a blow with his foot." "Home, Sweet Home" is quite untranslatable into French, for they have no word for "home," or for "comfort" either, while the terms "upstairs" and "downstairs" are also unknown.

The Italians are a proud race, and it is, perhaps, characteristic of them that they should have no word for "humility." But the Hindoos should not be judged by the fact that their language has no equivalent for "friend." As for the Germans, they employ some very comic, roundabout ways of expressing objects. A thimble they call a finger hat," and a grasshopper a "hay horse." A glove is a "hand shoe," while they call poultry "feather cattle." Oxygen and hydrogen they refer to in very general terms as "sour stuff" and "water stuff."

NEEDS OF WEST INDIES

British Colonies There Might Unite With Canada

Says a correspondent discussing the situation of the British West Indies: There is the duplication in each colony of paraphernalia of Government, Governors, Colonial Secretaries, chief justices, auditor-generals, commandants, attorney-generals, solicitor-generals are simply jostling one another in the West Indies. The only way out of this is some form of federation, either to form a British West Indian Island province, a distinct entity within the Empire, as is New Zealand or South Africa, or to have such a federation attached to the Canadian Dominion administratively. It should reduce the cost of administration, and increase its efficiency.

Another need of the present and future in the British West Indies is the establishment within their borders of technical training centres so well equipped that they can turn out men, and women too, fitted to work in up-to-date agriculture and industry. Communal creation and up-growth is a slow thing, and a thing of stages.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DAREN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ORGANIZER OF WOMEN'S LABOR

Mrs. J. W. Bell.

WOMEN workers have been so successful in the factories in Great Britain that they are being tried in the great workshops of Canada. Everywhere they are proving themselves to be keen rivals to men, and it is now evident that the home is not the only place where a woman may excel in work calculated to advance the welfare of mankind. The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. has sent thousands of its male employees for service in Europe, and as a consequence male workers have become scarce in various departments of industry. In 1915 women workers were introduced into the Canadian Pacific Angus Shops at Montreal. At present there are two hundred of them engaged in the shops.

These women workers have been organized and work under the supervision of Mrs. J. W. Bell, wife of Mr. Bell, superintendent of the Montreal Windsor Street Station building. Mrs. Bell is enthusiastic over the success of the efforts of those entrusted to her charge, and considers that the field of manual labor requiring skill and application is one in which women will yet exercise a wide influence.

A visit to the women workers in the Angus Shops is inspiring. The [illegible] at 7.45 a.m., and finish at 4.45 p.m. Allowing for the lunch hour, between 12 and 1 o'clock, they work eight and a half hours a day. Watching the women trip along cheerfully to the scene of their exertions one might feel that he is observing the world march away from the old era of prejudice and convention and entering a period of freedom and commonsense. The spheres of the activity of the Angus Shops women workers are made cheerful and comfortable as it is possible to make them. Each woman has a locker in which she places her belongings before donning her overalls and cap. At the outset of the experiment it was difficult to induce some of the women to take kindly to the garments which tradition had marked out as male preserves, but after a little while every woman found these working dresses were more convenient than skirts. The overalls have three distinct recommendations: they are tidy, they are sanitary, and they are safe, allowing their wearers to move amongst the machines without danger of being drawn into machinery clutches.

The women work on the piece system, and they are paid at the same rate as their brothers. They work amongst the men with the harmony that prevails in offices where there are female and male clerks. In the Angus Shops the women are to be found sweeping, coach washing, coach painting, working on drills, at lathes, at various kinds of machinery, filing and drilling in the brass shops, brass polishing, operating nut-tapping machines, cleaning dynamos in the electrical department, assisting in the steamfitting centre, and making mattresses and pillows. No woman is asked to do heavy work.

The women bring the material for their lunch with them, and this they [illegible] in the [illegible] room which accommodates two hundred. Soup and bread are provided by the Company at cost price. Attached to the lunch room is a rest room, and near the rest room is a first aid room, where any accidents that may occur are treated. No less than seventeen of the women workers hold certificates of proficiency in first aid work. Should any accidents occur the services of these trained women are very valuable.

There has been no scarcity of applications for work at the Angus Shops. Hearing of the liberal treatment which they receive women have been anxious to secure work there. But only those who are specially in need of employment are taken on. Many of the workers are widows, soldier's wives, and women who are the sole means of the support of dependants. These plucky and industrious women lessen to a considerable extent the strain on the Patriotic, Red Cross, and other charitable funds.

Mrs. Bell makes a thorough investigation of the circumstances of each woman before she is given employment, and a close watch is kept on each worker for the first few days after her appearance in the workshops. This is done so as to guard against the danger of alien enemies, for many nationalities are represented among the female employees of the Angus Shops. Mrs. Bell says that every effort is made to have each woman placed at the task that is most congenial to her tastes and ability. Those who show exceptional talent and skill are promoted. There have been instances where girls entered as coach washers and in a short time found themselves installed as office assistants. Many of the women," says Mrs. Bell, "are one hundred per cent efficient, and this efficiency is in no small way due to the suitable conditions under which the women perform their work. The women are reliable and models of punctuality, and only in cases where there is illness of the worker or some member of her family do workers absent themselves from duty. Women are a decided success in the Angus Shops."

THREATEN RECALL OF SENATOR LANE

Oregon Boils with Rage at 'Misrepresentative' Who Aided Armed-Ship Filibuster.

PORTLAND, Ore., March 7.— Oregon's famous Referendum and Recall law will be invoked on United States Senator Harry Lane on June 4, if a concerted, State-wide movement tonight succeeds. The whole State is bitterly aroused over the action of the junior Senator from Oregon in joining the filibuster against the Armed Ship bill, and, as in Idaho, where former Iowa citizens are planning to burn in effigy Senators Cummins and Kenyon, Oregonians are talking of doing the same with Lane.

Never has the State been so aroused over anything. Democrats joining with other parties in denunciation of the man who is described as the State's "mis-representative." Comment received here to-night from all parts of Oregon denounced Lane, and many persons urged drastic action immediately on the man who was called by some "Oregon's traitor." One message sent to Senator Lane follows:

"As Oregonians and loyal American citizens we note with chagrin your act of participating in the Senate filibuster to defeat the Armed Neutrality bill and embarass the President. Your action does not sit well with your constituents."

A message to President Wilson opens with the following paragraph: "As loyal citizens of the State of Oregon we wish thus to apprise you of our repudiation of the act of Senator Lane in his failure to co-operate with you. Senator Lane does not represent the sentiment of his constituents."

JERSEY TO HAVE "BOYS" DAY

Gov. Edge Asks Fathers to be Better Comrades to Their Sons.

TRENTON, N.J., March 7.—Governor Edge to-day issued a proclamation fixing Sunday, March 25, to be observed as "Boys' Day." The proclamation says that there exists considerable agitation for the encouragement of the "Big Brother" movement, "wherein fathers will will be urged to take more interest in the affairs of the sons so that the young manhood of the State may have the benefit of the experience of the older men and be guided in the right direction, avoiding pitfalls and missteps which are occasioned through ignorance and absence of the spirit of brotherly love and fatherly interest.

"I further suggest and urge that all fathers endeavour to be better comrades to their boys and more like big brothers during the coming year than they have ever been before. I call upon the fathers of the boys of this State not to forget that they were once boys, not to expect their sons to believe what they believ just because their fathers believed it and not to xpect their sons to do what they do just because their fathers do it, and I respectively suggest to the fathers of the boys of our State that if they have any ideals that they would like passed on to the next generation, that they pass them through their sons to the benefit of posterity, the strength of government and the happiness of the New Jersey home."

PROF. FRASER OF MACDONALD WILL INVESTIGATE RUST

OTTAWA, March. 7—W. P. Fraser, M.A., professor of biology at Macdonald College, has been appointed by the Minister of Agriculture to conduct a special investigation on grain rust at the recently erected field laboratories at Brandan and Indian Head. The average annual loss from this cause throughout the world is $100,000,000, but in years of epidemic it goes as high as $280,000,000 in Canada and the United States alone. This country's share is computed at $100,000,000.

Prof. Fraser, who is a Canadian, is a graduate of Cornell and Dalhousie and is recognized as one of the most qualified authorities on rust.

The special laboratories are part of a series of five established throughout the country in connection with the prevention of plant diseases.

EVERY MOVE OF TANK IS VERY REASSURING

"Willies," as Soldiers Call Them, Seen From a New Angle—"Gentle and Wise"

I spent a grey afternoon in the company of those strangest of all the strange children of the year—the Tanks, or, as their human brethren out here call them, the Willies, writes Wilson Young. Among all the machine people who swarm over France and wander in companies on her roads and fields, a race by themselves—motor lorries, caterpillars, tractors, travelling workshops, motor kitchens, and tanks—the tanks are easily lords, being larger, heavier, cleverer, naughtier, more formidable, and more intelligent than anything else. Like everyone else who has met them I fell in love with their lumbering and yet ingratiating ways. They wandered about their playing ground like elephants; and infants in time though they be, seemed to belong to that ageless company of immense things that are informed with the wisdom of the ages.

Inspire Confidence

A group of little French children stood gaping at them absorbed as in the pages of a story book that had come true. And a peasant, heavy footed with the manure of the field, watching one rolling past said to me: "Je crois qu'il y a quelque chose de bon pour nous la; j'ai confiance en ca!" (I fancy there's something good for us there. I've confidence in those).

"J'ai confiance en ca"—that is above all the feeling with which the Willie inspires the beholder. One can understand the almost superstitious reverence with which the Tommy regards him. He believes that the Willies can do anything, and a little more. This, be it said, is not quite fair to the Willies. There are many things that they cannot do. They cannot sit up and beg. They are no use as transport vehicles. They will not fetch and carry. You cannot go joy-riding in them or take them out for an early morning spin to whip up the blood. They are very poor craft in which to navigate deep waters, and they cannot fly.

An Easy Grace

Their requirements in space, material, and time are considerable; but two things they can do—they can proceed and they can fight. When a Willie is ordered to "proceed" anywhere, he proceeds with an inevitability and comprehensiveness that are entirely satisfactory. You simply have to lay him, by compass, like a gun on his objective, and he proceeds there, slowly, uncomfortably, expensively, and unquietly—but surely. And this afternoon, when I was watching him crossing shell craters, going over trenches, and through mud that would hopelessly have bogged any other sort of vehicle, I began to see why he is so beloved of his young trainers and keepers. He is so very invulnerable and so very efficient. He is gentle, withal, and his movements have an easy grace that, to me, at any rate, come as a surprise.

PREPARE FOR '18 CAMPAIGN

Allies Do Not Expect the War to End This Year?

NEW YORK, March 7.—The London correspondent of the Sun cables: A speech by Winston Spencer Churchill in the House of Commons urging that preparations be made immediately for the 1918 campaign, is consnstructed as indicating that the allied authorities do not expect to end the war this year.

Mr. Churchill intimated a strong belief that the blockade will force the collapse of the Central Empires and bring about the finish of the war in 1918 without such huge sacrifices of life as would be necessary in forcing a military decision. This view is widely entertained, and Mr. Churchill's wide reputation as a man who ordinarily favours action gives especial significance to such a declaration.

The Government knows that internal conditions in Gremany and Austria are very bad, that they are becoming worse rapidly, and that as the nations behind the fighting lines grow weaker than the armies, they cannot support the pressure indefinitely.

Men of the Churchill school, including the naval party, believe a continuance of the blockade of economic pressure will force Germany to send its high seas fleet out for a last desperate effort. This is keenly desired by advocates of extreme measures for the destruction of the German naval power, who urge no peace will be safe while Germany possesses its fleet.

Meanwhile, with the mobilizing of the man power resources of the whole world and the tightening of the blockade, the allies expect to starve the Central Empires into submission. This view in the House of Commons A. Bonar Law has refused to discuss the Saloniki campaign, indicating that, despite widespread criticism, it will continue as a part of the plan to starve the interior countries.

WILL SELL FLOUR AT COST

Binghamton Firm's Plan to Aid Its 12,000 Employees.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., March 9.—Arrangements are being made by the Endicott-Johnson Company of this city, which employs 12,000 men and women, to sell to all their employees flour and bread at cost. Following is a statement issued by George F. Johnson, the general manager:

"To assist in the fight against high and constantly mounting living costs, we shall sell to our employees only flour and bread at cost. If it is possible for us to make arrangements with the railroads, as we are now trying to do, we shall sell coal at cost. We shall build modern coal pockets to handle coal economically, buying at the right time of the year to insure lowest possible cost. With the sale of these three prime necessities, we shall feel that we have materially aided the people in their fight against burdensome living costs."

Nerves Were So Bad Would Lie Awake Nights

And Had to Avoid Crowds or Excitement—When Doctors Gave Up Turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food With Good Results

Peterborough, Ont., March 9.—The cure reported in this letter will be best appreciated by persons who know the keen mental anguish caused by inability to sleep. You lie awake and think with alarm of all the dreadful things that might happen to you. You lose confidence and courage, are easily irritated and life is scarcely worth while.

But there is a message of hope in this letter, for it tells of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and the grand work it is accomplishing.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wiley, 136 London street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "About three years ago I was suffering from nervous debility, sleeplessness and loss of appetite. My nerves were so bad that I could not attend church or any place where there was a crowd or excitement. During the night I would lie awake for two or three hours. I had tried several remedies and taken treatments from doctors. The doctor finally said he could not do any more for me, and it was then I started using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had read in the newspapers of how highly it was recommended, so I secured some and commenced using it. After the third box I noticed an improvement, so I kept on taking them until I had used eight or nine boxes. The results were such that I could sleep and eat well and go to places where there was a crowd or excitement without any difficulty. My health was generally benefitted greatly. Since that, from time to time, when I am not feeling up to the mark, I take a few of the Nerve Food pills, as I usually keep some in the house. I would recommend this treatment to anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

FALMOUTH HAS WAR BOOM

Shipping Activity of Packet Days a Hundred Years Ago Revived.

FALMOUTH, Eng., Mar. 7.—These are stirring days in this remote shipping outpost. The harbor is crowded with American, Dutch, and Scandinavian craft of all kinds, great liners of some of the transatlantic companies, freighters, tankers, and tramps in all rigs and flags. It is the busiest shipping time Falmouth has seen since the old packet days almost a hundred years ago, when things flourished and then died down until the port was considered pretty dead from a shipping standpoint. Just now the declaration of the German war zones has sent more ships scurrying into the harbour, for the memorandum to the German note even specified Falmouth by name as offering some possible exemption from the scourge.

Falmouth more than any other port is witnessing how the war is changing trade routes and trade ports, particularly along the Channel, where the submarine menace has practically closed the old ports for transatlantic travel. The port is at the very tip of southwest England just abreast of the rocky headland of Landsend, and about the first land sighted in coming across the Atlantic. It is just east of the Lizard, from which the arrival of liners is first reported, the same as from Sandy Hook. It is adjacent, too, to the Poldau wireless station, which from this outpost sends its wireless across the Atlantic and to ships at sea. Near by is Penzance, where the pirates lived, and further on is the house of Drake.

Thus situated at the very jumping-off point of England and the western-most harbour of the channel. Falmouth has a minimum of submarine danger and at the same time is something like Montauk Point, L. I., in reaching far out to sea, and thus permitting quick emergency rail connections with the metropolis lying further inland.

An American tanker has just gone ashore in the outer harbour and is slowly going to pieces before the heavy surf. There has been no loss of life, but Falmouth is deeply roused, for a scum of American oil has spread over the surface of the water.

"It's one of the worst things that ever happened to us," said an old authority of the port. "The oil has got into our oyster beds, among the best in England, and probably killed them for good. It has also killed off all the fish and even the fish that are living can't be eaten, they taste so of oil. We've had a big boom from the war, but this oil on the water has set it all back. It's a serious danger, too, for at some points it has caught on fire and spread a sheet of flame far over the water."

The strangest ships in this crowded harbour are two enormous hulks with double and triple fighting decks and triple lines of port holes for heavy guns. One is Nelson's favourite flagship, the Foudroyant, and the other the only surviving type of the French ships which fought at Trafalgar. In that battle this French ship was the Dougay Trouin, but when she was captured by the English they named her the Implacable.

REBUILDING VITRIMONT.

Mrs. Crocker's Work of Repairing the Damage Done by Germans.

VITRIMONT, near Luneville, France March 8.—American sympathy with the civilian sufferers from the war has received more concrete expression in this little village than in any other part of the devastated country immediately behind the French firing lines.

When Mrs. William Crocker of San Francisco chose Vitrimont in which to carry out her idea of reconstructing with her own means one of the villages destroyed by the German troops in their first march into France, she met with much doubt and suspicion. The people of Lorraine are practical and hard headed, and also object to partaking of anything given in the form of charity. It was therefore necessary to make the proposition a purely businesslike one before laying it before the villagers.

In order to convice them that somebody was really taking an interest in them, and that they would not have to be content with the Government indemnity of 60 per cent. of their losses, Miss Daisy Polk, also a Californian and now administrator of the plan, gave them printed plans and details of the scheme. These were forwarded at once to the men at the front. No doubt could be aroused only by documentary evidence of this kind of the good fortune destined for them and their dependents.

Of the seventy houses composing the village thirty-four had been shelled and the remaining thirty-six burned. The Government itself decided to repair the bombarded houses, which were not so badly damaged as those which had been set afire. The reconstruction of these latter was undertaken by Mrs. Crocker. Little change had taken place in the village since the fifteenth century, and the style of architecture was very uniform, usually taking the shape of one or two story cottages with grange-door entrances and attached at the back to the granaries and cattle sheds. The only changes insisted on by the promoters of the scheme, as well as by the French Government, were the introduction of sanitary arrangements, which hitherto had been non-existent, the provision of ventilation in the rooms and the separation by an intervening courtyard of the cattle sheds and the human habitations.

RICH FROM BLACKMAILING

PETROGRAD, March 7.—Manseevich Manuiloff, secretary to M. Sturmer, a member of the staff of the Novoe Vremya, has been sentenced to eighteen months in a hard labour battalion for blackmailing the Union Bank of Moscow.

The Crown Prosecutor said the trial raised only one corner of the curtain that hitherto has concealed the proceedings in Manuiloff's particular world, but revelations of corruption in official spheres have aroused profound disgust.

For years Manuiloff, owing to his high connections, was able to trade in places and blackmail right and left, and even boasted that he could make and unmake a minister. He amassed a considerable fortune by his sordid methods, and the trial has compromised a good many other persons besides himself.

The Dardanelles Inquiry Brings Warm Criticisms

such operations were commenced, the War Council should have carefully reconsidered the whole position. In our opinion the Prime Minister ought to have summoned a meeting of the War Council for that purpose and, if not summoned, other members of the War Council should have pressed for such a meeting. We think this was a serious omission. We consider that the responsibility of those members of the Cabinet, who did not attend the meetings of the War Council, was limited to the fact that they delegated their authority to their colleagues, who atended those meetings.

Blame For Kitchener.

"We are of the opinion that Lord Kitchener did not sufficiently avail himself of the services of his general staff, with the result that more work was undertaken by him than it was possible for one man to do, and confusion and want of efficiency resulted.

"We are unable to concur in the view set forth by Lord Fisher that it was his duty, if he differed from the chief of his department, to maintain silence at the council or to resign. We think that the adoption of any such principle generally would impair the efficiency of public service.

"We think that, although the main object was not attained, certain important political advantages, upon the nature of which we have already dwelt, were secured by the Dardanelles expedition. Whether those advantages were worth the loss of life and treasure involved is and must always remain a matter of opinion."

Must Do Justice to Living.

The report of the commission says that Lord Kitchener's premature death, and the death of his secretary, Mr. Fitzgerald, renders it impossible to state with the same confidence as in the case of living witnesses the opinions and aims of Lord Kitchener at different periods of the proceedings. The commission does not believe, however, that even reference to the memory of the illustrious deeds justified it in abstaining from complete revelations of his case. The report adds:

"It is necessary to do justice to the living as well as to the dead." Mr. Churchill testified that Lord Kitchener's personal qualities and position played a very large part in the decision of events, the report says. It continues:

"He was the sole mouthpiece of War Office opinion in the War Council. When he gave a decision it was invariably accepted as final. He was never overruled by the War Council in any matter, great or small. Scarcely anyone ever ventured to argue with him in the council."

General Staff Not Consulted.

Major-General Charles E. Callwell, who was Director of Military Operations at the War Office at the time of the Dardanelles expedition, testified that the general staff virtually ceased to exist because it was not consulted.

The principle of centralization, the report says, was pushed to the extreme point by Lord Kitchener. It proved successful in the minor operations in the Sudan, but in larger operations it threw on one man more work than any individual could cope with.

Andrew Fisher Dissents.

Andrew Fisher, Australian High Commissioner in London, in a note issued with the Dardanelles report, dissents from the findings of the majority that the naval advisers should have expressed their views at the War Council, and from the opinion of the majority that Lord Fisher was not justified in remaining silent. Mr. Fisher says:

"I dissent in the strongest terms from any suggestion that departmental advisers of a Minister, in his company at the Council meetings, should express any views at all other than to the Minister and through him, unless specifically invited to do so. I am of the opinion that it would seal the fate of responsible government if servants of the State were to share the responsibility of Ministers to Parliament and to the people on matters of public policy. The Minister has command of the opinions and views of all the the officers of the department he administers on matters of public policy. Good stewardship demands from Ministers of the Crown frank, fair, and full statements of all opinions of trusted and experienced officials to their colleagues when they have direct reference to matters of high policy."

Thomas McKenzie, High Commissioner of New Zealand in London, lays similar views to those of Mr. Fisher to the conclusions of the Dardanelles commission regarding Lord Fisher and the naval advisers. Mr. McKenzie also expresses the opinion that the commission is not yet justified in coming to a decision as to the results of the enterprise. To do so, he says, it would be necessary to investigate the conduct of the offensive on the Gallipoli peninsula, and of the subsidiary operations.

Report is Interim One.

LONDON, March 9.—The report is an interim one, dealing exclusively with the origin of the attack on the Dardanelles. It is signed by the late Lord Cromer, who was chairman of the commission; Andrew Fisher, representing Australia; Thomas McKenzie, representing New Zealand Sir Frederick Cawley, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; James A. Clyde, Lord Advocate; Stephen Legwyn, Nationalist member of the House of Commons; Rear Admiral Sir William H. May, Field Marshal Baron Nicholson and Justice Pickford.

In addition to the dissenting notes of Mr. Fisher and Mr. Mackenzie, a separate report was presented by Walter F. Roch, Liberal member of the House of Commons from Pembrokeshire.

Mr. Roch makes an exhaustive exposition of the attitude of Lord Fisher, who, he says, all along vigorously opposed the Dardanelels enterprise, and on January 28 actually left the Council table, declaring he would resign this office.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Bone of Contention

It Came Between a Pair of Lovers.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It stretched across the salt marsh and connected two villages. Harborhead folk called it "the red bridge," while Portside people grimly referred to it as "the white bridge." As a matter of fact, it had never been painted at all, and now, after two years' exposure to wind and weather, the new wood had taken on soft gray tints that blended with the silver tide that ebbed and flowed between the piles.

Although Harborhead and Portside were connected by the new bridge and the vehicles of both villages rumbled to and fro over the planks, the inhabitants were widely separated by a growing bitterness.

Parson Lane of Portside had pounded the pulpit vigorously over the matter. "Pots of paint! Pots of paint!" he exclaimed one memorable Sunday. "Have my people drowned their souls in pots of paint? The good Lord made it possible for these villages to be united by a beautiful bridge, and you wrangle over the painting of it as if the color mattered. Brethren, see that your souls are as white as you would have the bridge painted. Let not the red smirch of anger sully its purity!"

After that sermon the bitterness was intensified. The Harborhead people who weekly crossed the bridge to attend Parson Lane's church fluttered homeward to spread the good man's words far and wide, with most unhappy results.

Noah Wade and Almira Turner were to be married in June. Three times a week Noah crossed the bridge to Harborhead to see his sweetheart. They had never discussed the bridge matter, because they had been too happy to talk about anything except their own wonderful affairs.

The Tuesday after Parson Lane's sermon Almira waited at the front gate for Noah. She could see him stepping quickly across the bridge, tall, erect, with his head poised high. All the Wades were proud. The girl's blue eyes did not soften at her lover's approach. A new expression came into them.

"Waiting for me?" smiled Noah, taking the hat from his brown hair and covering Almira's little hand with his own sunburned fingers.

She drew her hand quietly from beneath his touch. "Yes," she said gravely. "Come with me, Noah. I have something to say to you. Let us go to the orchard."

"What is the matter? Are you in trouble? Has anything happened?" demanded Noah anxiously, falling into step beside her.

Almira shook her head. In silence they went across the grass to the orchard and paused in the shade of the gnarled old apple trees.

"What is the matter, Almira?" repeated Noah at last.

"I can't marry you, Noah," replied Almira quietly.

"Why not?" Noah spoke gruffly. He was angry at Almira's strange manner, at the coldness in her voice and her sudden aloofness.

She looked at the distant sails with steadfast eyes. "Father says I shan't marry any one from over 'the white bridge,' and I don't know that I want to."

"Personally I don't care a rap what color the bridge is," retorted Noah. "I've crossed it for two years to see you, Almira, and now at this late day you suddenly drop me and say it's because I live over the bridge—a flimsy excuse. Why don't you say outright that you don't care for me and never did?" His face was growing whiter, and the hand pressed against the tree trunk was clinched until the knuckles were livid.

Suddenly Noah swung away from the tree and without one backward glance tramped across the grass, leaped the fence into a winding lane and disappeared along the shore road.

After that it became known that Almira's wedding garments were carefully laid away out of sight and Noah Wade no longer crossed the bridge three times a week.

Then followed a summer unprecedented for its lack of rain. Weeks followed days, and months followed weeks, while the sun poured relentlessly down on the sister towns and burned the vegetation to grim brownness. Only the salt grass that was wet by the tides remained green. Crops died in the baked earth.

September came, fiercely hot. One breathless evening Almira Turner walked listlessly along the bridge. It was said that whatever breeze there might be would be felt on the long wooden structure that united the two villages, yet in its way formed a barrier between many hearts.

Others were walking on the bridge, but it was noticeable that Portside folks walked only as far as the middle of the bridge and then retraced their steps. Harborhead people did the same thing at their end, so there was no passing over the bridge save by those who had business to attend to. Where friendly relations were established between families in the warring villages it was considered most amicable and politic to visit by way of the long road around the shore and avoid the unhappy bridge.

Almira was thinking bitterly of what her father had said when she announced that her engagement to Noah Wade had been broken. He had stared incredulously at her.

"Why, Miry, honey, I was only joking! Now, you go along and make it up with Noah this minute. There'll be bridges standing long after we poor mortals are through trying to be happy in this world."

But Almira could not make it up with Noah Wade. He did not give her a chance. He went away from Portside and found work elsewhere, and she had not seen him through the long summer. Now she was thinking of him and of her foolish excuse for giving him up.

A loud rumble of thunder sent the pedestrians on the bridge scurrying home, but Almira lingered, watching the lightning leap from cloud to cloud in that ominous black mountain in the northwest, listening to the crackle and volley of thunder, harking to the sibilant hiss of the high tide among the bridge timbers.

Just as she turned her steps homeward there came a blinding crash that seemed to enwrap the whole village of Harborhead in yellow light; then all sound ceased for an instant, and out of the murky darkness there sprang a bright flame and another and another. The lightning had struck in Harborhead.

Almira hurried toward home as the wild clamor of the church bells rang out. If the Portside people refused to bring out their fire apparatus to the rescue of Harborhead the closely populated little village was doomed. It was known that Portsiders were very bitter against the people over the bridge.

Just as she reached the gate there came another sound, mingled with the roar of thunder, the clash of bells and the shouts of men. It was the high, sweet clang of the Portside fire bell, and it was followed by the rumble of the little engine across the bridge. It dashed past Almira's gate, dragged by a score of strong, willing hands. The hook and ladder truck came in its wake, and there, sitting high on the seat, steering the truck, was Noah Wade, his face tense and set in the glare of the fire.

The devastating storm died away while the valiant men fought the flames that licked greedily at the frame store buildings and threatened many a nearby home with destruction. Portside men and men of Harborhead worked side by side, and differences were forgotten in the single aim that prompted all.

Many times that night Almira's heart failed within her as she watched Noah risk his life within the flaming buildings. Once he brought out a little child from the tenements over the stores, and the tenderness with which he bore the child and placed it in its mother's arms brought tears to the girl's sad eyes.

And then came the moment when their eyes met across the flames. The sudden leap of recognition in Noah's glance was answered by Almira's appealing eyes, and then the smoke hung between them once more.

The weeks that followed after the fire were not soon forgotten. Differences were patched up and mended so that they would not again break. Portside and Harborhead people mingled together as they had before the days of the bridge trouble. There were church festivals and entertainments that were enjoyed by everybody, and over all was the feeling of satisfaction that the bridge trouble was at an end.

The Harborhead people had gratefully announced their willingness that the bridge should be painted white in view of the prompt and neighborly services of the Portside firemen. Portside people agreed to abide by a choice by vote.

When the vote was counted it was found that all Harborhead had voted for a white painted bridge, while Portside had courteously voted for red, and the vote was tied.

Then the question was solved by a suggestion to paint the bridge green, and it was done, and so peace reigned at last, and there was much passing to and fro.

At last Noah came over to Harborhead and stopped at Almira's gate. Mrs. Turner greeted him pleasantly.

"Almira went over the bridge awhile ago, Noah. If you walk back you may meet her," she said.

Noah walked back slowly, watching for Almira's slender form and dreading to see it beside that of some other admirer. At last she came, stepping quickly, with now and then a glance at the rising full moon.

Halfway across she met Noah, and they both stopped. Noah guided her gently to the railing where they could look along the bright moonlit path that wrinkled the water.

"I've been to see you, Almira. Your mother said I might meet you," he said wistfully.

"I—went to Portside to mail a letter—to you, Noah. I thought you might get it sooner—tonight—and perhaps you would come. I wanted to tell you how foolish I've been"—

Noah stopped her words with a swift caress. "And I was on the way to tell you what a fool I've been, but we've met halfway, after all."

When the wedding day came round both sides thought it would be a suitable occasion on which to celebrate the return of peace, and nothing would do but that the bridal procession should pass over the bridge.

The suggestion was acted on, and a procession of about all the folks in Harborhead and all the folks in Portside followed the bride and groom or strewed flowers before them, a fitting ending to the troubles that had so long separated the two towns.

Seeing in the Dark.

Sir J. J. Thomson is authority for the statement that when a body is heated above the temperature of boiling water it ordinarily begins to be faintly visible, especially by averted vision, but no definite color is discerned until the temperature has risen considerably higher. This suggests that the first effects are felt by the "rods" and not by the "cones," which together form the retina. The cones are specially concerned with the perception of color. From this one would infer that animals which see in the dark must have retinas particularly rich in rods, and physiology shows that this is notably true of the owl, whose retina is remarkable for the extremely great proportion of rods to cones. In a faint light, states Professor Thomson, the owl sees no color, but he sees somethings which is good enough for his purposes where we would see nothing at all.—Philadelphia Record.

A Literary Bellboy.

At one of the great London hotels there is a page boy who in his spare moments is much given to the study of the best English literature.

A few days ago he was paid his wages with a small fine deducted for some breach of regulations. Indignant, the boy said to the manager, "Sir, if you should ever find it within the scope of your jurisdiction to levy an assessment on my wages for some trivial act alleged to have been committed by myself at some inopportune moment in the stress of one's avocation I would suggest that you refrain from exercising that prerogative. The failure to do so would of necessity force me to tender my resignation."

The manager, tottering, reached a chair and in gasps asked the boy what he meant. "In other words, if you fine me again I shall chuck the job!" said the lad.—London Standard.

For the New House.

When you commence to plan your new house get a good sized scrapbook in which to paste every kind of a suggestion you come across. There are hundreds of little ideas as well as some larger ones which will help you give your home added charm or comfort without much increase in cost—ideas about built in things, from a simple shelf to a medicine closet or a seat in an inglenook. There are things to do and things not to do about the placing of lights and of radiators and of water or steam pipes. There are principles of harmony to be remembered in the selection of rugs, draperies, wall decorations and furniture. We all run across such suggestions, but rarely remember them. So get a scrap book or else a large envelope or a flat box labeled "The New House." It will pay.—New York Sun.

Norman Kings and War.

The Norman kings had a way of their own of making money from their warlike preparations. William Rufus in the sixth year of his reign, "caused 20,000 foot to be lifted in England to rendezvous in Normandy. But when they were come to the sea coast in order to be transported he sent them all home again after exacting 10 shillings from each of them for their diet." Years afterward Richard I., according to the old chronicle, "ordained that there should be jousts and tournaments throughout England for the better exercise of men in martial affairs, yet so that all persons should pay for their licenses to bear a part in these exercises after the following rates: Every earl 20 marks, every baron 10 marks and such as had no land 2 marks."

Boulogne.

Boulogne has been the base of almost every contemplated invasion of England from the days of Caligula to the time when Napoleon gathered 180,000 men there ready at any favorable opportunity to swoop across the channel. For six years—from 1544 to 1550—Boulogne was an English possession, and the English element in the town was large and influential long before the cross channel pleasure steamers made it the best known spot in France to the majority of the English trippers. Two famous poets, Churchill and Campbell, breathed their last in Boulogne.—Westminster Gazette.

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. Frank Knobl, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. Yoer, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. Clementina Duerring, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

Cruelest Tyranny Is The Fate of Serbia

Legation in London Describes Reign of Terror Established by Austria in Kingdom

The following statement, charging that Austria-Hungary instituted a regime of tyranny and cruelty in Serbia the minute she had succeeded in getting the foreign medical missions out of the country was sent by the Serbian legation in London:

"From information which has reached the Serbian Government in Corfu through various channels, concerning the conditions prevailing in the Serbian provinces occupied by the enemy, as well as from numerius admissions made even in the Beogradske Novine, the official organ of the Austro-Hungarian administration in Serbia, it transpires that a rule of terror equal to that in the regions under Bulgaria prevails increasingly in those parts of Serbia which are under Austria-Hungary.

"The seemingly correct behaviour of the military authority at the beginning of the occupation was simply designed to impress foreigners, especially neutral countries. No sooner had Austria-Hungary dismissed the foreign medical missions from the country and closed it to foreign travelers than she revealed her true attitude and intention toward the Serbs, adopting to the full those principles which the Bulgarians have frankly professed from the very first, viz., the elimination of the Serbian element, and the terrorising of the population by the removal of all the leading men in the country.

THE LIST OF CRIMES.

"In pursuit of the object, the Austro-Hungarian authorities have resorted not only to the deportation and internment of Serbian men, women and even children (from fifty to sixty thousand in all, so far) in Austria and Hungary, but to a system of most rigorous penalities in most cases that of death on the gallows. Whereas the Bulgarian Government in Sofia considers it necessary for the National Sobranje to pass a special bill against brigandage (see the Sofia paper Zarja of Dec. 16, 1916) so as to give a judicial colouring to wholesale executions of Serbian citizens in the regions occupied by the Bulgarian authorities in Macedonia, old Serbia and the Morava region—in all the territory occupied by the Austro-Hungarian authorities such judicial murders are carried out simply in accordance with a list in which certain anticipated crimes entail the death penalty which lists has been drawn up by the military commander in chief, the Archduke Frederick.

"This list of crimes grows longer from day to day, and includes an ever increasing number of offences which are punishable with death. From the official intimations of the Beogradske Novind the penalty of death on the gallows is provided, apart from the usual offences against the military powers:

"1. For persons in whose possession are found arms, munitions of explosives.

"2. For persons who, in any way (by giving food, shelter, clothing etc.,) assist prisoners to escape. (Order of the Military Commander in Chief Feb. 28, and Oct. 27, 1916, see Beogradske Novine, No. 255, Oct. 27, 1916.)

REGULATIONS WERE DISTORTED

"These regulations are to an incredible extent distorted and abused to suit the desires and requirements of the military authorities. Thus, e.g. the Beogradske Novine frequently reports cases in which several persons often, even women, have been hanged because the authorities found rifle bullets in their houses, or because buried arms and explosives were discovered in their fields and pastures in some cases, solely the barrels of guns, and sharpnel, of which the accused could not have made any use whatsoever. The complete innocence of these poor victims is beyond all doubt, because it was impossible for them to know whether a few bullets had or had not been forgotten or concealed on their premises by some member of their family at the time of the retreat of the Serbian army. Likewise seeing that at the time of the military operations they were absent from their homes and grounds,) they could have no knowledge of it, if individual officers or men, or even entire units, had at the time of the retreat buried arms or munitions in their orchards, pastures, or woods, because they could not convey them further, owing to lack of transport, or the bad condition of the roads.

"As regards the sheltering of prisoners, in most cases a common denunciation is considered sufficient proof.

POSSESSES RELIABLE PROOF

"Moreover, the Serbian Government possesses reliable proof of the fact that the Austro-Hungarian military authorities frequently inflict the penalty of death for the following, besides the aforesaid 'crimes':

"1. For wearing Austrian, German, or Bulgarian uniforms. Here we must mention that the enemy soldiers themselves frequently trade sundry articles chiefly clothing, underclothing, trousers and boots, to the natives for money or drink, (as may be seen from the admissions in the Beogradske Novine.)

"2. For having more food in the house than is permitted by the regulations.

"3. For retaining copper utensils after a second intimation to give them up.

"4. Upon persons conveying letters other than their own. Here it is necessary to state that neither the Austro-Hungarian nor the Bulgarian authorities permit postal intercourse between the native inhabitants in the respective Serbian territories under their administration.

"There have recently been numerous cases in which the Austrians have hanged individual citizens because they neither could, nor would, indicate the places where the Serbian authorities or fugitives had hidden, (usually buried,) various objects, in most cases State archives.

"Thus the Serbian Government possesses authentic information of the fact that Sibin Yelatchitch, a wealthy merchant, was hanged in the market town of Brus for refusing to reveal the spot where certain private property of H. R. H. the Crown Prince Alexander had been deposited.

PRODUCED ORIGINAL PHOTOGRAPH

"As merely one but a very eloquent proof convicting the Austro-Hungarian authorities in Serbia of the perpetration of atrocities, Serbian Legation retains for inspection of persons or institutions desirous of convincing themselves the reproduction of a photograph received by the Serbian Government in Corfu from the Serbian Army Headquarters in Saloniki. The original photograph, which is one of the most gruesome documents of the war, was found on a German officer, who was killed on the Monastir front. It represents a sextuple execution of Serbian citizens in the presence of officers and men of the Austro-Hungarian Army. To render the deed even more revolting, a gipsy was employed to act as hangman, the execution being public. The German officer for his amusement photographed the whole scene.

"The members of the Serbian Parliament for the County of Krushevats, who are at present in Corfu, identified three of the victims as well as the locality where the execution took place. The photograph shows a spot near the railway station at Krushevatz. The victims were highly respected, honest and well-to-do peasants from the village of Lazaritza, in the neighborhood of Krushevats, and one of them is Mihaylo, the Mayor of the village of Lazaritza, before the Austro-Hungarian invasion. Having regard to the blameless reputation and prosperous circumstances of these men, it is out of the question that they should have been hanged for some common crimes such as theft or murder; the reason for their execution must have been political.

"By public executions, and by exposing the dead bodies, Austria-Hungary is endeavouring to intimidate the nation, and by the removal of its best and most prominent men she is trying to deprive it of all natural leaders and advisers."

Potatoes vs. Rice

In these days of high prices for potatoes it is quite surprising the number of people who have taken to rice. The usual method apparently is to eat rice about four times a week, and perhaps potatoes the other three days. There is great searching in the cook books for rice recipes, while the grocers say the demand for rice which has not risen much in price is greater than ever.

Scientists tell us that rice is a better food than potatoes and that we would have discarded the potatoes long ago if it had not been just a matter of habit. Some authorities claim that one does not tire of eating rice either.

The food values between rice and potatoes are a follows:

	Rice.	Potatoes.
Water	12.4	78.3
Protein	7.4	2.2
Fat	.4	.1
Starch	79.4	18.4
Mineral Matter	.4	1.0
	100.0	100.0

It can be claimed for rice too that it can be cooked in more numerous ways than potatoes. Perhaps it will pay to investigate.

FRENCH BREAK REINFORCED GERMAN LINES ON FRONTAGE OF OVER A MILE

Pierced German Trenches to a Depth of Over Half a Mile, Taking Several Hundred Prisoners, Machine Guns and Stores in Spite of the Fact That German Forces Had Been Reinforced---Sister of General French is Killed By Shell Fire in the Balkans.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, March 9.—British newspapers to-day emphasized the importance of the victory announced in the French official statement to-day in the Champagne country. It is pointed out that German critics stated that the German retirements on the British front were due to strengthening their lines on the French front. Nevertheless the French were able to break the reinforced German lines for over a mile in frontage, piercing and holding it for half a mile in depth and taking several hundred prisoners with machine guns and stores.

PARIS, March 9.—German positions on a front of 1,500 metres, varying in depth from 600 to 800 metres, were carried by attack in the Champagne, made yesterday by the French, the War Office reports. A German counter offensive was repulsed after violent fighting.

Two German attacks in Avocourt wood, on the Verdun front, were repulsed.

SALONIKA, March 9.—Mrs. Harley, sister of Lord French, Commander-in-Chief of the British Home Defence Corps, was fatally wounded by an enemy shell while serving with an ambulance in the Balkans, according to word received here to-day from Monastir. She died from wounds soon after being hit.

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, March 9.—Four officers and six hundred men of the ranks were taken prisoner with several machine guns and mine throwers, in German successes achieved against the Russian forces in the storming of positions on the ridge of Magyaros, Roumanian front, the War Office announced to-day.

AMSTERDAM, March 9.—Arrangements have not been completed for the funeral of Count von Zeppelin, according to Berlin despatches to-day. For some time he had been suffering from dysentry, and later developed the mumps. An operation was necessary. While convalescing from this operation inflammation of the lungs developed.

LONDON, March 9.—That she couldn't have plotted death to anybody because she was a Quaker and therefore abhorred bloodshed, was part of the unique defense offered to-day by Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, principal conspirator in the famous "poison plot" case.

Miss Harriet Wheeldon was the next witness. She swore that the mysterious Scotland Yard Agent "Gordon" posed as an anarchist in worming himself into the confidence of the Wheeldons and the Masons.

COPENHAGEN, March 9.—"If war depends upon President Wilson, at any rate we have decided to conduct the submarine warfare to the utmost degree," declared German Foreign Secretary Zimmerman in an interview telegraphed here to-day from Berlin.

BERLIN, March 9.—Late this afternoon it was officially admitted Count Zeppelin was dead. He was conscious till death came. He will be given an imperial funeral.

OTTAWA, March 9.—Although no official announcement is forthcoming from Government circles, it is believed here that negotiations are in progress looking to the purchase by the Imperial Government of next season's production of wheat in the western provinces.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Senator McLean, Connecticut, offered a resolution to-day asking that an extraordinary session of Congress be called March 26.

Wm. J. Stone will be nominated chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Lewis, the Administration Whip, said to-day.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—"I never explain what I say or do in the Senate on a great public question," said Senator William J. Stone of Missouri, to-day when asked for a statement regarding the attacks being made upon him throughout the country.

Stone will disregard the demands for his resignation as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. He is confident that the Senate will retain him in that position.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—What President Wilson proposes as to arming American merchantmen was still a mystery to-day. The fact that the President was still ill to-day and ordered not to tax himself with labours, made it probable that he would delay action a few more days.

Mr. C. B. Routley's Successful Sale

Mr. C. B. Routley states that the clearance sale of his entire stock, which he has been forced to inaugurate, on account of having to leave his old store, which was recently sold to another business, has been very encouraging. During the week which has passed since the sale started, thousands of dollars worth of goods have been sold--the remarkable bargains offered having brought enthusiastic buyers each day. Mr. Routley's stock is a very large one, as most Peterborough shoppers know. Fully $30,000 worth of goods of a varied character has been marked down to quick selling prices, and the public have been buying in crowds every day.

Mr. Routley's announcement in to-day's Examiner shows that although the sales have been very large the stock is still strong in all lines; and it is expected that the stream of buyers will continue until everything is sold in this old established Routley store, on George street.

Orange Day To-morrow

There will be a big run on California Sunkist Oranges all over America to-morrow, known as "Orange Day." Lower prices than usual will prevail, and it is expected that many cases of oranges will find their way into the homes of our citizens during this special sale to-morrow. The dealers who have inserted special advertisements are well stocked, ready for a heavy demand. Read the advertisements on page 6.

More Local Soldiers Have Arrived Home From Overseas Service

Party of Four War Heroes Reached Peterboro' This Morning---Number of Others Expected in the Near Future ---247th Battalion Notes --- To-day's Orders and General Military News.

A number of Peterborough soldiers have arrived home from overseas in the past couple of days, and still others are expected in a day or two, making a notable addition to the ranks of the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club.

Yesterday Pte. Alfred Glendenning, who went overseas as a member of the First Division, and was afterwards transferred to the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, reached the city. He was with the 21st Battalion when that unit took the Sugar Refinery at Courcelette on the Somme front, and was wounded in that action.

Corp. Geo. Lightheart, of 22 Rink street, arrived home this morning, invalided home as the result of wounds. Corp. Lightheart enlisted in Peterborough as a member of the 57th Regiment's quota to the 39th Battalion, and afterwards was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front.

Pte. Bruce Clarke, 633 Rogers street, who also went overseas with the 39th Battalion, and was transferred to the 26th Battalion at the front, also arrived home this morning. Pte. Clarke is very lame as the result of a rifle bullet through the foot.

Pte. Walter Harkness of the 93rd Battalion Band, has also arrived home from England.

Gunner Herb. Rush and Pte. W. Tealo are two other Peterborough soldiers expected at any time.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman of the 247 Battalion, is in Toronto to-day.

Major Campbell, Chief Recruiting Officer for No. 3 Military District, was in the city to-day on official business. He was accompanied by Lieut. Foreman of the Recruiting Staff.

One of Norwood's representatives overseas, Corp. Lloyd Duffield, who is in the hospital at Orpington, Eng., had the honour recently of having his picture taken with Princess Patricia of Connaught, in company with two other soldier patients of the institution. The Princess is shown as instructing them in handicraft. It is said she devotes every Thursday afternoon in teaching Canadians at Orpington hospital various kinds of needle-work and fancy work. The picture appeared in several prominent London papers, including the Daily Sketch and Illustrated News.

Mrs. F. B. Garlick, of Norwood, received word from the Militia Department a few days ago that her husband, who went overseas with the 93rd Batt., and who underwent an operation a few months ago for the removal of loose cartilage in one of his knees, had sailed for home and might be expected to arrive shortly.

St. Catharines, March 8.—A movement is in progress here to organize the men of St. Catharines and district who have volunteered their services in the present war, and who have, through no fault of their own, been rejected by medical officers. Next to returned men, the rejected are entitled, it is claimed, to first consideration for employment, etc. By organizing, their claims will be given strength.

Pte. Andrew Aulthouse, of Havelock, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, has received official notice of his discharge from the overseas forces. His discharge, it will be remembered, was due to poor eyesight caused by an attack of measles while in England.

Express Their Desire to Co-operate For the City's Advancement at Mayor's Banquet Last Night—Suggest Ideas That Should Assist in the Progress of Peterborough

WORK OF TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL

The members elected last evening to the Peterborough Industrial Association were Mr. J. J. Hartley and Mr. Joseph Begley. This completes the Executive committee of the Association, which is made up of the following members: Mayor J. J. Duffus, Mr. T. F. Matthews, Mr. W. H. Denham, Mr. J. J. Hartley, Mr. Joseph Begley, Mr. R. Denne and Mr. R. H. Turner.

The third of a series of informal banquets given by Mayor Duffus, was held last evening in Hooper's banquet hall. On this occasion the Mayor addressed a large body of workingmen of the city. Following the customary toast to the King, His Worship gave a concise and comprehensive resume of the civic administration and its many ramifications. As on previous occasions, the speaker enumerated a number of causes for the present tax rate of twenty-eight mills. Chief among them was the debenture debt of the city. It will be a number of years before sufficient debentures mature to make any appreciable difference in the tax rate. Included in the twenty-eight mill tax rate of last year was seven-tenths of a mill for garbage collection and one mill for Provincial war tax. Added to last year's rate will be a debenture debt of sixty thousand dollars for the Patriotic Fund and other expenditures, which circumstances may demand, such as the sewage disposal plant, and a new overhead bridge over Hunter street.

Cooperation Wanted.

Mayor Duffus asked the workingmen of the city to cooperate with the civic administration in making this a bigger and better city to live in. Industrial development was the keynote of the city's success, and in this connection every man is asked to assist. The speaker lamented the passing of such well-known and influential personalities as the late Senator Cox and the late Hon. J. R. Stratton, Peterborough. Not possessing such outstanding figures as the men referred to, made it all the more important and necessary that each citizen should make a united effort to advance the interests of the city.

Radial Railways.

The speaker hoped to see the day when the city would acquire the street railway and would extend it its northern limits to Stoney Lake, and its southern limits to Lake Ontario. The present street railway can be acquired any time the city is ready to assume the responsibility. It has been decided to defer the purchase of the railway until additional extensions are made by the Provincial Government. Arrangements have been made to have Sir Adam Beck visit the city at some future date, and give a first-hand report of the local electrical interests which, some months ago, were acquired by the Ontario Power Commission. The Duke of Devonshire has arranged to visit Peterborough in the spring and in this connection, Mayor Duffus urged all present to

"INTOLERANCE" AT THE GRAND

The Greatest Film Production the World Has Yet Seen

Theatre goers will be glad to learn that the wonderful photo play production "Intolerance" is to appear at the Grand Opera House for three days, matinee and evening. It is D. W. Griffith's first and only production since the Birth of a Nation.

To say that "Intolerance" far surpasses Mr. Griffith's former masterpiece, is but to repeat the unanimous opinion of the press all over the country. Certainly as a spectacle it is without exception the most marvelous production of stage or screen. In it Mr. Griffith has traced a universal theme through various periods of the world's history, ancient, sacred, mediaeval and modern times being utilized. The scenes of the four distinct stories follow one another in rapid succession. There is no attempt at historical sequence, but the events are shown as they might flash across the mind in an effort to parallel the life of the different ages. "Intolerance" shows that through all the ages the same passions, the same joy and the same sorrows pass, observed and Mr. Griffith symbolizes them by the cradle, endlessly rocking. Through it all the events shown are caused by the intolerance of man.

FRIDAY, MARCH 9, 1917

WATCHFUL WAITING.

Sir William Hearst, conductor of the government "trailer," thinks Mr. iLeader Rowell, on the trolley ahead is going too fast, and he has jammed down the brakes on the trailer so hard that the trolley is brought up sharp. Mr. Rowell introduced a bill to give women the right to get into doubtful company—became members of the Legislature. Mr. Hearst moved the six months hoist, equivalent to killing the bill outright. The premier opposes granting women the right to sit in the Legislature. It's only a logical sequence of giving women the vote. It would be taking what Sir John called "too — sharp a curve," for the premier to adopt offhand Mr. Rowell's motion. He will probably wait a while, and when he thinks the time is opportune he will claim paternity of women legislators, and try to take credit for originating the idea, as he has done in the matter of prohibition and women suffrage. Give Sir William time, and he will blossom out as the only original champion of woman's right to sit in the Legislature. Like President Wilson he will do a little watchful waiting, and bide his time and opportunity.

HIS GREATEST WORK.

The death of Mr. F. S. Spence, in Toronto, at the age of 67 years, represents the removal of a large factor in the public life of Toronto, and the Province, and the Dominion. He has many achievements to his credit. For the past thirty-five years he has been prominent in temeprance and moral reform movements, and it must have been some satisfaction to him to see the concrete result of his labours in great part in this field, in the Ontario Temperance Act, one big stride towards the Dominion-wide prohibition he advocated. He was an influence in municipal life in Toronto, and though he is cheifly regarded as a "temperance worker and a municipal expert," the chief distinction of his career consists in the fact that he was the father or one of the most prominent authors of the Ontario Hydro-Electric system, which he has lived to see an established provincial policy and factor in industrial and other advance, though it is yet in its infancy of application and reach.

In 1902, inspired by the desire of the Toronto Board of Trade to secure power from Niagara Falls, under the city's control, a meeting of the manufacturers of mid-western Ontario was held at Kitchener, then known as Berlin, at which were present representatives from that place, Toronto, Galt, Guelph and surrounding towns, to confer in regard to securing power for municipal purposes. The chief speaker was F. S. Spence, the late Alderman, and the gist of his suggestion at the time, as recorded in the history of the Hydro-Electric movement, compiled and published by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, is thus given:

"Mr. Spence suggested that the municipalities should ask for the appointment of a government commission which would have the power to arrange for the transmission of electricity to the various municipalities desiring it. This commission to issue its own bonds in payment of transmission lines, which bonds would be covered by bonds of the municipalities interested. Under this scheme the government through a commission, would undertake the transmission to the municipalities desiring power, the latter guaranteeing by their bonds the cost and selling it in turn to all manufacturers at an even rate, preventing in this way the power from falling into the hands of any monopoly, and in this way securing to the industries of this province the advantage of a cheap electrical power."

Thus a dozen years ago, the late Mr. Spence foresaw the benefits of the Hydro idea and led in advocating it and in giving the impulse to the application of virtually the principles that are the essence of the Hydro movement today—the supremacy of municipal interest and control in that interest, and absolute freedom from the political element in its application and development. The success of the Hydro-Electric movement has been due to the fact that it has been by great effort kept non-political in character, and has had the support of the public, both Liberal and Conservative, and of the press, both Liberal and Conservative, and its future success depends upon its being kept free from party control and overlordship of any government, of whatever party it may be composed.

The Hydro-Electric might have been brought to its present position by other originating influences than the late Mr. Spence, but he was fortunate to have been the man of the hour twelve years ago, and far-seeing enough to advocate and give impulse to the operation of the principles upon which the Hydro rests to-day.

SWALLOWED THEIR RECORD.

Some journalistic and other critics are rather unfairly hard upon Sir William Hearst and the Hearst Government. They load them with reproaches over the fact that they have stolen the thunder of the Opposition, in adapting great policies, such as prohibition and woman suffrage, after opposing them in parliament for years. This is all very true, but the leader of the government and his followers deserve credit rather than blame. They saw the error of their ways, or saw that they were risking popular condemnation for opposing what the people saw after effective education by the opposition, were matters of right, and in the public interest.

Sir William Hearst and his government have both Scriptural justification and high human precedent for their course. Commendation came to the "son" of the New Testament parable, who was commanded by his father,—"Son, go work in my vineyard, and he answered and said, 'I will not,' but afterwards he repented and went." In regard to prohibition and woman suffrage, and Hydro radials, and even Hydro itself, which in its municipal sense hadn't a very deep hold on their affections, the government have experienced a change of heart, or at least of attitude [illegible] steadily antagonizing from time to time and for years these measures they have been "grappled to their hearts with hooks of steel."

This, however, should not subject them to the charge of inconsistency. They have commendably imitated the "son" of the parable, and after repeated refusal, have repented, and with the traditional zeal of perverts have appropriated and enacted policies they have long antagonized.

Sir William Hearst and his government have acted not only on the Scriptural precedent but on that of the greatest man their party ever produced. Sir John Macdonald antagonized in the beginning the confederation principle propagated by one of Canada's greatest Liberals. On March 14th, 1864, Hon. George Brown moved the appointment of a select committee to report upon the constitutional difficulties between Upper and Lower Canada—Ontario and Quebec—that had produced a political deadlock. The committee reported in favour of the adoption of a federal system—the starting point and essential principle of confederation. Sir John Macdonald, then plain "John A.," was one of two others of the then Assembly, who voted against the finding of the committee—against the principle of Confederation. But the idea "caught on," and Sir John, who was quick to see the trend of popular opinion, sacrificed his preference for a legislative instead of a federal union, became a convert and warmly espoused the federation principle and helped largely to bring it into effect, and did splendid service in making Confederation a success. He is incorrectly hailed as the father of Confederation. He was not that; he was simply a convert to its principles.

In the maentime, Sir William Hearst and his government are hailed as fathers of prohibition and woman suffrage, whereas they are only eleventh-hour converts, who repented to save their political skins, swallowed their record, and did the right thing because it paid—politically..

Profit in Potatoes Facts versus Sneers

The potato pach plan is offensive to the cynic. The idea of instituting a public movement which, without any taint of charity for the laborer of independent spirit, would materially alleviate the pressure of an exorbitant living cost strikes a certain type of observer as chimerical and silly. Figures are quoted and misquoted to prove that the project is impracticable, chiefly because the ground to be tilled is split up into small plots.

The Michigan Farmer hardly could be classified as a visionary publication, and in a recent number it prints the results of potato club contests by which the boys and the girls of upper peninsula counties are encouraged in the raising of one of the state's most important products. We read that Verner Felt, the winner in Marquette county, raised 402.0 bushels per acre. The average size of the contestants' plots was about one-fifth of an acre; the average profit, $30.13.

These are not estimates or theoretical figures, but are taken from actual experience. The plots are not greatly larger than the average city lot. Seed was purchased individually. The margin of profit certainly would not be less in Detroit. Out of 40 plots, two did not pay expenses.

Common sense declares the potato patch system to be a sound measure of relief. These authentic figures merely vindicate the plan. —Detroit News.

How The Press Helps To The Understanding Of The Submarine Outrage

At the very moment when the Laconia was torpedoed, a group of men in the smoking room of the ship were discussing the chances that such a deed would be attempted. One of them was Floyd Gibbons, an American journalist, going to London to represent the Chicago Tribune.

Gibbons, who was saved, has written a remarkable story of his experience, remarkable for the abundance of detail in a plain, simple account of what happens when the Germans attempt wholesale murder at sea and Death suddenly throws a black shadow over the immediate outlook of a happy company of travellers. As a faithful description of one of the memorable experiences of the Kaiser's war, the story of Gibbons may possibly be quoted in some of the longer historical accounts of these memorable years.

The trained newspaper correspondent instinctively becomes a spectator rather than an actor when the prosiac drama of everyday life changes, however swiftly, to sensational melodrama or tragedy. If he is a true journalist, his instincts steel him against emotional reactions. He becomes a representative of the millions of readers of the press to whom every passing event is relatively unimportant, however profoundly impresive the experience may be to those immediately concerned in it. Therefore, he experiences a certain sense of aloofness, which manifests itself at times in an astonishing sangfroid. His feeling of relationship with the giant public gives him greater confidence and a stronger incentive to save his life. The public is calling to him for an account of his stewardship. He must tell what has happened.

Gibbons put millions of readers of the press on the liner Laconia. They talked in that smoking room. They started and shuddered when stabbed sharply with a realization of intangible peril. They raced for life-belts. They turned at the boats. They heard the cries, saw the grim sights, and felt the lash of the hungry seas. They watched the ship go down, and trembled as the German ruffians came to secure the name of his victim. They passed through the harrowing suspense and privation of groping about at night in an open boat, and they felt the warm contact with civilization again as the rescue ship came up—the joyful shout of greeting, the sharp command to approach, and the friendly, tattooed arms of those weather-beaten British sailors, helping the shivering survivors to safety.

And, by the way, how often in recent years has the Great Navy come on an errand of mercy in answer to prayer!

Press Correspondent Gibbons breathes no word of hate against the pirates in his lengthy account of the loss of the Laconia. We rejoice that he does not. He puts the great public through the harrowing experience, and he rests his case against the assailants on the simple facts. Where Huns are concerned, what argument can add to the inexorable logic of the naked truth?

The world's understanding of submarine fiendishness is improved now that pure deviltry and pure journalism have come together at sea and both have run true to form.—Ottawa Journal.

The Government And Women As Members Of The Legislature

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, March 8—Grave doubts have arisen as to the sincerity of the Ontario government in granting the votes to women under pressure of the Liberals, when, upon the very first occasion when a bill affecting the interests of women came before the legislature not only did they vote it down but showed themselves rather half-hearted on the whole question of Woman Suffrage.

The bill was Mr. Rowell's proposal to allaw women to sit in the legislature and the government rejected the bill without any real argument. Sir William in a speech which even his friends would admit to be weak, said that Mr. Rowell was trying to curry favour with the women by proposing this bill and in the same breath he said that the bill was unpopular and that there was no demand for it from the women of the province—arguments which as Mr. aJck Elliott pointed out flatly contradicted each other.

Some of the comments by women on the rejection of the Rowell bill are as follows:—"The Premier thinks we are all mutts."—"He's so illogical."—"He likes to keep us busy."—"He'll find us busy enough when it comes to election time."—"I think he's foolish, you know."—"He'll lose votes."—"Of course he will."

Mr. Rowell showed that in Australia and in all the western provinces of Canada the granting of the vote to women was accompanied at the same time by the right to sit in the legislature, and that his bill was not a radical constitutional departure, but only ere justice to the women of Ontario.

"THIRTY PIECES OF SILVER."

Indignant New Yorkers Would Reward Senator with Judas' Price.

NEW YORK, March 7.—At a patriotic mass-meeting in Carnegie Hall mention of the twelve United States Senators who caused the defeat of the Armed Ship bill was jeered and hissed, while cries of "Traitor," "Hang them," rang through the hall. The suggestion of Jas. M. Beck that "thirty pieces of silver" should be sent to Senator Wm. J. Stone, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and leader of the filibusterers, met with prolonged cheering. Resolutions were passed condemning the actions of the twelve senators. One speaker, who adopted a conciliatory manner, was told to "Sit down, Von Bernstorff". The meeting was exceedingly stormy.

WORKINGMEN APPLAUD A GREATER PETERBORO'

make a united effort to make the city as presentable as possible for the occasion.

Mr. J. J. Hartley

As President of the Trades and Labour Council, Mr. J. J. Hartley thanked the Mayor for his recognition of the working men of Peterborough in inviting them to be present at the luncheon. The Mayor had invited all classes and conditions of men, and it was befitting that the best had been left until the last. The members of the Trades and Labour Council were first of all intelligent and prudent men who were interested not only in organized labour, but also in unorganized labour, and particularly were they anxious for the welfare of the whole city. Their motto was fair play and a good chance for every workman.

Not Opposed to Manufacturers.

Many persons seemed to have the idea, Mr. Hartley continued, that the Trades and Labour Council was opposed to the manufacturers. That was an erroneous opinion. The labour men desired the success of the manufacturers, and asked for themselves only a fair share of the manufacturer's profits.

Ten years ago wages were nearly as high as they are to-day, but the cost of living has, during that time, doubled, and, in some cases, trebled. Because the workingman asks for an increase in wages under such conditions there is a feeling that they are asking for someting outrageous.

"My sympathies have always been with the working man," said Mr. Hartley. "I stayed with the Union from the start, and I intend to remain with it to the end. I believe that a better-hearted class of men never trod the earth. No class spend their money more freely, and they ask only that they be given enough, to spend more."

Mr. Hartley believed that the man in public life should be prepared to expect criticism of his actions. If he has done right he has nothing to fear. The workingman did not like to see taxes going up, but if they have to go up no one was more willing than he to pay his share. Mr. Hartley said he had no fault to find with the Mayor since he had been raised to the head of the Council, but he cautioned him not to advocate too much under the present conditions. The workingman, as a producer, was a point elaborated by Mr. Hartley, showing that labour was all important in the progress of the country. It was also intelligent, and in fact, intelligence was an essential characteristic of the worker, as the fruits of his work bore ample testimony.

When railways receive increased rates they do not turn to their employees and give them increased wages. Many railway men, with salaries of $100 a day expect their employees to get along on $2.00 a day.

"I never had a workingman leave me because he didn't receive the highest wages. The workingman is worthy of his hire and is not hard to get along with."

The workingmen were becoming as well educated as any others, Mr. Hartley observed, and the day was coming when they would be occupying the highest places.

In conclusion, Mr. Hartley paid a compliment to Mr. Hooper for the quality and service of the dinner.

Mr. A. L. Bolwell.

As President of the Typographical Union and Vice-President of the Trades and Labour Council, Mr. Bolwell discussed the place of the newspaper in the community. The newspaper reflected the character of the town in which it was published. In Peterborough the publishers had recently made an increase in the wages to the members of the Union. The negotiations had been carried out in harmony and that spirit still prevailed. The proprietors had great ambitions that involved the welfare of the city, but they should receive the local support they deserved. The Peterborough papers were second to none. But they could not realize their hopes without the support of the merchants. A few of the merchants were extensive advertisers and these, Mr. Bolwell observed, were the most prosperous as the result of the advertising they carried on.

If citizens are buying certain goods from the big city mail order houses they were scarcely to blame for the goods were not advertised to the local people by the home merchants. There was a combine among some merchants not to use advertising, and if these concerns did not support the newspapers how could they expect the papers to support them? And yet, Mr. Bolwell said, the newspapers do support them. He had seen goods piled at the stations coming into the city. This was largely due to the fact that the merchants did not value the local papers and their advertising powers. If printing and other work that is sent to outside shops were kept at home it would mean, perhaps, that fifty more printers would be engaged here. The money would be kept here and the merchants and the city as a whole would directly benefit therefrom.

Mr. Wm. Stevens.

"I know of no city in the country that presents better opportunities and possibilities for manufacturers than Peterborough," said Mr. Will Stevens, secretary of the Trades and Labour Council. "It stands second to none and our motto should be Peterborough first, last and all the time."

It was the bunden duty of every workingman to try to build up the city. They had contributed their share, but they could put forth renewed efforts. Mr. Stevens said he had occasion to communicate often as Secretary of the Labour Council, with the city officials, and he wished to acknowledge the courtesy he had invariably received. He wished that every workingman was organized. They desired to keep the Mayor the Aldermen and the city officials in a straight line, and were, thereby working for the best interests of the city. Mr. Stevens dwelt upon the importance of the completion of the Canal and though the war was presenting a heavy demand this was one public work that should not be left in abeyance.

Mr. Joseph Crowe.

In his introductory remarks, Mr. Crowe indicated that as a former alderman, he had been initiated to all the workings of the Aldermanic circle. He knew that although an Alderman might begin with a programme of work he hoped to accomplish he soon realized that he was only one member of the Board, and that his powers were limited. No ratepayer gives the city's welfare more thought than the workingman.

"We want industries brought here" Mr. Crowe said, "and we want to help. The workingmen of Peterborough have much to be thankful for when they consider other places that have not the privileges we enjoy. We want the public money spent judiciously. The workingman will not grumble if he knows he is getting good returns for his money."

Mr. Crowe remarked that other cities in the Province were reducing their police forces and said he felt that Peterborough might follow the same line. The police had not the hotels and liquor traffic to contend with. "I don't wish to criticise the men. They earn all they get, but they are all big men and could earn perhaps more in other spheres of life. To be a valuable asset to the community a man should be a producer."

Following this point, Mr. Crowe paid a tribute to the citizen who raises a family of five or six children whom he has to feed, clothe and educate that they may assume a place in society. And yet this man is taxed the same as he who has no family. He knew of men who were doing nothing toward the war, not even contributing a sock, by way of an example of the smallest contribution. There should be some equalization of the taxes, Mr. Crowe remarked, but added that he was aware that this was beyond the scope of the Council. "We can use our votes to bring matters to a better shape," he added. In conclusion, he referred to the recent provision of the Legislature that gave municipalities the power to establish coal and wood yards. Facilities of that nature should attract people to the city.

Mr. G. L. Myland.

Mr. Myland said he had recently met a postman loaded with parcels and upon inquiring, learned that 4,500 catalogues from a Toronto store had been received at the post office for local distribution. It was a shame that these catalogues should be allowed to come into the city, but it was more shameful that the money was going out.

Mr. Arthur Meyers.

Get out and do things first, was Mr. Atrhur Meyers' advice to the City Council, in regard to advertising Peterborough. Other towns in the Province usually, do things first and this city adopts them afterwards. He threw out the idea of a combined police force and fire department. The men might be gradually trained in the duty of both departments. It would increase the strength of the police force, likewise of the fire department and would reduce the aggregate number of employees under the present system.

Mr. Harry Gainey.

Mr. Gainey recommended to the other wards of the city, the idea represented by the East Ward Ratepayrs' Association. With the Trades and Labour Council as a central body and ward associations throughout the city, public questions would be more completely understood, and the Council and citizens would see things in a clearer light. Mr. Gainey urged the provision of a street railway to Ashburnham. Regarding the high cost of living he added that there was no blame attaching to the barbers. Although in most other towns in Ontario barbershop prices had advanced, in Peterborough there had been no increase.

Mr. J. A. Sharpe.

Take the embargo off the local market and make it free, suggested Mr. J. A. Sharpe. It should bring more farmers into the city and it might make farm produce cheaper. It would also provide a position for a returned soldier.

Mr. B. M. Fredericks.

Mr. Fredericks spoke of the utility of radial railways. He also said that merchants should set an example to the public by spending their money in Peterborough.

Mr. R. Snelgrove.

An idea proposed by Mr. Snelgrove suggested that an effort be made to locate a canning industry in Peterborough. Mr. Sam Nesbitt, M. P. for East Northumberland, and President of the Canners' Association, might be approached by the City Clerk to that end.

Mr. W. A. Davis.

Mr. Davis supported the greater production movement and spoke of its success in England. He thanked the Mayor for his offer of eight lots and hoped that other citizens with vacant lots would follow that example. The Trades and Labour Council would be glad to cooperate.

Mr. Joseph Begley

Mr. Begley said that the Trades and Labour Council would do their share in promoting the welfare of the city. The Mayor and Council could not do everything single-handed. "We've got the men here, and we should have the best town in Canada."

Mr. H. Evans.

Street Commissioner Evans thought it would be a good idea if citizens were required to widen the clearance made by the snow plow.

Mr. Wm. Hartley made a plea for a street railway extension to Auburn.

Mr. E. Henslev referred to Mr. Vincent Eastwood's statement of the need of technical schools, which he heartily endorsed. The workingmen were interested in this matter.

"If all the suggestions made here are put into effect we should have a dandy town," said Mr. Tom Hendry, who added that the meeting had removed a misconception he had held of the Trades and Labour Council.

Mr. George Ahearn, Mr. Tom Bacon, Mr. George Savigny and Mr. Albert Duncan spoke briefly of the matters that had been suggested.

Mr. Dan Wires urged a street railway service for the district knwon as "Smith town."

Mr. Herb Frost suggested an effort to get the Shovel and Tool factory under operation again.

Mr. Jos. Collins supported the idea of street railway extensions.

Ald. Dobbin and City Clerk Armstrong were the concluding speakers. Their remarks covered, in effect, the information they gave at the two previous dinners.

The banquet was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Guests.

Those present were: Mayor Duffus, Messrs. J. J. Hartley, A. J. Bolwell, W. Stevens, Thos. Bell, W. Hartley, T. Hendry, S. Parkes, J. F. Collins, H. Sherwood, J. A. Sharpe, A. Meyer, J. Begley, J. "Do You Know"

That in the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris, in the land of Mesopotamia, where the British and the Turks are now fighting, is the cradle of civilization?

That the greatest cities of antiquity, Babylon and Nineveh were there situated?

That Babylon was encircled with walls 300 feet high, built broad enough for the passing of chariots abrest and that these massive walls were rebuilt in replica for the filming of D.W. Griffith's mighty spectacle "INTOLERANCE," or Love's Struggle Throughout the Ages?

That recent excavations have brought to light the sun-baked cylinder of Nabonidus and of Cyrus, which describe the treachery of the priests of Bel?

That through this, the greatest treason of all history, a civilization of countless ages was destroyed and a universal written language (the cuneiform) soon became an unknown cipher on the face of the earth?

That one set in "INTOLERANCE" that of the banquet hall of Belshazzar, in the last act, cost a quarter of a million dollars; that the cups used in the banquet were of solid silver, set with real stones?

That Babylon was the mother of astronomy, arithmetic, the arts, the alphabet, and that the Chaldean priests divided the hour into sixty minutes?

That Babylon, the magnificent, maintained post roads, a regular postal delivery, sewerage systems, banking houses, loan brokers, a system of mortgages, and gave to her people the best of protection through her laws?

That the use of electricity was probably known to the Babylonians?

That to model one of the gigantic elephants seen in the last act took a mound of clay 60 feet in height and 30 feet in diameter at the base? This is said to be the largest mound of clay ever used by a sculptor for one statue.

The Canadian Egg To Be Protected

The Canadian Produce Association Present Resolution to the Government

Mr. W. Scott of the W. Scott Company, Limited, attended a meeting of the Canadian Produce Association recently in Montreal, at which the following resolution was drafted to be presented to the government:

We, the Canadian Produce Association in convention assembled in Montreal this day, after careful consideration based upon past experience present for your earnest and immediate consideration the following resolution which in our opinion will establish the egg industry of Canada on a sound basis and insure for the product a recognised place in the markets of the world.

Whereas, the time has now arrived when Canada is producing a surplus of eggs in excess of its own consumption, and

Whereas, prices paid producers in future, will be largely governed by the price at which the export product can be sold.

Whereas, the present is a particularly opportune time to retain and improve our market as already established in Great Britain.

Whereas, in consideration of the keen competition for this market that will ensue after the war, with countries such as Holland, Denmark and Russia, it is of the utmost importance to the industry that the Canadian eggs retain their favorable reputation on the British market, for quality and dependability as to grading.

Whereas, our export trade in the past has seriously suffered from lack of standardisation;

Whereas, the loss to the egg producers of Canada last year represented millions of dollars because of the marketing of bad eggs and eggs of inferior quality, therefore:

Be it resolved, that the Honorable, the Minister of Agriculture, be seriously urged to immediately have suitable legislation enacted to provide and legalise standards for all Canadian eggs, and to provide such inspection as may be necessary to enforce such legislation and to issue government certificates if required, and further—

That a deputation from this associations to provide against the sale of eggs, unfit for food, making due allowance for reasonable deterioration as provided in standards accepted, and further—

That a deputation from association be appointed to interview and present this resolution to the Honorable the Minister of Agriculture, and request that favorable consideration be given and also that the necessary legislation be enacted during this present session of Parliament.

No More Smoking Slogan of Kansas

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The right living leaders of Kansas, having put down liquor in the least routine sense through 1,500 laws and amendments, have now turned their attention to the subject of tobacco. Popular opinion, which is none too popular in Kansas, makes the death penalty impossible for smokers, but, aside from that, the Kansas Legislature intends to do every little thing it can to make a quiet smoke a social outrage.
